The immense building was entirely demolished, and nearly every business house in the village was damaged. One man was killed and several were badly injured. The fire is supposed to have originated from sparks of an engine falling in the flour dust. The loss is estimated at over $1,000,000.

DIED.

BEAM—It was my sad privilege to bury on March 26th the infant son of Rev. and Sister J. A. Beam. God loaned this little bud and treasure to our brother and sister for only twelve short days, and then he transplanted it from this cold and impure world to the beautiful courts of heaven. Thus on the night of March 25th the angels bore little Royal to God and his sainted little brother.

May God pour into the bruised hearts the healing balm. G. T. WATKINS.

Roxboro, N. C., March 28, 1893.

HOLLOMON—Sister Barsha E. Hollomon, wife of deacon Kindred Hollomon, was born Nov. 11, 1845, and died March 23, 1893. At the age of thirteen she professed faith in Christ and was baptized by Elder B. B. Williams into the fellowship of Ahoskie Baptist church, of which she remained a faithful member until the day of her death. In her death the church has lost one of its best members, and its pastor one of his truest friends, but our loss is her gain. She leaves a husband, eight children and a host of sorrowing friends. She rests from her labors.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wakes to weep."

BRYANT—Mrs. Pattie Bryant, wife of W. H. Bryant, passed away to the eternal rest on the 8th of Feb., 1893, at the early age of twenty-three years. She was brought to the life of trust in Christ and baptized when fourteen years of age, and has since been a consistent and much esteemed member of Sandy Run church, Bertie county. She was the first member of the Ladies' Aid Society of Sandy Run, who has been removed by death. She greatly endeared herself by her bright spirit and Christian dutifulness and goodness. It was after childbirth God saw fit to take her suddenly to himself, leaving her young husband inconsolable, and a wide circle of relatives and friends stricken with grief. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." A. C.

Tributes of Respect.

Mrs. Mary F. Tucker died Feb. 5th, 1893, aged fifty-seven years.

Sister Tucker had been a member of the Baptist church forty-five years. Two years ago she joined Rock Spring church, where she served her Master faithfully, and was untiring in her efforts to build up the Sunday-school cause; therefore be it Resolved 1. That in the death of our sister the church has sustained a great loss in her many deeds of kindness and liberality and devotion to the truth.

2. That we will cherish the memory of our sister by imitating her virtues, her patience, her love to God, her church and the Sabbath-school.

3. That we do sincerely sympathize with her husband and friends, and that we meekly bow in submission to the will of him who has said, "He that is faithful to the end shall be saved."

5. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our church book, one given the husband, and one sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

Dr. Boykin's Worm Killer.

"The best selling Vermifuge in the market." Recipe furnished to any regular physician when requested.

We have never asked for a certificate. We have some of the strongest ever given—all sent without solicitation. Read a few only of the many evidences of its great merit:

LA GRANGE, N. C., July 1887.

Mr. J. P. Joyner:—I gave my child one dose of Boykin's "Worm Killer," purchased of you. It brought 366 worms. I consider it the best worm medicine made. Respectfully, J. W. THOMAS.

Messrs. I. M. & B. F. Powell, prominent merchants in Columbus county, N. C., wrote us in July, 1887 that "Rev. T. C. Floyd gave his child one dose of Boykin's "Worm Killer," and the result was 307 worms."

Mr. W. J. Davis of Ridgeway, S. C., says: "I have quite a demand for your "Worm Killer." It is the best Vermifuge I get."

Dr. R. H. Edmunds, a well known physician and farmer, writes under date of Ridgeway, S. C., May 26th, 1884, "that a negro girl 10 years old, near him, took two or three doses of the 'Worm Killer,' and passed 306 worms."

Price: 25c. per Bottle. Take no other.

Immortality.

JOHN 11: 25, 26.

Sweet hope to mortals given!
Sweet promise all divine!
The Lord of earth and heaven
Bids light through darkness shine.
Joyful our heart receiveth
The solace he doth give:—
"He that on me believeth,
Though dead, he yet shall live."

This hope shall fail us never,
We rest upon his word,
Unchanged to-day, forever,
The love of Christ, our Lord.
We list the voice that cometh,
All-glorious from on high:
"Who liveth and believeth
On me, shall never die."

M. H. F.

Courage.

Stand but your ground, your ghostly foes will fly—
Hell trembles at a heaven-directed eye;
Choose rather to defend than to assail—
Self-confidence will in the conflict fail.
When you are challenged you may dangers meet—
True courage is a fixed, not sudden, heat;
Is always humble, lives in self-distrust,
And will itself into no danger thrust.
Devote yourself to God, and you will find
God fights the battles of a will resigned.
Love Jesus! love will no base fear endure—
Love Jesus! and of conquest rest secure.

Tests of Success.

Mr. John A. Lee, editor of Interstate Grocer and author of "The Successful Man," in a recent address to young men, gives some tests of success. We copy from The Inland the following extract:

"Seest thou a man diligent in his business, he shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men."

It matters not whether the man is a prince or a peasant, a proprietor, a cashier, a salesman, an office boy, a laborer, a mechanic or a porter, if he is diligent, he shall not be judged by ordinary standards. There is your standard for the method of success. But the grand standard for the measurement of success in life, and the greatest of all, is taken from the same inspired source, and it reads:

"Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, if there be any praise, think on these things."

The standard of success is by these inspired utterances emphatically and clearly defined, and none need mistake the degree of success attained by the "Successful Man" if they will apply these measurements. And after all does not the world really and truly use these standards? The man who has acquired wealth in life and whose conscience begins to hurt him after he has done so, likes to have his fame and his alleged success spoken and written about; otherwise his achievements would not only be unsatisfactory to himself, but barren of that publicity of distinction which he has longed for. He, therefore, begins to make restitution by giving large sums to charitable works and eulogistical items to the newspapers. But the world values his success justly, and though his efforts may do great good and relieve his conscience, they will not change the opinion of the public. And yet the acquisition of wealth is commendable, and when honestly acquired and properly used, it is most powerful for good. It will feed the starving, clothe the naked, warm the freezing, cool the burning lips of the fever stricken, relieve the oppressed, break the chains of slavery and crush the power of vice. It will take unprotected and homeless children from the street and place them where they will be trained to be useful men and women and a blessing to the world, instead of abominations to society and a burden upon the all pervading mercy of God. A man can follow the dictates of a pure conscience and yet acquire wealth, for, "Seest thou a man diligent in business, he shall stand before kings." In acquiring wealth honestly by methods which have wronged and oppressed no one, it is usually the case that the diligent man has also gained the esteem and respect of his neighbors and fellows, and this is difficult to do except through upright methods.

Here is another test of success—the esteem and respect of those who know you and who meet you every day. It is said in the Bible that "A prophet is not without honor save in his own country and in his own house." I will have to go into politics to find an antidote to that statement, and assert that "It is a poor politician who cannot carry his own precinct." I shall quote another modern saying which is weighted with truth and wisdom: "Tell me who are your associates, and I will tell you who and what you are."

Disraeli said, "The secret of success is constancy to purpose." Most of the "self-made" men have achieved success by constancy to purpose. They have determined upon the accomplishment of a certain purpose and have bent all their energies and efforts to that purpose, frequently achieving it to their detriment and the sacrifice of other acquirements which, being absent, render success vain.

A "self-made" man is sometimes improperly and unfortunately constructed. He has by intense concentration of thought and effort toward some purpose, it may have been the accumulation of money, the acquirement of an art, the mastery of a profession, achieved an apparent success; but in the end, his purpose being gained, his education, and his happiness sacrificed.

The dollar mark who spends his life in the accumulation of money and the wealth frequently becomes a slave to his passion, and dies clutching at phantom pennies and bemoaning his inability to carry his hoarded wealth with him beyond the grave. It is said that Alexander wept because there were no other worlds to conquer, which is a parallel ambition to that of the miser, the effort being applied in a more destructive and cruel way; and it is also said that this same Alexander died the death of a bachanalian, having conquered all the world except his own passions and vicious predispositions.

Unnecessary Steps.

"I feel vexed," said Mrs. M—— the other day, "when I think how many extra steps I have taken in fifteen years, all owing to one inoffensive chair." Asking for explanations, she said that in stepping out of her dining-room into the kitchen before entering the pantry she walked around a chair that stood with its back to the wall.

One day it occurred to her that if she placed the chair aside it would save her several steps, and she was surprised to find how much easier it was to do her work. It did not take very long to walk around a chair, but she began to calculate. Perhaps on an average she had gone over that same ground eight times at each meal. That would be twenty-four times in one day. It required two extra steps each time, making 168 steps in one week; 8,736 steps in one year; in fifteen years, 131,040 extra steps that might have been avoided without inconvenience to anybody.

She was a delicate woman, whose work wearied her not a little, and after this mathematical problem it is not strange that she seized that innocent chair by the back and assigned it to a new place with remarkable alacrity.

Doubtless many of us have read about the man who, being at loss to decide which one of three sisters he should marry, laid a broom upon the floor where they would necessarily pass in performing household duties. The eldest walked around it, the second stepped over it, but the youngest picked it up and and hung it upon its accustomed nail.

It is needless to say that upon her the choice fell, and we trust that she was happy forever after.

Many of us who are pretty good housekeepers must plead guilty to thoughtlessness in taking unnecessary steps. In clearing the table many women carry a few dishes at a time into the kitchen, instead of placing them carefully in a large dish pan and making one trip instead of of six or eight.

We recall the case of a former domestic who took a hundred steps where fifty might have answered her purpose had her head assisted her hands and feet. A place for nothing and nothing in its place seemed to be her motto. Things were simply piled into the pantry and closets, and of course in a short time there was room for nothing. It being necessary for every housewife to economize in time and labor, the desired result is best obtained by bringing one's brains into active play.—Aunt Betsy.

"Dreadful Indigestion."

GREENSBORO, N. C., Oct. 23, 1892.

The Electropoise has been wonderful in its effects upon me, curing me of dreadful indigestion and insomnia and relieving me in a great degree of liver trouble. I am like a new person since I began its use. I wish all suffering humanity could be relieved as I have been by it. I would not be without mine for any consideration.

The Fragments.

An Italian artist, famous for his mosaic work, had a little servant, whose small body contained an artist-soul. One day the little boy went to his master and asked, "Please, master, may I have for my own the bits of glass you threw upon the floor?"

"Why, yes, boy," said the artist. "The bits are good for nothing. Do as you please with them."

Day after day, then, the child might have been seen studying the broken pieces and on the floor, laying some on one side, and throwing others away.

He was a faithful little servant, and so year after year went by and saw him still in the workshop.

One day his master entered a storeroom little used, and in looking around came upon a piece of work carefully hidden behind the rubbish. He brought it to the light, and to his surprise found it a noble work of art, nearly finished. He gazed at it in speechless amazement.

"What great artist can have hidden his work in my studio?" he cried.

At that moment the young servant entered the door. He stopped short on seeing his master, and when he saw the work in his hands a deep flush dyed his face.

"What is this?" cried the artist. "Tell me what great artist has hidden his masterpiece here?"

"O master!" faltered the astonished boy, "it is only my poor work. You know you said I might have the broken bits you threw away."

The child with an artist-soul had gathered up the fragments, and patiently, lovingly wrought them into a wonderful work of art.

Do you catch the hint, little people? Gather up the bits of time and opportunity lying all about, and patiently work out your life mosaic—a masterpiece by the grace of God.—Kind Words.

Peach Rot.

Rot is the greatest enemy of the peach in North Carolina. Peach rot is not caused by the curculio, as many suppose, but by a microscopic fungus known to botanists as monilia fructigena. The spores or germs of this fungus live through the winter in the rotten, dried-up fruit, on the trees and on the pits of the fruit which has fallen and rotted on the ground beneath the trees. To save the crop, the first thing to do is to thoroughly disinfect the orchard. Remove and burn all withered fruit still on the trees. Gather up and burn all the peach pits from beneath trees. These make excellent fuel. Next apply a liberal dressing of air slaked lime beneath and around the trees. Burn also all prunings. After the flowers have fallen, spray with improved bordeaux mixture:

Copper sulphate (bluestone)	1 pound.
Fresh lime	1 pound.
Molasses	1 pint.
Water	10 gallons.

Directions.—Dissolve the sulphate in a wooden, glass or earthenware vessel in five gallons of water. In another vessel slack the lime in one gallon of water. Rub lime until all lumps have been broken, then add the molasses, strain and stir slowly into the sulphate; never pour the sulphate upon the lime. When all ebullition has ceased dilute to ten gallons and use. One half ounce of Paris green or London purple may be added to ten gallons of this mixture. When the arsenite is used, it will be best to sprinkle it upon the lime before slaking the lime.

The above fungicide will at the same time protect the tree from "leaf curl," and if the arsenite is used, will protect against all gnawing insects. Not more than the prescribed quantity of arsenite should be used. —Gerald McCarthy. North Carolina Experiment Station.

Suggestions to a Guest.

Do not let the old saying, "the first day the man is a guest, the second a burden and the third a pest" be applied to you.

Endeavor to time your arrival so that it shall not interfere with your friends' meal hours, and arrange so that your baggage shall be delivered without being a care to them.

Do not outstay your welcome; do not even stay as long as you are asked to.

Allow your hostess time to attend to her household duties; observe the hour at which her husband is likely to return from business, and try to arrange so that he may find his wife alone at that time; you can easily find an excuse for absenting yourself.

Try to be unconscious of any friction which may exist in the household machinery, and by your punctuality do your best toward keeping it in regular motion. Be thoughtful of your hostess, affectionate to her children and courteous to her servants.

When leaving, bestow some little gift upon each of the servants, and send something to the cook; she is generally the one in the house whose work is most increased by the presence of visitors, and she is usually the one ignored in the general present giving which ensues as the guests prepare to depart.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Great Many Children—have been cured of scrofula and other skin diseases—as well as thousands of grown people, by taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Every disorder that can be reached through the blood, yields to its purifying qualities. Besides, it builds up wholesome flesh and strength; not merely fat like Cod liver oils. A scrofulous condition of the blood invites Catarrh, Bronchitis and Consumption. We're all exposed to the germs of [illegible] Malaria—yet only the weak ones suffer. When you're weak, tired out, and debilitated, or when pimples and blotches appear—heed the warning in time. The "Discovery" sets all the organs into healthy action—especially the liver, for that's the point of entrance for these germs, then if the blood is pure, they'll be thrown off. There's no risk. If it fails to benefit or cure in all cases of impure blood or inactive liver, your money is returned.

Letter from Bro. Chappell.

Dear Recorder:—We are now in the midst of the Chinese New Year holidays. Of all the feast days of the year—and there are many—this season of a week or more is perhaps the most important. Great preparations are made. For two or three weeks before, a casual observer could see there is something unusual on hand. The streets are all crowded, the trade in all sorts of commodities is brisker, the movements of the people are quicker, and seem to indicate that every one had some purpose in life—a conclusion you certainly would not reach by observing their actions on ordinary occasions. Every one who has no money is very anxious to get some, if not in one way, then in another.

Just before this season of the year, thefts and house-robberies are frequent. And there are good reasons for such eagerness on the part of all to be prepared for the advent of this season. For not only is this the season of festivity (and even the beggars try to observe the occasion and expect more generous alms of the public than usual); but it is the time when all outstanding accounts must be paid. This is so fixed and invariable a rule, that many insolvent debtors, without the hope of borrowing money, or of raising funds in some way so as to tide over New Year in business matters, and many others, who, because of extreme poverty, or unexpected calamity, find themselves unable to meet their obligations, commit suicide rather than face the shame and social ostracism which would result from their extremities. It is not so much from their sense of honesty, it seems to me—for they are willing enough to put off the payment of a debt at other times—but because the custom is so fixed and unalterable at this point, and because all earthly happiness, so far as social relationships and future prosperity are concerned, turn upon strict conformity to this custom—a law more potent than some of their laws of life and death: not one thinks of the possibility of escaping its demands. If conformity is not possible, then John Chinaman meekly bows his head to inexorable fate (for he is consistently a fatalist), and all regard him as an object of pious self-immolation to unseen and unknown powers. But usually some way is found to meet liabilities, for no Chinaman lives to himself, or ever dreamed that he did. He lives in his family, counting the dead generations of his ancestors before him, and the unborn line of generations after him, subject to such a complex fabric of interwoven conditions as makes the reason of a Western man reel on its throne—but these are all well known to himself, and he is, when once born into that family, so closely related to it through life and for all time that he personally thrives or not, lives or dies, with his family. So that personal debts involve not individuals alone, but whole families, and that New Year may be a prosperous and joyous one, every family will see to it that all such matters are satisfactorily adjusted. This is moreover the time for making arrangements for the ensuing year. Throughout, the transactions of this whole season are closely interwoven with their heathen worship of idols, whether of images or of ancestral tablets. The season is ushered in the night before New Year's day with such a popping of crackers as would make a Western boy's heart leap for joy. The use of these fireworks, including crackers, rockets, wheels, &c., is not only an expression of joy and exhilaration, but has an element of worship in it, too; for the evil spirits are supposed to be so terrified at the noise of the crackers that they flee, and probably because so much of this noise is kept up throughout the following days, these same evil spirits may be supposed to remain in such a state of fear and intimidation as to remain away till the New Year's festivities have been successfully celebrated, and the cycle of time prosperously begun its next annual revolution.

New Year's morn found me in Yangchow. The day was beautiful, and the streets were so quiet that one could but be reminded of a Sunday's calm in a Christian land—shops all closed, no business of any kind being done; for all buying of things to be used for several days had been previously done. This holiday rest from labor is to continue several days, for a Chinaman's idea of happiness is to have nothing to do and plenty to eat and drink. This New Year's morn seems unusually quiet because two thirds of the people are asleep, having spent nearly the whole night in idolatrous orgies, and nature demands a recompense. The few who are on the streets are all smiles and ready to congratulate everybody, for to-day the only salutation is "I congratulate you, and may you be rich," including not only a specific wish that you may have a "Happy New Year," but a general wish for your prosperity all through the year. All seemed especially well satisfied with themselves and the world; for every one seemed to be dressed in his very best, and he has plenty that's good to eat at home, or he thinks he has, which amounts to the same thing. I began to wonder why it was that every one should have nice clothes to wear on this day, when at least one-half of them could not show decent clothes the remaining 364 days of the year; so I asked the teacher who was walking with me how this was, and he explained that those who were too poor to have decent clothes on this day could levy on their friends who did, borrowing a hat of one, a pair of shoes of another, one garment here, and another there, until he had secured the full complement to make him look like all the rest, and he is happy. "Fine feathers ne'er can make fine birds," says the proverb, but it goes a long way towards making up what there is of a Chinaman in cold weather, especially on New Year's day. For if these clothes were subtracted from the general sum, the little left would be small, and you wouldn't want it, my friend. But do not be too sure you would want him plus his clothes. My ride back to Chinkiang was enjoyable. The beautiful spring-like day, combined with the festive attire of men and boats that strewed the canal side, conspired to make a scene really inspiring. A flowing tide and a favorable wind soon took us to our destination.

Books for Young Ministers.

In 1874, when I was about to enter upon my first pastorate, my father gave me a hundred dollars with which I was to purchase books. I examined many catalogues, and finally made out an order. I have lived to realize that much of the money I then spent was spent in ignorance. After nearly twenty years' experience, I am sure I could make a wiser investment than I then did. With the desire of aiding some young man just now about to begin his work, and lay in his supply of tools, I am penning these notes.

Foremost, I would advise against the purchase of all subscription books. In every case they are too costly, are not permanently valuable, and are made for sale more than for use. A young pastor, among his earliest lessons ought to learn to say "no" to book-agents. Having said it, stick to it.

As a rule, a young man cannot afford to buy books that are to be shelved and forever laid aside after a single reading. Books of reference that are standard works are the books he should first seek after. The others must come in afterwards according as he is able to get them. Having once secured a good and abundant supply of books of reference, he may then begin to fill his shelves with others—some for a single reading, some for ornament, and some for—well, just so that he can say he has them.

Which is the most valuable commentary on the New Testament for a young Baptist preacher? I think there are two sets of books to be named in the answer to this question. First comes the series called the "American Commentary on the New Testament," issued by the Philadelphia Publication Society, and written by American Baptist preachers. All the volumes are not of equal value, but, as a series, I have found none superior. Next, I would name the Pulpit Commentary, now being issued by A. D. F. Randolph & Co., of New York. These books, when all the volumes are published, will comprise a commentary on the entire Bible. So far, I have received forty-one volumes; the whole set will doubtless make up sixty volumes. They can be purchased by any responsible minister on the easiest terms from the publishers. In these books, the "Introduction" in each volume is quite full and satisfactory; the critical and exegetical portions are clear, pointed, and fully up in all points with the latest advances made in this sort of study; the homiletical departments are sometimes over full and burdened. However, while I have never been able to use a single outline given in the books, I have received much mental stimulus from reading what others have written. I am quite sure that for a commentary for practical use on the whole Bible, these books are the most useful that I have seen.

Olshausen's six volumes on the New Testament are good books. Some years ago, Dr. Hiden, now of Richmond, told me they were his favorite works, and I notice that even to this day he continually quotes and appeals to Olshausen in discussing New Testament matters. Dr. Olshausen only wrote the commentary through Thessalonians, his death ended his labors; but the work was carried to completion by Dr. Elrard and Wiesinger. The writers lean somewhat to rationalism, and some have said they were not sound. This depends upon what soundness is, and, forsooth, who is to judge, any way!

I have just received the twenty-one volumes of the "Preachers' Homiletic Commentary on the Old Testament," from Funk & Wagnalls, but am not yet prepared to give an opinion about the books.

Meyer's eleven large volumes I purchased for $22, simply because every one said he was "the prince of exegetes." May-be so. If any one wishes to take a stroll through the dry and rattling bones of the valley, or wishes to study the New Testament as a science, I commend to him Dr. Meyer's works. I am free to confess that I never consult him until I am forced to do so, and even then I am glad when the dry consultation has ended.

Ellicott—five volumes—with endless abbreviations, and ten thousand references to books found only in a plethoric episcopal library, is not much better to read than Meyer. But Dr. Broadus holds the volume on Galatians in the highest esteem.

Lange's series were all good books until better ones came on the market. They are very heavy and dull, and full of German philosophy. Being translations, too, makes the style less entertaining. The volume translated by Dr. Toy I have never examined except cursorily.

Matthew Henry's commentary is a great big sermon, with the Bible as a text. It is excellent for family and devotional reading; but I would not advise one to purchase it for his study, unless he is able to own many books that he will not use very often.

For good models of expository work, I am inclined to think the "Expositor's Bible," issued by Armstrong & Son, stands among the foremost. So far, thirty volumes, at $1 each, have come from the press, and many of them are full of charms and enchantment. It amazes one to see how the dry details of a book like Leviticus can be made to spring up before one into life and being. These books are worthy of study for many reasons, but for one especially, viz.: every preacher should study and learn the expository art. When once mastered, it adds greatly to one's power. A busy pastor, with a thousand cares and as many calls upon his time, is not able to study individual books of the Bible carefully, closely and critically, and at the same time carry on all his other work; but expository preaching will require this sort of work, and thus in preparing for the pulpit, he will soon acquire a wide acquaintance with the books of the Bible. The idea prevails with some that expository preaching requires less study, on the ground that a long text will furnish more material with less labor. I have seen a swallow in the afternoon, flying along near the surface of a lake, and dipping down now and then to get a mouthful of water. So also have I seen men pretending to preach expository sermons, who now and then "dipped down" and got a mouthful from the text. These disjointed and wandering discourses that go everywhere and get nowhere, can never be justly termed expository sermons. Hence, I say, preachers should acquire the art of expository preaching, and the "Expositors' Bible" will greatly help in this direction.

Other books ought to be mentioned, but I must leave them for another time.

Long and Short Pastorates.

Bro. Bailey:—This question has been put in the religious papers two or three times lately, but it receives but little comment. Whether or not the preachers and others are afraid to take hold of it, or it is too small a matter about which to give an opinion, I do not know. As I look at things, it is a very much-needed question, and should be so seriously considered by preachers and all. I know that it is considered to be more popular to maintain long pastorates. That is just why it is the wrong thing. And further, it tends to drift both people and pastor into almost irremediable ruts of bigotry and ignorance. And unless the pastor is a man of much originality and studiousness, the community will soon have his prayers and sermons all memorized. And directly they will conclude that they and their little preacher are about all the real orthodox people in the world, and what they and their little preacher do not know is not in the Book. The biggest fools in the world are those who have but few ideas, and are so sharp in them that you cannot teach them any more. This is the woful tendency of long pastorates.

People naturally and spiritually like a change of diet, unless they have had their judgments and tastes spoiled. We go to the Bible for examples of faith and practice, which is all right; but do we there find where the apostles, or Christ, either, sat down in one little town, or with one little settlement church, and held on like grim death for fifteen or twenty years? But, one says, they were missionaries. We grant that, and so are all of God's ministers missionaries. Jonah preached all that was necessary to great Nineveh in a short time. Christ and the apostles were frequently importuned to remain longer by brethren, but they answered them that they must needs go to other places. Don't you suppose that the people were as hard to indoctrinate then as now? The funny part of their preaching, or about their preaching, was, that they preached the gospel, preached Christism, and not socialism and policyism. If we undertake to tickle every one's fancy in a community, and learn, or try to learn, every one's little taste, and then hammer out little silver spoons to fit all of their mouths, it would take forty years to do that work, and more, too; and by the time we got all our spoons done, the Devil would have their mouths all squinched up and puckered round, until the last job of spoon-making would be more difficult than the first. God has but one spoon, and he fixed the best way. People can fix their mouths to it, or let it alone. This is all the Master designed for his purpose.

H. C. STANDRIDGE.

Motes and Beams.

Strange as it may seem, it is unquestionably true that the man with a beam in his own eye is usually the one that makes a business of pulling motes out of his brother's eye. The most censorious people in the world are those whose characters are fullest of faults. We content ourselves with simply stating the fact, and we leave our readers to work out the philosophy of it as they may see fit. The language of our Lord in dealing with these professional critics is imperative to the last limit: "First cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye." The prime business of every human being is to seek for completeness of his own character before God; and only in proportion as he secures this end is he competent to instruct, admonish, and rebuke others. Clear vision does not come, and cannot come, till the beam is removed from the eye. As long as this obstruction remains in place, it distorts every object upon which the eye rests. There is something almost ludicrous in the very thought of one's setting up as an expert occulist while his own sight is thus fearfully disordered and disturbed. It is like the quack doctor who went through a Western community peddling his "chill medicines," while he himself was shaking with alternate fits of fever and ague.

The true Christian, recognizing the force of his Master's words, will hold himself amenable to the highest standard of character and conduct; will not excuse himself for having been tolerant of any improvable personable deficiences; will strive to remove and put away all his sins, and to overcome all his infirmities; and, when he has done his utmost, will still feel how immeasurably he has fallen short of the Divine requirements. But while he judges himself severely, not to say harshly, he will be inclined to judge everybody else gently and kindly. In his own conflicts with the world, the flesh, and the Devil, he has learned how hard it is to walk uprightly before God, and he feels in his heart a tender pity for those of his brethren who at any point have failed to show the highest manhood and the most flawless virtue. If perchance he detects a mote in a brother's eye, he will not make an outcry over it, so that all the world may hear and run to see; nor will he try to gouge it out with rude and unskillful hand, in such a manner as to endanger the farther usefulness of the eye itself; but he will easily and graciously remove it, taking care to inflict the least possible pain.

There is nothing said of our Lord in all the New Testament more remarkable than this, that "He was touched with the feeling of our infirmities." The cynic smile was never on his lips, the cynic tone was never in his voice. He looked on men with infinite pity because "they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd." Are we like him? If so, we shall cultivate "above all things" that "fervent charity which covereth a multitude of sins;" and we shall not fall into the error of wasting on better people than ourselves the moral censorship which ought to be expended in bringing to perfection the virtue of Christianity in our own lives.—Selected.

What Can Replace the Gospel?

A multitude of men are bent on destroying Christianity. They wish to demolish the whole system and everything connected with it. Well, suppose they succeed? "Suppose," says Dr. E. Greenwald, "the Bible burned, the churches closed, the pulpit silenced, all Christian institutions of whatever kind overthrown, all Christian doctrines, Christian piety, Christian duty, Christian worship, Christian influence, Christian life, in public and private, in the church and in the family, by individuals and communities, to be wholly a thing of the past, and no trace of them permitted to remain anywhere in all the land. This would be the result if they should succeed in their insane crusade against Christianity. Where would we look for a better system than that which we would so wholly renounce? We have cut down this tree, where do we find another that bears better fruit? Let us look around and see what systems prevail in the world, and under whose control large numbers of the people are now living. Which would be selected in place of the Christianity renounced?"

Let the skeptic ponder this question. Let him look at heathenism, at Mohammedanism, at the dying superstitions of the eastern world, and let him ask the question, would he embrace any of these exploded absurdities? Let him look at atheism, a leafless, sapless tree, and inquire what a world would be without a creator, ruler or law; and then let him hesitate before he seeks to undermine a faith which has brought more joy, peace and brightness into the world than all the other religions that man has ever invented or embraced.—Faithful Witness.

One Stitch at a Time.

"What is the secret by which you do your work so beautifully?" The questioner held in her hand an exquisite piece of crochet work, wrought by the lady to whom the question was addressed.

"There is no secret about it," replied the lady; "I only make every stitch as perfect as I can, and am careful to put it exactly in the right place. There isn't one wrong or careless stitch in all that work. If I make a mistake, I ravel it out and correct it."

One perfect stitch at a time. So the marvelous fabrics of lace at fabulous prices are made. So the intricate and exquisite embroideries are wrought. So costly garments of men and women are put together. One perfect stitch at a time!

The noblest lives are lived—one moment at a time. No moments wasted; no moments carelessly spent; no moments viciously spent. Wrong stitches in crochet can be raveled out, and made right. But who can reverse the tide of time, and undo a wrong act and make it right?

Some unknown friend left a card on my desk, on which was printed this: "I shall pass through this world but once! Any good thing, therefore, that I can do, or any kindness that I can show to any human being, let me do it, now, in his name and for his sake! Let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again."

Is there a better secret than that for making the whole fabric of life perfect? "Any good thing that I can do;" that covers all our duty to God and to ourselves. "Any kindness that I can show to any human being;" that covers all our duty to our neighbor. Love to God and to our neighbor is the fulfilling of the law.

One stitch at a time! Sometimes we allow ourselves to become confused with the thought or feeling that we have a dozen things to do at once. But this is a mistake. We can do but one thing at a time, think one thing at a time, speak one word at a time, see one thing at a time. For every duty really required of us, we have time given in which to do it. We may pass rapidly from one task to another, we may construct machinery by which much of our work can be done simultaneously, and thus multiply our executive power; but to live two minutes at once, is something no mortal can do, any more than we can recall one act or one moment of the past.

"Let us then be up and doing, Heart within and God o'erhead."

—Christian Advocate.

Post Mortem Love.

I stood at his coffin, and then there were many tongues to speak his praise. There was not a breath of aspersion in the air. Men spoke of self-denials—of his work among the poor, and of his good qualities, of his quietness, his modesty, his humility, his pureness of heart, his faith and power. There were many who spoke indignantly of the charges that falsehood had forged against him in past years and the treatment he had received. There were enough kind things said during the two or three days that he lay in the coffin, and while the company stood around his grave, to have blessed him and made him happy all his fifty years, and to have thrown sweetness and joy about his soul during all his painful and weary journey. There was enough sunshine wasted about the black coffin and dark grave to have made his whole life path bright as clearest day. But his ears were closed then, and could not be thrilled by the grateful sounds. He never smelled the sweet flowers that were piled upon his coffin. The love blossomed out too late. The kindness came when the life could not receive its blessings.

But meanwhile there is a great host of weary men and women toiling through life toward the grave, who need cheering words and helpful ministries. The incense is gathering to scatter about their coffins; but why should it not be scattered in their paths to-day? The kind words are lying in men's hearts and trembling on their tongues, which will be spoken by and by when these weary ones are sleeping; but why should they not be spoken now, when they are needed so much, and when their accents would be so pleasing and grateful?—Exchange.

To the Point.

When professedly Christian people have time to chase up the vagaries and delusions of Lieut. Totten and other manipulators of millennium mathematical computations, it is a pretty good sign that they need to engage in some practical form of Christian service. If the end is coming this September, it will be well to crowd the interim with good works. It is more than likely that the lieutenant has made an error of some fifteen thousand years, or so, in one of his varied twists of the figures; but good works will always be in place, and will count mightily when born of faith.—Standard.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 12, 1893.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

"What Baptists Believe," by the late J. L. Burrows, will be given to every new subscriber to the BIBLICAL RECORDER who will pay $2.00 in advance for a years' subscription. We will also give the book to every old subscriber who will pay his subscription to date and a year in advance.

Think of it! Your denominational paper, the subscription price of which is $2.00, one year, and a neatly bound book of over a hundred pages, containing a clear and fair expression of what Baptists believe and practice, all for the price of the paper.

Remember, this offer is to new and old subscribers alike.

RELIGIOUS FANATICISM.

In glancing over the columns of a recent secular paper we saw an account of the recent attempt on the life of king Humbert of Italy by an Italian named Berardi. Knowing what we do about the state of things in Italy, we rather suspected, as soon as we began to read the account, that in all probability the attack upon the king was prompted by what may be called religious fanaticism. Sure enough, in reading further we found that Berardi himself stated that he intended to "insult the king because he refused to be reconciled to the Pope." Concerning Berardi, it is stated that some time before the year 1882 he was committed to prison for murder. In the year just mentioned, it is stated that he was "released from prison," and then that he emigrated to America, "the authorities hoping that they had gotten rid of him forever." This attempt upon the life of Italy's ruler, and the accompanying statements we find in connection with it, have awakened in our mind some thoughts that may be worth reproducing.

In the first place, we are forcibly reminded that some of the worst characters that ever lived have assumed the role of religious or moral reformers. Satan, at different times in the world's history, and in the history of the church, has created no little trouble when he has assumed the garb of piety, and through some wicked man or men who pose as zealous defenders of the truth, has attempted great achievements under the plea of furthering religion. The union between Church and State, and the induction of vast numbers of unconscious babes into the church who grow up without religion, have offered the Adversary many splendid opportunities to do mischief, which he has not been slow to use. The massacre of St. Bartholomew, the assassination of Henry IV. of France by Ravaillac, the murder of Garfield by Gitteau, and the attempt on the life of king Humbert by Berardi, and many other similar events, have furnished the church and the world object lessons which they seem slow to learn. How men can claim to be servants of the church (!) and followers of the Prince of Peace, and yet behold unmoved by the agony of the martyr at the stake, hear without remorse the cries of dying mothers and their children, and stain their hands with the blood of just and enlightened rulers, is one of those mysteries which can be explained only by admitting "that Satan is at the bottom of it all." Any system of faith that sees no incongruity between such conduct and the spirit of Christ and the teachings of God's Word, is subversive of the truth, and is indeed dangerous.

Again, there is something utterly disgusting in the idea that such a character as Berardi should appear as a defender of any system of faith. It bodes no good to the cause of the Pope to have such defenders as Berardi. If we have analyzed the situation correctly, however, Berardi, after his return to Rome from America, must have heard a good deal of teaching from high authority which led him to suppose he was doing the Pope and religion service when he made his dastardly attempt upon the life of his sovereign. And we further think that one great cause of trouble in political and church circles in Italy is not that the King refuses to be reconciled to the Pope, but that the Pope refuses to accept the situation and to be reconciled to the King. He claims to be the vicar on earth of him whose "kingdom is not of this world," and yet he has been [illegible] Europe ring for years with his lamentations at the loss of his temporal power. [illegible] he has manifested toward his [illegible] so bitter, and his opposition to [illegible] Rome to become the Capital of United Italy consolidated kingdom [illegible] and protected, that some of the wild fanatics that have been brought up in that system of faith, of which the Pope is the exponent, are weak enough to believe that they would do a wise, if not a righteous thing, in "removing" one of the best kings of modern times. From a system of faith that can see no incongruity between the idea of retaining in its fold such characters as Berardi, and the teaching of that Book which tells us to "do unto others as we would have them do unto us," and to submit ourselves "to the powers that be," may the good Lord deliver us. From that system of church polity and policy which is so pliant as to readily unite with the State, when its rulers will forward the interests of what is claimed to be the church, and then as readily remove by violence the heads of the State when they refuse to bow at its bidding, may the good Lord again deliver us!

The Baptists are the unalterable opponents of all such ideas, and present an unshaken bulwark against the induction of unconscious infants into the church by any system of priestly manipulation; against any union of Church and State; and when such a dark deed as the intended assassination of Humbert of Italy is attempted, on the score of doing religious duty, it will always excite in the hearts of Baptists and all true Christians an utter abhorrence of the act. When we notice the peculiar honor God has laid upon us in placing us in the front rank of the defenders of both civil and religious liberty, and remember that we are often actively opposed by these who under God are indebted to us for much of the civil and religious peace and liberty they enjoy, we must confess no little sympathy for our brethren who are supposed by many to be too rigid in maintaining the true logic of Baptist principles, and contending earnestly for the "faith once for all delivered to the saints." The pressure brought to bear upon Baptist doctrine, polity, and principles, in our day, is tremendous; and it will require men and women who have spiritual backbone for us to stand our ground. There is a good deal of twaddle going on now in places in which Baptist consistency and doctrine are involved. Is the time ever to come again in the history of the world that no prominent denomination of people can be found in whose churches the pure Word will be preached and the ordinances rightly administered? We have the opportunity under God, brethren, of helping to answer this question as it should be answered. Let us be true to our trust.

Once more: is there way by which America can escape the danger of being the dumping ground of the criminal characters of the world? Our country has claimed, not without reason, to be "the land of the free and the home of the brave." In the days of our infancy, immigration to our country was without limit, and we welcomed to our shores the sons of every clime. Later on our Congress attempted to throw some restrictions around free immigration; but the fact remains that the prohibition attempted does not prohibit, even as to the worst characters that leave their countries for their weal and seek ours for our woe. What right have the authorities at Rome, or in any other European city, to procure the release of dangerous characters from prison and ship them to America, hoping to be "rid of them forever?" What are our Consuls for? If some of them were as diligent in doing their duty now as they were in seeking office, and are in drawing pay after their appointment, they would guard more carefully the interests, the honor, and the welfare of their country. We feel for any nation afflicted with wicked and dangerous men; we ought to feel for and pray for such men; but still it does not follow that we are bound to receive them on our shores. The right kind of men are welcome to our shores; but our immigration laws need revising, and such as we have, need enforcing.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

HENDERSON.

After spending a night with Bro. VanDeventer, and spending next day visiting his members in the interest of the RECORDER, I began to realize I was at least on my feet and at my work again. To meet a cordial and hearty welcome from the people in Henderson was no new thing to me. Bro. VanDeventer had not long come from Richmond, where he went to preach for the Venable street church in that city. As we would have guessed, from what we know of the Richmond brethren, he spoke in the highest terms of the kind and hospitable treatment he received. As Mrs. VanDeventer expressed it, "he came back badly spoiled." But his satisfaction with his own people, and his apparent intention to stay with them, could not be otherwise than grateful to the representative of the RECORDER, or to any one else who is interested in the progress of our work in our own State. Really, it seems to me if I were in his place I should at once become an advocate of long pastorates, sealing my faith by my practice. Why should a pastor, whose people love him, and who has plenty of work to do, receiving an abundant support, want to go elsewhere?

My work done, I leave with the single regret that I was not permitted to appropriate my part of a fine turkey which Bro. Lassiter pressed me to share with him. I never fail to go to see Bro. Lassiter, whether his subscription is out or not. He is just as much of a young man as he is an old one. True, his hair and whiskers are gray, yet his step has lost little of its elasticity. His business methods are all of the modern and progressive sort. Full of work and hope for the future, he is literally "with the boys," and we hope may be for many happy years to come.

In a little more time than it required to make these notes the engine is whistling for

MURFREESBORO.

At the depot I found President Brewer, Scarborough and Wood—a delegation of various dimensions, don't you think? Brewer representing the avoirdupois, Wood the perpendicular extension, and Scarborough was there with a nice conveyance, and represented largely the good looks of the gathering—that is, after he had taken on his freight. I was some weeks behind in getting here, and in spite of myself I could not help fearing that some parts of the program of last spring might fail. But it was not so. If you have never been to Murfreesboro in "shad season" this may not be such interesting reading; but if you have, you can afford to read on, even "between the lines." And if you ever get an invitation, my advice is to go, and you'll be not "in the swim," but what is still better, you will be in the "fry" by a large majority.

I can't tell what the record would have been if Scarborough and Wood had lived in Galilee, but they seem to always get their nets in on the right side when there is fishing to be done in the Meherrin river; or, they may get into the net of some one else. This, however, was an investigation not in my line to make.

Few places are so cheering at this season as a school of nice girls. It seems to be a sort of race between the spring dresses of the girls and the birds and flowers in the campus. If any one wishes to witness what supreme delight a little box can produce in the face of a school girl he only has to be the bearer of an article of this sort—the gladness of some and the sadness of others, for, like the Federal offices, not enough to go round, you feel like you would like to have at least a half a gross so as to make them all happy.

I enjoyed greatly two sermons preached by Bro. Scarborough at Robert's Chapel, one of the very best country churches in the State. Just a year ago I was there in the interest of the RECORDER, and the progress which I noted in both preacher and people is indeed encouraging. This is no empty compliment, but is true and natural to any one who will realize the situation. The people in this portion of the State are year by year improving their school and church facilities, and the improvement of the people at large is the necessary outcome. And as the preachers become pastors of two instead of four churches, the quality of their preaching is improved. I expect to see at no distant day a number of the churches in this section of the State having preaching every Sunday in the month, with as good Sunday-schools as are usually seen in the towns. There is no reason why it should not be so.

The schedule for leaving Murfreesboro for Raleigh would be almost intolerable if Bro. Corbett did not live at Boykin's, Va. His doors, dining room and all, are wide open to every Baptist who goes that way. And when a fellow leaves Murfreesboro without his breakfast, Bro. Corbett's premises are specially attractive. I have thought it would be well to straighten the State line so that Boykin's would fall on this side. Until that is done, however, I shall stoutly maintain that Bro. Corbett is just as good as any North Carolina Baptist.

Turning from the "main line" I found Bro. Morton just beginning his second years' work at LOUISBURG.

I had seen very little of Bro. Morton since he went to his new field, and it was really gratifying to hear the report the brethren gave of his work. Not more, however, than the brethren generally would expect from him. Wake Forest College, and in fact every interest of our denominational work, has no truer or more loyal supporter than Bro. Morton. I know of no place more likely to develop a young preacher than the Louisburg church. Not so large, it's true, but the largest per cent. of the congregation are above the average in intelligence—people who read and think—and consequently the standard they would set for a preacher would necessitate study and an honest effort to fill his place as it should be done. We hope for pastor and people years of useful and pleasant work together. J. C. C.

....The new Baptist church at Bardstown, Ky., costing about $24,000, was dedicated on Sunday, April 2d, Rev. Dr. F. H. Kerfoot preaching the sermon. After the sermon an appeal was made for $11,000 to finish paying for the new edifice, and over $13,000 was subscribed. Rev. J. O. Rust is pastor of the church.

....Rev. F. H. Poston has changed his appointments so as to be at Four Oaks and the school-house near Mr. J. W. Alford's on the first Sunday in each month and at Hood's school-house and Blackman's X Roads on third Sundays. He will preach at the last mentioned places on the third Sunday in this month.—Smithfield Herald.

....Rev. C. W. Scarborough in a sermon at Robert's Chapel, said: "If in all the years I have been your pastor I had been free from criticism, I should think the thing for me to do would be to bundle up and get off as soon as possible. This Book goes against the desires and conduct of many who are even members of the church."

....Six persons—three on April 2d and three on April 9th—have been baptized into the fellowship of the Fayetteville Street church, Raleigh. These are earnest workers in connection with this band of christians. The work of building their house of worship on the lot opposite the Centennial graded school is making favorable progress.

....The Clay Street Baptist church, Richmond, Va., at a recent business meeting let the contract for a new house of worship to be erected at the corner of Grace and Pine streets. The new building will have a seating capacity, including gallery, of about six hundred, and will cost about $12,000. Rev. H. A. Bagby, the new pastor, will assume charge the first of June.

....When Rev. C. C. Newton left here last Friday, it was understood that he would, as rapidly as possible, visit a large number of our churches in behalf of African Missions. We have heard him three times on this work. He made a new speech each time. We heard him with growing interest. Go and hear him. You will be instructed and benefitted.—C. Durham.

....The Winchester and David's Fork churches, of Kentucky, have undertaken the support of Rev. R. T. Bryan in China, and Bro. Bryan reports directly to these churches quarterly. These churches support Bro. Bryan through the Board at Richmond, and the way is open for others to follow the example of these churches whenever they shall so determine to do so.

....A lively interest in missions had, in 1831, been awakened in many parts of the State by the labors of Elder Robert T. Daniel and others who travelled extensively and represented the work; yet all missionary exertion was soon paralysed, chiefly, through misapprehensions on the part of the churches. For several years scarcely a breathing was heard in defence of missions, through want of proper organization.—Elder Mark Bennett, 1854.

....“What do you think when you hear or read of a brother talking loudly about not being ‘a bigoted fanatic’ or ‘a Baptist and a half,’ but only just a Baptist?” Well, we think most probably he is only whistling to keep his courage up, and after all he is not much Baptist. A real good Baptist will be known in any community without making much noise about it.—Baptist Record.

....Dr. L. G. Broughton of Winston passed through Raleigh last Friday on his return from Warrenton, where he had been for more than a week aiding Rev. T. J. Taylor in a meeting. The meeting resulted in the conversion of over fifty persons, and the addition to the church of a large number. It was a glorious revival. Grace was abundantly poured out upon the place and the people.

....We learn from the Missionary Rooms, Boston, that, owing to the interruption caused by the fire, the treasurer's books will be kept open till April 15. Up to April 4, $725,000 had been received. This will be somewhat increased, but it is evident that we are far short of the million. The secretaries urgently ask that all sums not yet forwarded may be sent at once, and that a last strenuous effort be made to bring up the million.—National Baptist.

....Mr. J. E. Schoolfield, a zealous Methodist layman of Danville, Va., recently conducted a successful revival meeting, lasting about ten days, at Edenton Street M. E. church, Raleigh. He was assisted by the Methodist pastors of the city. The services, held both morning and night, were well attended. Mr. Schoolfield preached in simplicity and earnestness. About sixty professions of faith are reported, and quite a number of backsliders were reclaimed.

....A preacher's little daughter once said to him after a sermon: “You preached awful long, papa, but I beared it.” Often those who are called to bear it do not tell the preacher of it, but content themselves by staying away. Then, too, sometimes, they are not willing to bear what the preacher says. Though preachers should be careful not to put it too long or too strong, it is better, brother, sister, just to bear it and pray for the preacher.—Western Recorder.

....Some of the successful mission points we have in the State are where our pastors from the towns have gone out in territory contiguous to their churches and built chapels, or made such provision for preaching as the circumstances would admit. These men have done this work, for the most part, without any pay, and contributing in many cases from their salaries to secure some sort of house to worship in. Brethren Edwards of Goldsboro, Thomas of Greensboro, Ford of Newbern, VanDeventer of Henderson, Martin of Lumberton, and others whom we do not now recall have done faithful work of this sort.

....At the First church, Raleigh, on Sunday morning last, according to appointment, a sermon was preached by the pastor, Dr. J. W. Carter, as appropriate to the effort to raise $600 for the support of a foreign missionary. It has been the custom of this church to contribute yearly between six and seven hundred dollars to State Missions on a canvass made by Bro. W. H. Pace, now seriously sick at his home in this city. The proposition to contribute the same amount to Foreign Missions as had been given to State Missions was responded to by a large number rising to their feet. The matter, in this shape, was then committed to the church committee on Foreign Missions to make a thorough canvass of the church, which, when done, will no doubt eventuate in securing the sum necessary to support a missionary in a foreign land.

....On Wednesday night, April 5th, four persons were received into the First Baptist church, Raleigh, on a relation of their Christian experience, and one on Sunday night, the 9th. Four of these were pupils in the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb and the Blind. At the West End Mission on Thursday night, the 6th, six others were received into the First church on a profession of faith in Christ. At this mission point, Bro. O. L. Stringfield recently conducted a series of meetings. A good work for the Master is being done at this mission. On Sunday at the First church, after the morning sermon, five of the six received at the mission were baptized by the pastor, Dr. J. W. Carter. Also, at night, after the sermon, five more were baptized. Dr. Landrum of the Second church, Richmond, Va., is expected to aid Dr. Carter in a series of meetings, commencing on Monday night, the 17th. During this week nightly prayer-meetings will be held in the church.

....It is not generally known that in old times in Virginia and North Carolina, when there was a State Church, that ministers were persecuted and imprisoned some times. We are reminded of this by an article in the last Raleigh BIBLICAL RECORDER, a Baptist organ. Rev. Dr. C. Durham is the writer. He says Baptists were both imprisoned and whipped. The evidence is found in the court records of 1730–1746, in the town of New Bern. There are the names of some well known Baptists who were thus persecuted. These persecutions lasted for fifteen years. Rev. Drs. C. E. Taylor and C. T. Bailey have examined the records. The RECORDER publishes the Craven county minutes. It is astonishing how slow it was the great, precious, priceless principle of soul liberty—the right of worship—found a place in the world among people calling themselves Christians. Only in Roman Catholic Maryland and Rhode Island was religious liberty tolerated in the way back. —Wilmington Messenger, April 9. Thanks to the Messenger for the above notice. The last statement, however, is misleading. Catholic Maryland, under Lord Baltimore, granted religious toleration only; but Baptist Rhode Island established religious liberty, the individual's inalienable God-given right. The Catholic and Baptist positions in Maryland and Rhode Island were radically and essentially different.

....An exchange says: “No sensible man should or ever does get angry because a newspaper man duns him for money. A dun is not an impeachment of a subscriber's integrity, but is simply an outcropping of the publisher's necessities. For instance, a thousand men owe a man from one to four dollars each. He has to dun them all in order pay his expenses. Instead of getting angry and stopping the paper, because the publisher asks him for what is honestly due, the subscriber should thank the editor for waiting on him so patiently, and pay up like a man.”

....Dr. W. L. Hudson, representing the trustees of the Luray Female Institute, of Luray, Va., was in town last week trying to induce President Brewer to accept the presidency of the Luray school. Within the past two months Mr. Brewer has been offered the Presidency of two other female colleges. We are proud to know that he has made an enviable reputation as an educator and rejoice to see signs of the high estimate in which he is held, but we sincerely hope that he will decide to remain at the C. B. F. Institute which he has successfully conducted for the past twelve years.—Murfreesboro Index, April 7.

Rev. J. T. Albritton.

The following resolutions have been passed by Island Creek Baptist church, Duplin county;

WHEREAS, Rev. J. T. Albritton has resigned the pastorate of this church, which he has so faithfully served for nearly ten years; therefore

Resolved, That we ever remember him with most tender affection and sincere appreciation for his efficient service, spiritual guidance and fatherly care during all the years of his pastorate; and that we will always esteem and commend his profound intelligence and interest in the principles of our denomination and consecration to the cause of Christ; also that our most earnest prayers shall ever follow him for his success in God's service, and that his soul may be abundantly nourished by God's love and filled with grace sufficient for every trial and affliction.

Ordered, that the foregoing be entered as part of records of this church, and that a copy be sent the pastor; also the same furnished the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

“Coinjock Church.”

On April 6th, a presbytery—composed of Dr. R. R. Overby, Rev. J. B. Ferebee of Sawyer's Creek; deacons C. W. Owens, C. L. Grandy, E. Evans and Jesse Evans, of Poplar Branch; deacon H. T. Gregory and J. D. Gregory, of Pleasant Grove; Rev. P. S. C. Davis and deacon J. H. Morrisette, of Shiloh; and Dr. C. S. Blackwell, of Elizabeth City—met at Coinjock, Currituck county, a smart, little village situated at the locks of the canal midway between Elizabeth City and Norfolk, and organized a new church composed of the following members: B. D. Taylor, Dorcas Taylor, Celestine Taylor, J. W. Hampton, Eldora Hampton, Kate Hampton, S. B. Crane, Fannie Crane, Carie L. Crane, J. W. Brumsey, Margarett Brumsey, Wm. Tatum, Emily Tatum, Dr. J. B. Garrington, Amanda Garrington, Rev. N. P. Stallings, and Katie Stallings, who presented letters in due form from other churches.

After sermon by Calvin S. Blackwell, deacons B. D. Taylor and J. W. Brumsey were solemnly set apart by prayer and the imposition of hands; clerk, B. D. Taylor; treasurer, Samuel Crane.

The situation of this new church and the distance from any other Baptist church make the outlook for its future very bright. A church building enterprise will be started in the near future.

JOSEPH FEREBEE, Secretary.

From Columbia, Tyrrell County.

Dear Recorder:—Bro. W. V. Savage is holding the fort for the Baptists in this section almost unaided and alone (in regard to preachers) from Plymouth to Dare county, and is doing that kind of preaching that large towns and cities would be glad to have. Well, if the State Board and the preachers will not come to the rescue in this field, then just leave Rev. W. V. Savage with us, and let him alone, and we will ask no further favors.

In the RECORDER of the 29th ult., I see something that the great De Witt Talmage has said about Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith's sick two year old child. We have some little ones at our house, and when they are afflicted, as we think Mrs. Smith's was, we attribute it to worms, and administer one grain of calomel and two grains santonine, and it acts like a charm.

Allow this humble brother, the writer hereof, to say that he fully endorses Bro. John E. White's article and Bro. Taylor's comments on the same. S.

The Meeting at Wake Forest.

This meeting was a good one. It was just such a meeting as every church needs. The people came to hear the Word and gave it profound attention. Bro. Hufham preached the Word in simplicity and in great spiritual power, and the Lord's people were greatly strengthened and some of the backsliders were reclaimed. No one was urged to make a profession of faith. The Word and Spirit of God were relied on to do the work. God says his Word shall not return unto him void, but that it shall accomplish that which he pleases, and prosper in the thing whereto he sends it. We are all greatly encouraged. W. R. GWALTNEY.

Notes from Oxford.

The people of Oxford have enjoyed unusual religious privileges of late. Some weeks ago the Presbyterians held a meeting in which the preaching was done by Rev. J. W. Rose. I attended many of the services, and heard some of the most evangelical and scriptural preaching I ever listened to. After the Presbyterian meeting closed, we began a meeting at the Baptist church.

Rev. W. C. Tyree of Durham did the preaching. I express the sentiments of all who heard him when I say that Bro. Tyree won the hearts of us all. His preaching was powerful, tender, persuasive, edifying and helpful in the highest and best sense. The church was greatly quickened and revived. There were some professions of faith, but only a few. Good seed were sown which must in God's time bring forth abundant fruit. JNO. S. HARDAWAY.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT BY A CORRESPONDENT.

The meeting which has been in progress over a week at the Baptist church in Oxford closed on the night of the fifth of April. There were not many conversions, but it was a precious meeting to the church. Many of God's people were built up and strengthened in the Christian life. It was a feast to hear such tender, earnest, instructive preaching as Bro. W. C. Tyree of Durham gave us We love him. God bless him.

Revival in Warrenton.

We have just closed a thirteen days' meeting. Bro. L. G. Broughton of Winston was with us eleven days. He preached the gospel with power and effect, and won the affections of our community.

The town has been greatly moved, and the people of God have been strengthened and built up in the most holy faith.

Thirty-three professed faith in Christ. Twenty were baptized last night, and others await the ordinance.

Among those baptized were a grandfather and grandson—one seventy-three, and the other fourteen, years old. It was a touching scene.

I wish I had the time to write the history of the meeting, but have not.

I commenced the ninth year of my pastorate here the day that our meeting began. The Lord has greatly blessed us, blessed be his name. Yours truly,

T. J. TAYLOR.

From Monroe, N. C.

I enjoy the editorials in the RECORDER very much. I think they are along the right line. The RECORDER is an absolute necessity to every Baptist in the State who wishes to keep pace with the times and the progress of our great and growing Baptist work.

Our church here is on the eve of a revival. Bro. M. A. Adams, the new pastor, preaches to large congregations at every service. The house was crowded Sunday night. The ordinance of baptism was administered to two candidates.

We begin a series of meetings next Sunday. God bless you and the dear old RECORDER. Yours in Christ,

A. B. CAUDLE.

A Week's Preaching in Salisbury.

Bro. Editor:—Our church has just enjoyed a week's preaching by Bro. D. M. Austin of Charlotte. He did some of the best and plainest gospel preaching we have ever enjoyed.

We cannot tell what the harvest will be from such faithful sowing of good seed. I am to assist him next week at Charlotte.

Destructive Fires April 1st.

Never in the history of the country has there been such wide-spread and destructive fires as prevailed in Granville and adjoining counties on Saturday, the first of April. There was a great loss of property. One of the greatest inconveniences will be the loss of so much fencing. The trouble will be to keep the stock off of the growing crops. Many of our brethren have lost so heavily, I fear it will lessen our collections for benevolence. J. A. S.

Mecklenburg and Cabarrus Union.

This Union will meet at Independence Hill on April 28 and 29. Introductory sermon by Rev. Dr. T. H. Pritchard.

QUERIES.

In what do Baptists differ from other denominations? To open, Rev. D. M. Austin.

Is the world becoming Christianized? To open, Bro. J. W. Snider.

Are we debtors to the heathen? To open, Bro. W. T. Tolbirt.

Should a worldlyan or a member of another denomination be an officer in a Baptist Sunday-school? To open, Bro. J. W. Abernathy. COMMITTEE.

Southern Baptist Convention.

The thirty-eighth session (48th year) of the Southern Baptist Convention will be held with the Baptist churches in the city of Nashville, Tenn., beginning Friday, May 12th, 1893, at 10 a. m. Preacher of annual sermon, Rev. W. E. Hatcher, D. D., of Virginia; alternate, Rev. J. Morgan Wells, D. D., of Tennessee.

LANSING BURROWS,
OLIVER F. GREGORY,
Secretaries S. B. C.

RAILROAD RATES.

The Southern Passenger Association (which embraces nearly all the railroads east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio river) was applied to, as usual, on Jan. 15th, for a rate of one full fare for the round trip. The application was referred to the Rate Committee in February; and then action was postponed. While single roads have shown a willingness to grant this usual rate, no official consent has yet been received from the Southern Passenger Association.

I am glad to announce that the Louisville & Nashville R. R., and most of the roads in Texas, have made a rate of one fare for the round trip; and I hope the other roads will do the same.—Other announcements will be made. O. F. GREGORY,
Sec'y in charge Transportation.

In arranging for the coming session of the Southern Baptist Convention in this city, the committee desires to have as soon as possible the names of all persons knowing themselves to be delegates, either of the Convention or the Woman's Missionary Union or the Education Society. We wish in sending request this notice to call special attention to the following points:

1. We will make ample provision for entertaining only accredited delegates. This rule will be rigidly adhered to.
2. As we expect to furnish homes to all delegates, we will not be responsible for any bills made for entertainment at hotels.
3. All delegates who may prefer hotel accommodations at their own expense and will write to the committee to that effect, will have the very best possible arrangements made for them.
4. The committee will be glad to furnish any information or to make any arrangements at boarding houses and hotels for all visitors who may request it.
5. A special committee on reception will meet all trains and furnish information and assistance to both delegates and visitors.

The careful observance of these rules will greatly facilitate the work of the committee and add to the comfort of the great crowd which we are expecting.

MINIMUM HOTEL RATES.

Maxwell House (headquarters), per day, $2.50; Duncan Hotel, $2.50; Nicholson House, $2.00; Commercial Hotel, $1.50; Bailey House, $1.00; boarding houses generally from $1.00 to $1.25. In sending names, please address M. B. Pilcher, chairman. W. C. GOLDEN, Sec'y.

Nashville, Tenn., March 22, 1893.

For want of space we are compelled to omit the marriage notices and nearly all the death notices this week. These will appear in our next issue.

We call attention to the following advertisements: Wanted—A teacher; Seal and Table; Stronach; $2,000 in Prizes; Society, Philadelphia; Mat, Crowell & Kirkpatrick.

Need of Chapels in Japan.

The pressing need of the missionary work of the Southern Baptists in Japan at the present time is not chapels, but active, energetic, spiritual-minded, prayerful workers. It is our humble opinion, candidly expressed, that missionaries frequently commit grave mistakes in beginning work in a new place by their inverse order of procedure. Having decided to enter a new town or city, their first consideration is a preaching place. This is, of course, natural and necessary, for in many countries street-preaching is forbidden by law. Hence, if a sufficient amount of money is available, their first act is to buy a suitable lot of ground and erect a chapel, with the hope of collecting afterwards a body of worshipers. This order of action may be proper and admissible in a Christian land where the people are accustomed to assemble to hear preaching, but inverted and unnatural, in a heathen country where Christianity is practically unknown and church going habit unformed. It is frequently difficult to secure the presence of enough hearers to fill even the small preaching rooms that we temporarily rent. Moreover, if the missionary buys and builds, making use only of money collected abroad, he fosters among the people habitudes of indifference and awakens parasitical tendencies. The chapel having cost them no money, no labor, no sacrifice, their interest is languid, and they are inclined to regard the work as the missionary's and themselves as necessary appendages.

But despite the above mentioned facts, chapel funds are needed in missionary work and can be used very advantageously. If at first the missionary simply provides a temporary place for preaching, waiting until a number of baptized believers has been collected about him before he attempts to build, he then will be able to enlist the interest of every Christian and secure contributions from each one. In this way there is growth and development and not mere accessions. Minerals may become enlarged by accretion, but living bodies cannot. Where life exists, there must be growth.

We are just beginning in Japan. We have opened work in the island of Kiushiu, and have regular, though temporary preaching places in five towns. The monthly rental of each preaching place is about two yen a month. (A yen is about eighty cents U. S. currency). Therefore we are paying annually for the rent of preaching houses 120 yen. One can easily see by a very simple process of mathematics that in a few years this yearly rental will amount to enough to build several chapels. Then, too, remember that our work is just in its incipency. Our policy is to enlarge our borders just as rapidly as our working force increases. We have two native evangelists who are supposed to give their whole time to the work of teaching and preaching. We are praying for more evangelists, and if the Lord answers our prayer, we shall want two or three preaching houses for each addition to our force. We cannot multiply our preaching places too rapidly, for each one becomes a centre of religious influence. Now if we are successful and the Lord adds his blessings to our labors, we hope to organize churches at our several stations, in the course of a year or two. In that instance it will be necessary to build. If the congregations of believers at these respective places have in the mean time been properly instructed, and their interest thoroughly awakened, they will naturally take the initiative in the matter of building, and we can assist by adding to their contributions those collected in the home-land. They will then feel that the buildings are their own, and that they themselves are co-laborers with the missionaries in the grand work of extending the Master's kingdom. Self-help is a condition of moral and spiritual growth.

Here in Japan it is exceedingly desirous to build a chapel just as soon as the native Christians can be induced to take hold of the matter in real earnest, because it is often very difficult to rent a preaching house. We have lately been sorely tried. At one place the Buddhists interfered just as we were about to close the contract, and so intimidated the landlord that he refused to negotiate further with us, and at another we cannot begin work because there is not a single available house. Hence the matter of securing houses is often a serious one. With a reasonable share of prosperity, chapels will soon be needed in the Japan missions.

Everybody is making mistakes. Everybody is finding out afterwards that he has made a mistake. But there can be no greater mistake than stopping to worry over a mistake already made. "Forgetting those things which are behind" includes the forgetting to worry over the irremediable past. "Reaching forth into those things which are before" is the "one thing" for every child of God to do in spite of the many mistakes which all insist he has certainly made.—Morning Star.

A Disturbance

isn't what you want, if your stomach and bowels are irregular. That's about all you get, though, with the ordinary pill. It may relieve you for a moment, but you're usually in a worse state afterward than before.

This is just where Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets do most good. They act in an easy and natural way, very different from the [illegible] old-fashioned pills. They're not only pleasanter, but there's no reaction afterward, and their help lasts. One little sugar-coated pellet for a genteel laxative or correc[illegible] for a cathartic. Constipation, bilious attacks, dizziness, sick headaches, are promptly relieved.

The smallest, the easiest to take—[illegible] pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed satisfaction, or your money back. Isn't this good you get.

Isaiah's Mother.

We hear much now-a-days about the fatherhood of God. Let us be grateful that this vital Christian idea is forcing its way into greater prominence, and is deeply moving the religious world, and is extending its benign influence to the unreligious world. It means the death of slavish fear, the removal of the coming dread of fierce unfeeling omnipotence, and the destruction of religious savagery. It means a better understanding of God as Jesus taught us to look up and say: "Our Father which art in heaven." It means necessarily a broad fraternal human fellowship, the brotherhood of man.

But the Scriptures likewise tell us about the motherhood of God. Isaiah ascribes to Jehovah a feminine sensibility, a more than maternal love, a love not only such as a father feels, but a love surpassing even that of a mother. Isaiah's mother must have been one of the best of women. She seems to have made a profound impression upon the mind of her great son. He was a man of vast and capacious nature, born to handle sublime ideas, and move in the loftiest regions of thought. What poetical images he flings out! What mighty organ swells in the onward flow of his song! What visions of glory as chariot follows chariot in the march of prophetic events! But Isaiah deals with the loving, the tender, the sympathetic as well as the vast and sublime. Not less than three times he sees God the God of Israel. The motherhood of God impressed him. We do not remember that this is the case of any other prophet or Old Testament writer. As he thought of God's care for Israel, his deep, passionate interest in his chosen people, his tender consolations administered in the day of reverses and calamities, no image but that of a mother seemed adequate to the expression of the feeling and sentiment that were excited. Near the close of his book the prophet says: "As one whom his mother comforted so will I comfort you." Is not this idea somewhat remarkable for one to express who lived amongst a people that so elevated the father; that regarded the head of the family with so great reverence? But the sublime prophet fears not to overstep the bound of conventional feeling and propriety and so speak of a mother's love. He had perhaps known what this love was. And now in the day of Israel's misfortune and distress, he bids the people look upon God as kindling with maternal sympathy; as yearning over the nation with an affection as deep and as undying as that which a mother feels toward her helpless infant. Mr. Moody tells a touching story of a soldier boy that was wounded at the battle of Gettysburg. When the news reached the young man's mother she at once resolved to be with him. He was extremely ill when she reached him; and the doctors would allow no one to enter the room and were afraid to inform him of his mother's arrival, lest the agitation caused by the news might prove fatal. She insisted, however, upon seeing him at least; and upon entering the room she saw him, and laying her hand upon his brow to wipe away the death sweat, he gently whispered, "that is mother's hand." He knew the loving touch could be no other. Now this same deep, quenchless affection God has for us in the hour of sorest need; and when our eyes are closed in death it will be his gentle hand that we shall feel.

No language can fully portray the tenderness of God toward them that put their trust in him. No wonder the prophet passed by the father, the representative and embodiment of authority and of all that is sternest, and compared the divine tenderness to a mother's love. It is a mother's remembrance of her offspring, it is a mother's consolation in the hour of affliction, it is a mother's solicitude that is represented when God says: "Behold I have graven thee upon the palms of my hand." Isa. 49: 16.—Baptist Courier, S. C.

Religion in a Trunk.

A little girl had been rummaging in her mother's trunk. There she found a "church letter" which her mother had neglected to present to the church in whose neighborhood she had moved. The little explorer rushed into her mother's presence shouting, "O mamma, I've found your religion in your trunk!" There's a needle-like point in that story for many people. Too often the neglected church letter comes to be about the only part of the old church life remaining. A trunk is a poor, dark, mothy place for one's religion. Out into the light with it, where it, too, may shine and bring glory to God and help to men. Put in your church letters right away.—Selected.

The Very Best Helps.

Every pastor and superintendent would do well to see that his school is supplied with the very best helps to the study of God's word. We must not allow any other literature to supplant the Bible in the hands of the young; but should avail ourselves of the best aids to a right understanding of the divine word. Such are found in the Sunday-school Lesson Helps and papers published by the American Baptist Publication Society, and we cheerfully recommend them to all Sunday-school workers.

To an Unknown.

You are melancholy; and you are brooding over your own distemper, and so aggravating it. Neither prayer nor meditation will cure it. The difficulty is that you are self-centered. Every self-centered person must be either self-conceited or melancholy. Every man is but a sorry object for self-contemplation. You are constructing your life on the Ptolemaic theory; you are making everything revolve around yourself. The glow-worm and the firefly live in the light they produce themselves, and they are poor creatures. Phosphorescence never lasts long. Walk in the light of God—that is, in the light which comes from God. The remedy for melancholy is to become God centered. You are unhappy! What of it? There is only one question: Are you useful? No? Then become useful. Set yourself, not to being happy, but to doing other people good. Forget yourself; think of others. "Happiness is got by being forgot." Still, do not forget happiness in order to get it. Simply forget it. Live for others, not for yourself. It is of small consequence whether you are happy or not. It is of much consequence whether you are of service in the world. Love is the cure for melancholy.

Forebodings of evil are a more potent cause of trouble than evils that are present. If the element of dread of that which seems likely to come, or of sorrow for an anticipated lack, were eliminated from our personal troubles of mind, we should find it comparatively an easy matter to bear up under the burdens of the present. Yet the future can safely be left with God.—S. S. Times.

Union Meeting.

The next session of the Eastern Union of the Raleigh Association will be held with the Baptist church at Four Oaks, Johnston County, N. C., on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, April 28th, 29th and 30th, 1893.

Friday, 11 a. m. Introductory sermon, by Rev. Worley Creech.

Afternoon. 1. "What is it to be a Christian?" Worley Creech.

2. "Will conscience lead a person to heaven?" E. S. Moore.

3. Preaching at night, 7:30.

Saturday, 10 a. m. 1. "What relation does money sustain to Christianity?" or "The Bible on giving." F. H. Poston.

2. "Why do Baptists practice close communion and refuse to invite or commune with Christians of other denominations?" J. M. Beaty.

Afternoon, 1:30 p. m. 1. "Does a refusal to support the gospel furnish a scriptural cause for church discipline?" R. C. Wallace.

2. "The best means of teaching the people the history, distinctive doctrines and methods of work of the Baptist denomination?" O. L. Stringfield.

3. Preaching at 7:30.

Sunday, 9:30 a. m. 1. Topic, Sunday-school work—"What must we do with the children God has given to us?" Talks by R. H. Gower, N. D. Wells.

2. Missionary sermon by Rev. O. L. Stringfield at 11:30 a. m.

It is very important that each church in the Union take and forward a liberal collection by its delegates. We need money to pay our missionaries, and the amounts sent will be duly credited on the pledges of the churches. Please respond on Friday, brethren, with delegates and a contribution for our work. O. C. HORTON, for Com.

Concerning Hobbies.

The late Dr. Alcott, whose works on health are doubtless remembered, though their influence must have been quite limited, in one of his later publications uttered a "generality," which, though not "glittering," had a sound and sensible quality. He remarked that health is not to be preserved by riding hobbies, as some seemed to suppose. One, for example, takes exercise, but is negligent of his diet and regimen. Another thinks he has assured his health through punctilious bathing, as if cleanliness were the sole condition of health. Another makes a hobby of his diet. Each trusts in his own hobby. But a suitable diet, habitual cleanliness and sufficient exercise are all necessary to health. Attention to one will not compensate for the neglect of the others.

We are reminded of this caution by observing a tendency to the same fallacious course in higher matters. Various expedients are proposed to increase the efficiency of churches, and each is commended as the one needful thing. One insists that the sale and rent of pews in churches is the great hinderance to the "free course" of the word. Free sittings may be very desirable and proper, but are not alone sufficient to secure prosperity. An organization of the young people is proposed with like confidence as having in it "the potency and promise" of all desirable success. The present tendency to socialistic theories suggests the thought that the only way to bring the ministry into touch with the masses is to make the social needs of men the leading theme of the pulpit. Solicitude for the salvation of men individually must give place to methods of exerting power upon society in the mass. Or we are admonished that we have a glut of preaching, but very little worship, and the great need is of more interest in the devotional parts of our public services. There is always something, the want of which is the chief reason why religion languishes and the ways of Zion mourn.

Men's natural inertia is so strong that much exertion is required to induce action in any direction, and it is generally necessary to work for one thing at a time. This becomes a temptation to make that object a hobby, treating it as the one thing needful. Such exaggerated conceptions of its importance are partly the result of concentrating interest and effort upon that one thing. Sole and separate attention to one thing for a time may be the demand of that time. But it does not by any means follow that it is sufficient for all time. The one thing needful to make a church a power in the world is to be thoroughly imbued with the Spirit of Christ, to "hold forth the word of life" in its purity, to make practical application of the principles of the gospel in daily life, and be sincerely and deeply interested in the welfare of all men. Particular means and expedients are merely relative to these great demands, and from that relation derive their importance. Seen in the light of that higher relation, and kept subservient to it, they are useful. To expect too much from them is the sure preface to disappointment. —The Watchman.

God's Love.

Human love may change. The friendship of last year has grown cold. The gentleness of yesterday has turned to severity. But it is never thus with God's love. It is eternal. Our experience of it may be variable, but there is no variableness in the love. Our lives may change; our consciousness of his love may fade out; but the love clings forever; the gentleness of God abides eternal. "For the mountains shall depart, and hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee." There is never a moment, nor any experience in the life of a true Christian, from the heart of which a message may not instantly be sent up to God, and back to which help may not instantly come. God is not off in some remote heaven, merely. He is not away at the top of the long, steep life ladder, looking down upon us in serene calm, and watching us as we struggle upward in pain and tears. He is with each one of us on every part of the way. His promise of presence is an eternal present tense, "I am with thee." So "Thou, God, seest me" becomes to the believer a most cheering and inspiring assurance. We are never out of God's sight for a moment. His eye watches each one of us continually, and his heart is in his eye. He comes instantly to our help and deliverance when we are in any need or danger.—Bits of Pasture.

Plain Words.

The Rev. Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler seldom minces matters. Speaking of the fact that a messenger has gone to Washington to induce the government to aid in the suppression of the traffic in strong drinks and firearms in the Pacific Islands, he says:

"Just think of it! A lot of converted cannibals begging a Christian government not to send them any more muskets and rum! Verily, the Christianity of our own land does need christianizing at the very core. Ships sail from American ports with missionaries as passengers to Africa, and with thousands of gallons of rum in their cargo; heaven goes in the cabin, and hell in the ship's hold! How long will it take us to convert the heathen in this style?"

Strong as the language is, it is pitifully weak when the atrocity of the crime committed is taken into account. Words have no power to frame a condemnation severe enough for those who are brutalizing the people of heathen lands with New England rum.—Christian Inquirer.

The old reliable remedy for cough, cold, croup and sore throat, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, should be kept in every home.

No Room There for the Dog.

A young man had owned for some years a dog who was his constant companion. The young man married and moved with his bride and his dog into a house on the opposite side of the street from his father's house, his own former home. The dog was not happy, for the time and attention which had formerly been his were now given to the young wife. In many ways he showed his unhappiness and displeasure, in spite of the fact that the master tried to reconcile him and the bride to win him.

One day when the master came home, his wife sat on his knee while "Jack" was lying by the fire. He rose from his place, came over to the couple and expressed his disapproval. "Why, Jack," said the master, "this is all right, she's a good girl," and as he spoke he patted her arm. "Jack" looked up at him, turned away and left the room.

In a moment they heard a noise, and going into the hall, they found "Jack" dragging his bed downstairs. When he reached the front door he whined to be let out, and when the door was opened he dragged his bed down the steps, across the street to his old home, where he scratched for admittance. Since then he has never been back to his master, refusing all overtures.—Exchange.

Faraday's Lost Cup.

A minister once, in replying to the charge of credulity made by an objector against those who believe that God will raise the dead from their graves, gave the following beautiful illustration:

A workman of Faraday, the celebrated chemist, knocked a silver cup into a jar of strong acid. In a little while it disappeared, being dissolved in the acid as sugar is in water, and so seemed utterly lost, and the question came up, "Could it ever be found again?" One said it could, but another replied that being dissolved and held in solution by the acid, there was no possibility of recovering it. But the great chemist, standing by, put some chemical mixture into the jar, and in a little while, every particle of the silver was precipitated to the bottom, and he took it out, now a shapeless mass, and sent it to a silversmith, and the cup was soon restored to the same size and shape as before.

If Faraday could so easily precipitate that silver and restore its scattered and invisible particles into the cup they had before formed, how easily can God restore our sleeping and scattered dust, and change our decayed bodies into the likeness of the glorious body of Christ!—Onward.

Faith and Works.

A cantankerous old Presbyterian minister in Scotland once got into a debate with a boatman, while crossing a river, about faith and works, his position being that faith without works was enough. "Na, na," retorted the boatman with much seriousness; "faith without works'll no do. I'll gie you an instance. Well, ca' this oar 'faith' and this ither oar 'works.' Very well. Tak' 'faith' first;" and while rowing with it alone the boat went round and round. "Now," said the boatman, "let's tak' 'works' next;" and rowing with it alone the boat went round the other way. "We will noo," continued the boatman, "tak' 'faith' an' 'works' thegither. Noo," exclaimed he triumphantly, as he rowed with both oars at the same time, "we can get ower the water, an' this is the only way that we can get ower the troubled ocean o' the warl' tae the peaceful shores o' immortality."—Selected.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

To the Preachers of the Raleigh Association.

Brethren:—The time for our Centennial work is very short, and probably it is not possible to make a personal canvass of the churches. But the opportunity of making an offering must not go unimproved. We have decided, therefore, to ask each preacher in the Raleigh Association to bring this matter up at once, and to take a collection in each church he serves. Do not worry yourself nor your churches about the several different objects to which it can be appropriated. Take it for "the Centennial of Missions." Let it be the offering of each church towards celebrating the great Centennial year. Do not delegate it to the sisters, nor to the Sunday-schools (unless between your appointments they can see and solicit something from every member). But the time is so short that unless something is done at once, some churches will fail to have a part in this work.

Brethren, make the appeal yourselves. Give all necessary explanations. Let this offering be entirely separate from the regular work of the church. And by or before the third Sunday in April, see that each church is reported with its Centennial collection to Bro. J. D Boushall, Treasurer, Raleigh, N. C. Now, brethren, to the work, and do not fail to have each church included.

Work Among the Indians.

Senator Ingalls said in one of his recent utterances that when the Pilgrim Fathers landed "they first fell on their knees and then fell on the Aborigines." We all know how unjustly the Red Man suffered at the hands of civilization. But Christian people, both North and South, came forward to teach these poor, hunted, ill-treated and misguided people how to bear with Christian fortitude their undeserved wrongs. A century ago our Southern Baptists undertook this great work among the Seminoles, Cherokees and Creeks. Much money as well as labor was expended, and thus the foundation was laid. In 1840 the "Indian Missionary Association" was organized in Louisville, Ky., embracing associations in the South and West. Large sums of money were collected and expended in support of schools and missionaries in the Indian Territory. This organization was merged into the Southern Baptist Convention a few years before the civil war, and the care of it devolved upon the Home Mission Board. There was a galaxy of noble workers, North and South, who impressed themselves upon this people, but none more so than "Uncle Billy," the old negro hero, who had been a Baptist before removing West. He was through Christ instrumental in the conversion of Joseph Island, who led hundreds of his people to faith in God.

The last report of the Board previous to the war, was most encouraging, showing the great increase in churches, schools and baptisms among the tribes under our supervision. The war utterly devastated and wrecked this people in a greater degree even than the whites. All that they had gained, both morally and spiritually, seemed irretrievably lost. In 1867 the report of the Board shows two white missionaries and two Indians at work in the Territory, all in the Creek nation. In 1870 the Board reported a more gratifying improvement, and after that time the work developed more rapidly under Buckner and his co-laborers. The "Levering school" was an important instrumentality in giving the gospel to the Indians. But the simple preaching of the "old, old story" has been the chief agency which has brought it to pass that there are to-day among the civilized tribes a larger proportion of Baptist churches, Baptist preachers and Baptist church members, to the population, than in most of the States. But of course these churches, preachers and members greatly need training.

The policy of the Board, approved by the Convention, has been to develop among the Indians a spirit of self-support. They have already made a gratifying progress in this direction, and the Board hopes that in the not distant future, that if not entirely self-supporting, they will largely sustain their own pastors. A great work has been done among these civilized tribes, but there is pressing need that we shall enlarge it. Let us see to it that we bend every energy and make every sacrifice possible to give the gospel to these first inheritors of this grand country, from whom has been robbed all else save a nominal freedom. Apart from higher considerations it is far cheaper to convert them than to kill them, for it has been well said that "Bibles are cheaper than bullets, and the gospel than bayonets." —Mrs. J. Wm. Jones.

A Strong Endorsement.

The St. Louis Trade Review and Export Journal in its issue of February 7th, 1893, has this to say:

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.

One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B. Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

What has the Society Done?

A Baptist brother living in Missouri calls attention to the fact that the Sunday-school Board of the Convention has generously distributed $3,000 of its expected profits for the present year to the mission boards of the Southern States, to aid their mission work, and asks: "What is the Publication Society doing for mission work in these States?"

This question is entitled to a candid answer. On inquiry, the bookkeeper of the Missionary Department of the Society makes the following statement: "The Society expended last year in direct mission work in the States covered by the Convention, $13,081.76 in cash, and $2,690.18 in books at catalogue prices. Reducing these books to wholesale cash rates, they would amount to $1,614.11 cash, making an aggregate of $14,695.89 expended last year in cash, and its equivalent of cash, in mission work in the Southern States. The amount this year just closing will be more. For the last twenty eight years an average of full $10,000 each year has been expended by the Society in the Southern States in direct mission work.

Besides this, the Society made last year donations of Bibles and Testaments, books, and other Sunday-school literature, amounting, at catalogue prices, to $7,850.78. And the average value of the grants made every year for the last twenty-eight years, is $5,280.

The answer, therefore, to the question is in brief this: The Society has given every year, for twenty-eight years, over $15,000 to aid the mission work in the Southern States. It should never be for a moment forgotten that every order made of the Publication Society for Sunday-school books or periodicals adds to the Society's ability to help the mission work of Baptists in all sections. "Not only does the literature itself do good, but the profits go directly to mission work."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Raleigh Affairs.

Maj. John Devereux, an aged and prominent citizen, died on Monday, April 10th, at 1 o'clock p. m. He was in his 75th year.

United States Deputy Marshall John R. Upchurch attempted to arrest John Allen Johnson, a counterfeiter, here Tuesday of last week, but was shot and badly wounded by Johnson who made good his escape.

Quite a serious accident occurred at the State fair grounds here on Tuesday the 4th inst. A number of girls and young ladies, students at St. Mary's school, accompanied by Dr. Bennett Smedes the rector of the school, were enjoying a holiday at the fair grounds, their principal pastime being riding on the switch-back railway. By an accident a car jumped and passed on the wrong track, upon which a car from the other end had started. Both cars, well filled, met at the lowest "sink" with great velocity. Eight girls were badly hurt, several receiving broken limbs and being otherwise seriously injured. Considering the fact that the cars were almost entirely demolished, it was indeed remarkable that no one was killed. All of the injured are reported as doing well.

New Spring Dress Goods.

Among the new Dress Goods for the Spring will be noticed some distinct changes, both as to colors and styles, from those of the past season.

Our advance lines of Dress Fabrics for this season are already on sale, and embraces the newest shades and textures in Plain Materials, as well as the latest ideas in the handsomer French Novelties.

This year, Cotton Dress Fabrics will be shown in many dainty effects, and our present exhibit of these is the most extensive we have ever made.

We suggest to our patrons to buy early, as most of these goods are our own importations, consequently many styles once sold cannot be duplicated.

Requests for samples should indicate something as to colors, and about what price goods are desired.

Cash with the order, of $5.00 and over, goods will be delivered free (except furniture and crockery) to the nearest Express Office or Railroad station.

The Hamilton Miracle.

THE CASE INVESTIGATED BY A GLOBE REPORTER.

THE FACTS FULLY VERIFIED.

ONE OF THE MOST REMARKABLE CASES ON RECORD.

A MAN PRONOUNCED BY EMINENT PHYSICIANS PERMANENTLY DISABLED FULLY RECOVERED—FAC-SIMILE OF THE CHECK FOR $1,000 PAID BY ROYAL TEMPLARS OF TEMPERANCE FOR DISABILITY—HUNDREDS OF VISITORS.

Toronto Daily Globe, July 25.—This is an age of doubt; especially in regard to cures by patent medicines, and not without reason, for too often have the sick and their near and dear loved ones been deceived by highly recommended nostrums that were swallowed, to be of less avail than as much water. The old, old fable of the boy and the wolf applies also too frequently to many of the specific concoctions for curing the ills that flesh is heir to; and when a real cure is effected by a genuine remedy those who might be benefited fight shy of it, saying, "it was 'cure, cure,' so often before that I won't try it." When such a state of affairs exists it is advisable that assurance should be made doubly sure.

A few weeks ago a marvelous and almost miraculous cure was made known to Canadians through the medium of the Hamilton newspapers. It was stated that Mr. John Marshall, a well-known resident of Hamilton, by the aid of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, had been snatched from the very jaws of death, placed upon his feet and enabled to mingle with his fellow citizens with more than renewed health and strength and even brighter spirits than he had experienced for years before. This remarkable statement naturally excited the wonder of almost a continent. Some believed, most people doubted, although the facts were placed so clearly as to ward off the slightest suspicion of fraud. To investigate the very extraordinary cure and place before the people of Canada and the United States verification or otherwise of it was the special mission of a Globe reporter a few days ago.

A close inquiry into the circumstances first showed that Mr. John Marshall, whose residence is 25 Little William street, in the northeastern portion of the city, while employed as foreman for the Canadian Oil Company, five years ago, fell upon the edge of an oil vat and hurt his back. Thinking little of the affair, Mr. Marshall continued to work on, but after a few months he became ill, gradually got worse, and in August, four years ago, became stricken with the dread disease, locomoto ataxia—a disease attacking the nerves and rendering that portion of the system attacked perfectly helpless, proclaimed by the physicians to be incurable—which left him from the waist downwards without feeling and utterly unable to move his lower limbs. All he was able to do was to raise himself by the aid of sticks and crutches and drag himself around the house and occasionally to the corner of the street on fine days. His legs were without feeling, pins and even knives were stuck into them without the sick man experiencing any inconvenience. He could take a walking-stick and beat his legs until the blows resounded through the house and yet he felt nothing. During all these years of torture Mr. Marshall consulted every doctor of ability in the city; tried every form of treatment and took almost every kind of patent medicine, but without receiving one tittle of relief. The agony was frequently so intense that he was obliged to take morphine pills in order to receive a reasonable amount of sleep.

As the months and years passed by, although the doctors continued to treat him in various ways, they plainly told the suffering man that he could not get better, the disease was set down in the works of specialists as incurable. The doomed man was a member of the United Empire Council, No. 100, Royal Templars of Temperance, and under the discouraging circumstances he thought it advisable to apply for the payment of the total disability claim of $1,000 allowed by the order on its insurance policy. Application was accordingly made, but before the claim was granted the patient had to offer conclusive proof of his total disability to the chief examiner, and Mr. Marshall was sent to Toronto for a special electrical treatment. It proved no more successful than the others that had preceded it, and a number of city doctors and the chief medical examiner of the order signed the medical certificate of total disability and Mr. Marshall received from the Dominion Councillor of the Royal Templars a check for $1,000 last November. One day last February came Mr. Marshall's salvation although he did not accept it at first. A small pamphlet telling of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and the diseases they cured, was thrown into the house, but it was placed aside and no notice was taken of it for weeks. One day the sick man reread the circular and concluded to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, although Mrs. Marshall tried hard to dissuade him, saying they would be as ineffectual as all the others; but on April 14—memorable day to him—Mr. Marshall began to take the pills, one after each meal for a start. In a few days a change was noticed and as he continued to take the pills he gradually improved and in a little over a month he was able to take the train for Toronto and visit an astonished brother-in-law. Now he can walk four or five miles with any of his friends.

The Globe representative paid a visit to the house of the man thus rescued from a living death. When the reporter's mission was explained, Mr. Marshall's face lighted up with a smile, which caused a responsive one to rise upon the features of his wife, and he expressed his perfect willingness to tell all that was asked of him.

"Why, I feel a better man now than I did ten years ago," said he, cheerfully. "It's four years next August since I did a day's work but I guess I can soon make a start again. About my illness? It was all caused through falling and hurting my back. I kept getting worse until I couldn't get off a chair without a stick or crutches. The lower part of my body and legs were useless. I tried every doctor and every patent medicine, spending hundreds of dollars. Everything that was likely to help me I got, but I might as well have thrown it in the bay. I suppose my wife has shown you the apparatus I used at one time or another. A dozen city doctors gave me up. I got enough electric shocks for half a dozen men, but they did me no good. I lost control of my bowels and water and couldn't sleep without morphine. During the day my legs were cold and I had to sit by a stove wrapped in a blanket, suffering intense agony from nervous pains in the legs, neck and head. Yes, I received from the Royal Templars a $1,000 check, being declared totally unable to follow my employment. One day in April I took a notion to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, carefully following the directions accompanying each box. I recovered my appetite and regained control of my bowels and water, and I went on getting better and stronger and now you see me stronger and more healthy than I was for years before I was taken ill. I tell you I am feeling first-class," and Mr. Marshall slapped his legs vigorously and gave the lower part of his back a good thumping, afterwards going up and down the room at a lively gait.

"I weigh 160 pounds to day," he continued, "and I've gained thirty pounds since I first took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I haven't such a thing as a pain or ache about me, and another thing, I can walk as easily in the dark as in the light."

Mr. Marshall offered to make an affidavit to the truth of the above story, but the reporter considered that wholly unnecessary. He carried conviction to the inquirer's mind by every word and action, and there was no gainsaying the fact that the cure was one of the most marvelous in the nineteenth century. All the neighbors bore testimony to the genuineness of the cure. None of them ever expected to see Mr. Marshall on his feet again and regarded his restoration to health as nothing short of marvelous.

The headquarters of the Royal Templars of Temperance for Canada are in Hamilton. At the publishing house of the order, Mr. W. W. Buchanan, general manager and one of the most prominent temperance advocates of the Dominion was found. In response to the reporter's question, he said: "Oh, yes, I am well acquainted with Mr. John Marshall. He has been a member of one of the councils of this city for about seven years. He is a well-known citizen and a reliable temperance man. About four years ago he was first taken seriously ill and his case was brought before the order. The provisions under which the total disability is paid in our organization are very strict. The weekly sick benefit is payable to any person under the doctor's care, who is unable to follow their usual avocation, but the total disability is a comparatively large sum, only paid a member who is disabled for life, and declared by medical men to be entirely past all hope of recovery. In Mr. Marshall's case there was some difficulty, it is true; he was examined upon a number of occasions, covering a period of upward of two years. The medical men who examined him all agreed that there was little hope of recovery, but they would not give the definite declaration that our law demands—that the claimant was permanently and totally disabled—until last November. When this declaration by two regular physicians was made and our Dominion Medical referee, we paid Mr. Marshall the total disability benefit of one thousand dollars. He was paid by a check on the Bank of Montreal. There is no doubt whatever about the remarkable character of Mr. Marshall's cure. A large number of our members in this city were intimately acquainted with Mr. Marshall and called upon him frequently. All were unanimous in the belief that he was past all hope of recovery. His cure is looked upon as next to a miracle. I have conversed with him a number of times about it, and he gives the whole credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and the application of cold water which is recommended as a subsidiary treatment by the proprietors of the medicine. He drops into my office every day or two and is apparently enjoying good health now."

The general offices of the order are in the old Bank of Upper Canada building, just opposite the publishing house. Mr. J. H. Land, the Dominion Secretary, was easily found, and in response to the questions asked simply corroborated all that the general manager had said. Mr. Land is a neighbor of Mr. Marshall, living within a block of him in the northeastern part of the city. He was well acquainted with him for years before he was taken sick, and pronounced his recovery as one of the most remarkable things in all his experience.

"I have not much faith in patent nostrums," said Mr. Land, "but Mr. Marshall's case proves beyond a doubt that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a wonderful medicine. He seems to have exhausted all other means and methods of treatment during his long illness and all without any benefit, but his recovery was rapid and wonderful immediately after he commenced using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Inquiries among the city druggists disclosed the fact that an extraordinary demand had arises for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and that the claims made for them by the proprietors are borne out by numerous cures.

John A. Barr, a well-known and popular dispenser of drugs here, told the reporter that he knew of no patent medicine that had such a demand upon it, or one that had done all that was promised for it. He told of several cases of great relief and cure that had come under his notice. Mr. Wm. Webster, after suffering from ataxy for years, from the first had found certain relief from taking the pills, and he is now a new man. Mr. George Lees, after years of illness of a similar nature, had taken the pills, and was able to walk out greatly improved in health. Another case Mr. Barr vouched for was a city patient, who had been cured by the pills of the effects of la grippe, after having been given up by the doctors. Many others had spoken highly of the Pink Pills as a fine remedy for nervous and blood disorders. Other druggists told the same story.

A further investigation revealed the fact that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not a patent medicine in the sense in which that term is usually understood, but are a scientific preparation successfully used in general practice for many years before being offered to the public generally. They contain in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases depending upon vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood and restore the glow of health to pale or sallow cheeks. In the case of men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature.

On further inquiry the writer found that these pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and Brockville, Ontario, and are sold in boxes (never in loose form by the dozen or hundred) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, from either address. The price at which these pills are sold makes a course of treatment comparatively inexpensive as compared with other remedies or medical treatment.

The dry-kilns, planing-mills, offices and store rooms of the Yellow Poplar Lumber company at Coal Grove, Ohio, were destroyed by fire on the 7th inst., together with thirty-four private residences. Fifty million feet of valuable lumber was burned. The total loss is estimated at $750,000.

Raleigh, April 8, 1893.

Mr. W. M. Donald, a prosperous farmer living near Fort Mill, S. C., committed suicide Tuesday of last week, by shooting himself in the head. He was fifty-five years old and a member of Flint Hill Baptist church.

The business portion of the town of Florence, S. C., was destroyed by fire on the 3d inst. Loss $150,000, with only partial insurance. The city hall, Pythian hall and Central hotel are in ruins.

A large seven story brick building in New York City, formerly occupied by the firm of W. Duke, Sons & Co., as a cigarette factory, but more recently, by the American Tobacco Co., of which J. B. Duke is president, as a manufactory of smoking and chewing tobacco, was destroyed by fire on the 2d inst. Estimated loss $400,000, covered by insurance.

Dr. Boykin's Worm Killer.

"The best selling Vermifuge in the market." Recipe furnished to any regular physician when requested.

We have never asked for a certificate. We have some of the strongest ever given—all sent without solicitation. Read a few only of the many evidences of its great merit:

LA GRANGE, N. C., July 1887,

Mr. J. P. Joyner:—I gave my child one dose of Boykin's "Worm Killer," purchased of you. It brought 366 worms. I consider it the best worm medicine made. Respectfully, J. W. THOMAS.

Messrs. I. M. & B. F. Powell, prominent merchants in Columbus county, N. C., wrote us in July, 1887 that "Rev. T. C. Floyd gave his child one dose of Boykin's "Worm Killer," and the result was 301 worms."

Mr. W. J. Davis of Ridgeway, S. C., says: "I have quite a demand for your "Worm Killer." It is the best Vermifuge I get."

Dr. R. H. Edmunds, a well known physician and farmer, writes under date of Ridgeway, S. C., May 26th, 1884, "that a negro girl 10 years old, near him, took two or three doses of the 'Worm Killer,' and passed 366 worms."

Price: 25c. per Bottle. Take no other.

Hymn.

The angel rolled the stone away,
In fullness broke redemption's day,
And types and shadows fled.

List! hear the Conqueror say—"All Hail,
Dismiss your lingering fears:
Henceforth my kingdom shall prevail
In all earth's coming years.

Confide in me, your Risen Lord,
And prove my conquering grace;
Go, joyfully declare my word
To bless the whole, wide race.

All power is mine in earth and heaven,
I send you in my name.
To you the high commission given,
My Gospel go proclaim."

—Rev. F. Denison, in the Christian Secretary.

Doing His Best.

"Yes, dear, if you can only keep that situation we shall get along very well."

"Keep it! I must keep it," Robert spoke with determination. "It will take me a long while, mother, to forget the walks I have taken up and down these streets looking for something to do. If my very best trying will keep it, you may be sure that there I shall stick."

"Your best trying will include a great deal when others have a right to your time and efforts."

"Of course, mother, I shall keep honestly in view the interest of my employer."

Robert had found a situation at the muslin counter of a large dry goods house. It took him some little time to acquaint himself with the qualities of goods which he sometimes impatiently thought were more in the line of women's work. But he remembered that a person who cannot do what he likes must do what he can. Unable through force of circumstances to choose his employment, he wisely resolved to do his very best with what came to his hand. As to what that best might be, he soon found that his opinion slightly differed from that of his employer.

"You needn't be so particular in measuring the goods for a customer," said Mr. Merrill one day. "All these are assumed to be a yard wide."

"But she asked me the width," said Robert.

"Then you should have simply said that they are yard wide goods."

"But some of them fall a little short, sir."

"What is that to you?" Mr. Merrill spoke with a little impatience. "It is your place to sell goods, not to be too particular about the width of them. There isn't one customer in a hundred that will go home and measure her goods if she thinks that in a general way the width is all right."

"In a general way." Robert knew what was meant, for he had heard some of the other clerks, without telling an exact falsehood, clearly avoid telling the exact truth. "I don't feel at all sure I've got a place," Robert concluded in great discouragement after. During the first few weeks, he had several times given offense to his employer by acting firmly upon his own sense of what alone is up to the very letter and spirit of fair and honest dealing. The time seemed to have come to him, which comes to so many, in which a choice must be made between worldly gain and the loyal standing by the fixed principles of right and wrong in which he had been trained.

"It seems to me this piece of goods is not the same make as the last I bought of you." The question was asked by a lady who frequently came to Robert's counter and always made liberal purchases without haggling over prices, or giving unreasonable trouble.

"No, ma'am, it is not," said Robert.

"Have you any more of the same?"

"No, we have sold it out."

"Do you think this," pointing to a piece she had been examining, "is as good? It doesn't seem so to me, but if you assure me that it is, I will take it." Robert caught sight of his employer within easy hearing distance. Mr. Merrill had a way, a good way it is, too, of keeping his own eye over his own interests. And for one moment the boy hesitated. Quickly to his mind came the thought of going home to tell his mother that he had lost his situation, for which he had searched and waited so long. Nothing else in the place, he felt sure, was open to him. The leaving of Mr. Merrill's would mean leaving his home and his widowed mother to find employment elsewhere. By a few smooth words and a trifling evasion he could easily lead Mrs. Denby to believe he thought what he did not think. That was one side of it. But there was a better, higher, nobler side, and Robert will never cease to be thankful for the grace granted him in a moment of sore temptation.

"No, ma'am," he quietly answered. "I don't think the quality quite up to what you bought last."

"And yet it is the same price?"

"Yes. The other was a lot of goods which Mr. Merrill happened on at a forced sale, and he was able to put them low. I really think, however, that this is about as good as any you can get for the money."

"I will look a little further," she said, and went out. Robert, without looking, had felt the angry eyes of his employer, and he now heard his angry voice.

"Is that the way you drive off my customers? That is one of the best I have. She brings in no end of country friends."

"I'm sorry if I have driven her off," said Robert, "but I did the best I could."

"Best you could!" The low tone which Mr. Merrill was obliged to maintain, through fear of being overheard, lent an added force to his words. "Have you forgotten that your pay depends upon the amount of sales you make?"

you thought of looking for another place in which to do your very peculiar 'best'!"

With a weight at his heart Robert turned to attend to the wants of another customer. He had feared this, and yet had hoped that time would have been given him in which he might have been able to recommend himself, by faithful and unremitting attention to duty, as to lead Mr. Merrill to overlook the matters of conscience in which he more and more saw they could never agree. But here it was. He was ready to do his very best by Mr. Merrill, but he must do his best by himself also—must persevere in the seeking of the only great best, which means, first and foremost, faithful service to the Lord. Surely he would reward such service by tender care of his own. And while still keeping eyes and wits on the alert for the duties of the hour, Robert was able to resolve within himself that nothing should ever turn him from the full measure of that service. And close upon the determination came the peace growing out of the added resolution to accept such fortune as might come to him as its result, even though it might be far from what he would have chosen for himself. And in telling of the sorry outlook to his mother he found great comfort in her loving words.

"That's right, my boy. Do your own best, and be very sure the Lord will do his best by you. Perhaps Mr. Merrill will not turn you off."

"Perhaps so," said Robert. "Mrs. Denby came back later and bought a good lot of the goods, and Mr. Merrill heard her tell me that she would take anything I recommended." At the end of the month it would have been easily guessed by any one who closely observed Robert, as he went to Mr. Merrill's office that his mind was not greatly perturbed as to what might be the result of the interview. Mr. Merrill paid his salary without comment and was turning to other things, when Robert said:

"You spoke of my looking for another situation at the end of the month, sir."

"Did I?" Mr. Merrill looked as if he had forgotten. "O, yes, we had a little difference of opinion about one or two small matters. But we will let them pass. Except on the points we touched on, I do not mind saying you have given very good satisfaction."

"Thank you, sir. But I will give you the month's notice, if you please—"

"What's that?" Mr. Merrill gazed at him in surprise. It was he who was accustomed to giving the month's notice. Could it be that this boy was leaving his employ of his own will and pleasure?

"Mr. Denby has offered me a place in his hardware store."

"H'm!" Mr. Merrill took a moment for rather chagrined thought as Robert closed the door. "That is Mrs. Denby's work, of course. They know that perfectly reliable boys are not found every day. I know it too. But, in spite of my knowledge, I have let this one slip through my fingers."—Sidney Dayre, in Interior.

Sedentary Occupations.

An interesting lesson is offered to the student of longevity in the tables made up by life insurance companies, showing the chances of life or death as affected by various occupations.

At first sight there seems to be some glaring inconsistencies in such tables. The profession of medicine, for example, which might be expected to occupy a place among the occupations tending to longest life, is found, on the contrary, among those tending to comparatively short life.

If we leave out of account those occupations which are of necessity peculiarly unhealthful, as, for instance, that of the stoker, which involves the performance of labor in a very hot atmosphere, it appears to be certain that occupations or professions which call for long hours at the desk, or other sedentary work, produce victims of disease sooner than those which necessitate muscular activity.

All persons, therefore, whose occupations are sedentary should make it a matter of duty to counteract the unwholesome tendency of their daily employment by some form of exercise.

Athletes do sometimes die of heart disease, and college students are sometimes seriously injured while playing foot-ball, but many more die or become disabled from disease superinducted by lack of bodily activity.

Of all the possible means of counteracting the effects of confinement in the office, or of other sedentary employments, walking is one of the surest and easiest. With many persons it would be a great gain to health if they would walk to and fro from their places of business in preference to riding.

It does not seem possible to emphasize too strongly the importance which, indeed, amounts to a necessity, of freeing the body of some of its waste products by physical exercise performed daily.

It is true that many animals never take exercise for its own sake. The muscular system of animals is kept in the most perfect condition, however, by their search for food. With them exercise is natural, and therefore perfect of its kind.

A sedentary occupation is to a certain degree, unnatural, and must be offset by exercise.

In walking, the lungs should be expanded and the whole muscular system brought into play as far as possible. A buoyancy is obtained by this means which makes the exercise especially beneficial.—Youth's Companion.

There is but one lake on the surface of the globe from which there is no outlet, and that is the Dead Sea, which receives much but gives nothing. Such a lake is a perfect illustration of a church all of whose efforts terminate upon itself. Around it there will be desolation and in it there will be no life.—Foreign Mission Journal.

Beecham's pills are better than mineral waters

Envelope Flaps.

Only a circular; into the waste-basket it goes. But wait a moment; that circular is in an unsealed envelope; probably another is inside. Cut the gummed flaps neatly from both envelopes, and place them in a small box or drawer. Their uses are numerous. You wish to label your jelly. Use one of these flaps, writing the name upon it, and moistening the gum and sticking on your glass. No hunting for the mucilage bottle, so no time is wasted. A paper is to be mailed, and you are out of wrappers. Wrap it in a piece of brown paper and secure the ends with one of these flaps. A coin is to be sent by mail. Lay a flap on the table, with the coin in the center; double the ungummed part over the coin, then the two ends, cut a little slit on each side, so as to form a tiny flap, and paste it down; your coin will be secure.—Farm and Fireside.

HE TOOK MEDICINE UNTIL IT BECAME A NECESSITY.

BURLINGTON, N. C., Aug. 22, 1892.

Dear Sirs:—I have been a great sufferer with rheumatism and neuralgia for five years, and have been greatly distressed with indigestion for two years. I could not have an action from my bowels without taking medicine in some form. I tried doctors and remedies till I despaired of obtaining relief, at times I was almost helpless, but since using the Electropoise I feel like a new man. My wife was a great sufferer from cramps, she is almost entirely relieved, and is in better health than she has been for a long time. I have used no medicine since I bought the Electropoise; before that, my drug bill was considerable every month. My general health is a great deal better than it has been for years. The Electropoise has proved a wonderful benefit to myself and family, and I heartily recommend it to the suffering.

Yours truly, GEORGE W. HOLT.

Start with the Saplings.

A stage-driver had held the lines for many years, and when he grew old his hands were crooked into hooks, and his fingers were so stiffened that they could not be straightened out. There is a similar process that goes on in our souls when we continue to do the same things over and over. One who is trained from childhood to be gentle, kindly, to control the temper, will grow into the beauty of love. But on the other hand, if one gives way from childhood to all ugly tempers, all bitterness and anger, his life will shape itself into these dispositions.—From "Making the Most of Life."

A Lazy Church.

Sol. Song 5: 3—"I have put off my coat; how shall I put it on? I have washed my feet; how shall I defile them?"

Solomon's Song is an Oriental love poem. It is different, however, from the songs of ordinary poets. We believe that God, in a very special way, inspired its writing. We believe that the bride and groom described in it represent not so much some Eastern monarch and the chief woman of his harem, but rather the King of heaven and his own bride, the church.

Among the most striking incidents of this poem is the one from which the text is taken. It represents the bride at ease. Her garments are laid aside, and she has gone to rest for the night. But during the night she is awakened by the calling of her lover's voice. He is outside at the door, asking that she open it and let him in. But she is not more than half awake, and she turns over drowsily on her couch, asking herself how she possibly can take the trouble to get up, to put on her clothes, and go to the door. "I have put off my coat," she says, "how shall I put it on? I have washed my feet; how shall I defile them?"

A LAZY CHURCH.

That is God's picture of a lazy church; a church at whose door Christ stands, ready to come in and bless it, but whose heart is dull and listless, and that will not take the little trouble of bestirring itself to do its Lord's simplest bidding. It may be such an opportunity will not come to it again. No matter, the one only visitation is despised for the sake of a little slothful indulgence. Ah, that is a familiar as well as a true picture! Many a church has let its first affection for Christ grow dull, regards every Christian duty as burdensome, and instead of enjoying intimate communion with her Lord, asks him to wait outside while she lazily enjoys a little more sleep, a little more slumber, a little more folding of the hands to sleep. Do you remember how Mr. Spurgeon described such a church? He said, "Have you read the Ancient Mariner? I dare say you thought it one of the strangest imaginations ever put together—dead men pulling the ropes, dead men steering. But do you know I have lived to see that time? I have seen a dead man in the pulpit, a dead man as deacon, a dead man handling the plate, dead men sitting to hear." We, as well as Mr. Spurgeon, have seen that, and a sorry state of affairs it is. Such a church moves hell to laughter, the world to scorn, and heaven to sorrow.

No church, no Christian ought ever be in that condition. But almost all of us are so some of the time, and some of us are so almost all of the time. At best we are fitful in our activity for Christ. Our devotion waxes, and then it wanes. We are like the man, whose son, when he was asked whether his father was a Christian, replied that he thought he was, but that he wasn't working at it just now. We are like the man who, when he was asked whether he had been a Christian a long time, replied, "Well, yes, I should say that I have been a Christian off and on for some fifteen years now." Off and on! There is entirely too much of that sort of religion among us to day. Off and on! on during the week of prayer, off all the rest of the year; on during Lent, off just as soon as Easter comes; on so long as the pastor does exactly what pleases them, off just as soon as a sermon strikes at some pet notion or darling sin; on if they are noticed a great deal and consulted about everything, off if sometimes a brother or sister hurries by without seeing them, or something is done without their advice; on at festival seasons, off in times of matter of fact Christian work. Too many Christian lives are simply a succession of offs and ons, ups and downs, revivals and backslidings, alternate chills and fevers, burning hot one week, the next week freezing cold. Such people are like the pea in the juggler's tricks—now you see it, and now you don't. They are here to day and gone to-morrow. There is no constancy in them.

It was prophesied of the water that was to issue from Jerusalem, "In summer and in winter it shall be." So it should be in spiritual things. A man's religion ought to run fairly uniform. He ought always to be "working at it," in season and out of season, when the sky is fair and when it is foul, when the tide is in and when it is out. Christians ought to remember that the Lord's service is to be held on Sundays when the rain pelts and the snow drives, as well as when the sun shines. And the church's work has to be done when Christian fervor is at zero, as well as when it has risen to fever heat. There are some who do understand that—bless their hearts, they are the joy and stay of every pastor's life. They never find it too far to come to church; it is never too stormy; never too hot; never too cold. The difficulties of the work do not dismay them. Snubs and slights do not drive them away. They can be depended on. Theirs is a steady-going piety. They take hold of the work vigorously, and they keep hold. Each one of them is worth a score of the spasmodic kind. In prosperity they are on hand, in adversity they are not absent, and in times of crisis many a church has found in them its very life.

Now, curiously enough, many a man who is not slothful in business is slothful in church. You know as well as I do, some men who can talk glibly enough behind the counter or in the caucus. They are positively eloquent in selling goods or in winning votes, but in the prayer-meeting they are as silent as the sphinx. They do not recover their powers of speech until the benediction is pronounced, and they begin to denounce the meeting's dullness. And I believe that if the ordinary church prayer-meeting suffers a great deal from the prosiness and want of judgment of a few speakers, it suffers a hundred-fold more from the indifference and silence of those who completely shirk their duty.

Another form of this heresy of spiritual laziness is found in those who pray much and do little. I believe in prayer—the prayer of faith. But I do not believe the prayer of faith was meant to be a substitute for our own efforts. Merely praying will not ditch a man's farm for him. He may pray from now till doomsday, but if he does nothing else, it will not bring him in a single head of wheat from his land, a single apple from his orchard, a pint of milk from his dairy. I believe in the prayer of faith; but if a merchant depends only on prayer to build up his trade, not a customer will come to his store. God puts no premium on laziness. A man who wants harvests must work for them as well as pray for them. A man who wants customers must work for them. So it is with harvests of souls, so it is with adding members to the church. We pray for men's conversion, pray earnestly. But suppose the Lord Jesus should come into our meetings and ask each of us, "How many souls have you tried to save? How many have you, and you?" Nine-tenths of us, if we answered honestly, would have to say, "Not one, Lord, not one." That sort of prayer—prayer without effort—is an insult to God. God is solemnly called upon to do what his people can do, but will not. God is asked to bless his people's indolence and cowardice. Now the Lord Jesus has told us plainly what he thinks of such Christians. He called the slothful servant a wicked servant. Slothfulness is wickedness. Wide as the doors of mercy are, they are not wide enough to admit a man who comes into God's church merely to rest.

I have lately heard of a man who took passage in a stage coach. There were first, second, and third-class passengers. But when he looked into the coach, he saw all the passengers sitting together without distinction. He could not understand it till by and by they came to a hill, and the coach stopped, and the driver called out, "First-class passengers keep their seats, second-class passengers get out and walk, third-class passengers get out and push." Now in the church we have no room for first-class passengers—people who think that salvation means an easy ride all the way to heaven. We have no room for second-class passengers—people who are carried most of the time and who, when they must work out their own salvation, go trudging on giving never a thought to helping their fellows along. All church members ought to be third class passengers—people who, whenever there is need, are ready to dismount and push all together, and push with a will. That was John Wesley's definition of a church, you know—"All at it, and always at it." And that is a true definition. Every Christian ought to be a worker; ought to be in himself an endeavor society, and more than that, he ought to be in himself a doing society.

SOME OF THE RESULTS.

Now let me mention a few simple results of a life of not doing.

1. Indolence in the Christian life prevents the salvation of others. It used to be said of Lord Eldon that he prevented more good than any other man ever did. So we may say of a lazy Christian, or a lazy church. An active church gives power to the pulpit. A sluggish church kills the pulpit.

2. Indolence in the Christian life destroys our own hope of heaven. The lazy man is at bottom a bad man, in the church or out of it. God cannot tolerate him in his kingdom here or hereafter. The redeemed in heaven serve him day and night. We can hope to enter on that service only as we are active here. A teacher of one of our freedmen's schools told me that, one day as she sat at her window, she saw two negroes loading a cart. One of them was disposed to shirk. The other stopped, and looking sharply at his lazy companion, said, "Sam, do you expect to go to heaven?" "Yes," was the reply. "Then take hold and lift," said the other. There was profound philosophy in that remark. There are scores of Christians in our churches who expect to go to heaven, who would greatly increase their chances of going there by taking hold and lifting some of the burdens which they are letting their brethren bear alone. And that, I believe, is the only cure for the sloth to which we all are liable, to take hold of God's work with the little strength we have, and with God's blessing, the exercise will increase our strength manifold, and by and by overcome the drowsiness of sin.

Not long ago there was brought into the hospital near our church, a woman suffering from laudanum poisoning. She had almost succumbed to the fatal languor it produces. The doctors worked with all their might to save her life. They shouted in her ears, lifted her to her feet, dragged her up and down, and would not allow her a moment of the rest she begged for. A little treacherous slumber would have left her a stiffened corpse, and they had to coax her, pinch her, threaten her, anything and everything to drive away the deadly lethargy. At last they succeeded, and afterward the woman expressed her appreciation of their efforts. She acknowledged that what seemed cruel treatment was after all merciful, and the hands that roused her, and goaded her, and pushed and pulled her about, were the hands that saved her. Did you ever see a church like that drugged woman—a church whose members wanted only to lie down and sleep themselves into spiritual death! You never saw such absolute unity as prevails there. Everybody is satisfied—satisfied with their pulpit, satisfied with their church, satisfied with themselves, satisfied to lie down and be the stumbling-blocks over which sinners trip and plunge into hell. All they ask is to be let alone. God pity such a church as that! God send his Holy Spirit to stir them up! God send among them some fearless messenger of his who shall make them uncomfortable by the plain preaching of the Word, and if this fails may some providential calamity startle them into activity! And then, like the benumbed, dying woman, they will acknowledge that the hand that uncomfortably stirred them up was the hand that saved them. There is no other cure, dear friends, for the indifference, the apathy, the sloth, that touches all of us more or less. Our only deliverance is in movement, movement, movement—a tireless activity in the work that the Lord Jesus calls us to.

3. An indolent Christian life will spoil the joy of heaven even if we could enter there. They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever and ever. But the Christian who has won nobody to Christ shall wear a crown that is starless. Would that sort of a crown satisfy you? Those who work for souls will be welcomed by those they save into everlasting habitations. Does it give you any joy to think that perhaps no one will welcome you? Would you be satisfied never to meet in all the fields of glory one person whom you helped to Christ? Would that be heaven to you? Would it be to anybody?

Oh, dear friends, let us stop frittering our time away. Let us seek to do for Christ not as little as we can, but as much as we can. Oh, that all slothfulness may be driven out of us, and that these hands of ours which he has redeemed, may be always doing with their might what we have such opportunity to do. I have read of a young city missionary who once dreamed that in a month's time he would die. The dream came to him three times in one night, and though he was a matter-of-fact sort of a man, he felt there must be something in it. He did not sit and mope about it as we might have done. He did not shut himself up in his room and send for the doctor. He went to work. He never put in such a month's work before. He never before enjoyed such intimate communion with God. He did everything he had to do, with all his might, for as he thought he had only a month's time, and then he was to stand before the judgment seat of God. Oh, that we might be stimulated by such a vision, not for a month only, but constantly. Oh, that we might live in full view of the judgment seat. It would help us to be diligent every moment of the day of life, and sooner than we expect, perhaps, the night will come when we shall enter upon our rest and receive our reward.—Rev. Frank M. Goodchild.

Hindrances to Spiritual Power.

A single sin, however apparently trifling, however hidden in some obscure corner of our consciousness—a sin which we do not intend to renounce—is enough to render real prayer impracticable. A course of action not wholly upright and honorable, feelings not entirely kind and loving, habits not spotlessly chaste and temperate—any of these are impassable obstacles. If we know of a kind act which we might, but do not intend to, perform; if we be aware that our moral health requires the abandonment of some pleasure which yet we do not intend to abandon, here is cause enough for the loss of all spiritual power.—F. P. Cobbe.

About the best test of Christian character we know, is the exhibition of humility, love and gratitude when told of our shortcomings. If there is anything that will wake up the evil in our souls it is reproof, and yet how much we need it.—Central Baptist.

The Untrained Laity.

As to whether there may be advantage in and necessity for a laity trained in Christian work, much depends on our conception of what the church really is. Many Baptists are either grossly ignorant of what actually constitutes a Christian church according to the Scriptures, or have fallen into the Romish view of thinking it "a divinely constituted, visible and organic body, knit together by the profession of the same faith and the communion of the same sacraments under the government of lawful pastors, etc;" in all of which adherence and belief cut the most figure with the individual member. If, on the other hand, we regard it as "a society of persons professing faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as the Son of God and the Saviour of men, and organized in allegiance to him for Christian work and worship, etc.," we see the vital necessity of fitting and training every member of the body so organized for the highest and most effective service possible.

Thus it was in the beginning when some 120 persons, in the time between Christ's ascension and the Day of Pentecost, met for prayer, supplication, and the fulfillment of Christ's promise, believing that there was a work before them which they were about to be called to perform; and for this work's sake they afterwards sought co-operation, combination, organization and the training and equipment of all who were to take part in it. Read the record of unceasing toil and heroic achievement, and then glance at the modern occupant of a cushioned pew, who, finding the softest corner and the most restful posture, sings, with a decidedly affirmative mental reservation,

"Must I be carried to the skies

and tell me if this man, or woman, is in true and vital relation with Christ's church!

In olden times the Scotch divines were wont to "fence the table" at communion season by warning and debarring unworthy participants. Oh, brethren of the ministry, is it not the fault of our time that we do not warn off, at the very threshold of the church, those who come without sense of individual responsibility, without the spirit of labor, without willingness to "take up the cross?" Is our anxiety to add to the number of scalps dangling at our ecclesiastical belts so great that the utter absence of moral earnestness is an applicant for church-membership, in a small matter? Would it not be wiser and more scriptural to say: "The holy privilege you seek is one of great happiness and blessedness, but it has a serious side, and we would not have you thoughtlessly or ignorantly enter into it? It means service, —enlistment for life; work, true work in Christ's cause and for his sake, continuously, and as the Spirit may indicate. It means also sacrifice. Do you fully understand what this implies? It is the very essence of Christianity. We would rather encourage than hinder you, but the union you now seek must be formed understandingly." How different from the above the practice in many churches is, thousands who read this can testify.

Having entered the church, the question now is, what kind of service is required, and are there adequate provisions for fitting and training the new member for useful work and fullest development? Let me divide the question, and indicate first the various distinct and special kinds of service required in the ordinary work of the church from its lay-members. The variety of service will surprise many who have not given thought to it, and yet I feel certain some are omitted in the enumeration that follows: Leaders in things spiritual; workers in devotional meetings; personal work with inquirers; expounders and teachers of the Word; Sunday-school teachers, officers and workers; evangelistic service, various; work through denominational organizations; social work of many kinds; reclaiming backsliders, and wayward; counseling, advising, encouraging; philanthropic work, various; care of poor, sick and dying; visitation of afflicted; care of temporalities, business, finance; committee service, various; musical service; work with young people; church publications, etc.

Some of these may appear to be so nearly akin as to permit of being combined, yet I think they require specializing in most cases, and call for a tact, skill, and expertness that only thorough training can supply.

This brings us to consideration of the adequacy of the provision for furnishing this training in the individual church. Churches differ very materially in their practice at this point. Some, in an honest, but indirect, vague, and desultory fashion, are making effort to develop generally the spiritual gifts of their members; but let us remember that gifts and endowments of all kinds are required and can be used if properly trained. Others, and they are the large majority, are making no such effort and would justify the charge that there is no such provision. Do we all know that the training in special manner, for special work, of the lay-members of the individual church, according to a carefully considered, intelligent, progressive and well organized plan, and faithfully persisted in, does not exist at all? Do we not know that the teachers' meetings, Bible expositions, missionary circles, and special young people's meetings, are mostly but the merest approach to this great practical and promising work of the church; a work that if rightly performed upon half its members would more than quadruple its efficiency?

In active, working churches we very readily fall into the custom of multiplying meetings,—sometimes unwisely,—but who has suggested a meeting for systematic general training in Christian work, and what work needs it more? If there are two or three meetings a week, why should not one be for this purpose; and in the larger communities why should not competent persons be brought in to aid in the work?—Andrew McLeish, in The Standard.

Call Upon Me.

The superintendent of a factory in which scores of weavers were employed was anxious that the work done in it should be as perfect as possible. But as many of his employees were young and unskilled, he placed an electric button near to each loom. He told his weavers whenever there was any trouble, even a little kink or tangle, to touch the button and he would come. One little girl took him at his word. Just as soon as the yarn began to kink, she stopped her loom and summoned the superintendent. He came, not angry and impatient because he was disturbed, but thanking the little girl for summoning him. He knew just what the trouble was and soon removed it. Another weaver, older and less confiding, tried to fix things herself. But she only made them worse. She did the very best that she could. She told the superintendent so with tears, when he came along and saw what a muss she was in. But his reply was: "Doing your best is sending for me. I am here on purpose to help when I am needed. I want to come as soon as there is any trouble, for you know that I am responsible for all the work that is done in the factory."

Now, is not our position like that of these weavers? We are all working, whether consciously or unconsciously, whether willingly or unwillingly, upon the tapestry which God is weaving in the loom of the ages—upon that display of his "manifold wisdom" which he will make to the principalities and powers through the church. He is therefore interested, deeply interested, in us, and in what we are doing; and for this reason he wants us to come to him with all our doubts and fears, as well as with all our sins. He wants to be our helper in order that through us his glory may be revealed. We can go to him as freely and confidently as the little girl touched the electric button. We can say: "It is his work. We have a right to call upon him, and we are not doing the best we can until we do so."

Let us ponder the inspired statement of the fiftieth psalm: "Call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee and thou shalt glorify me." Yes, God has an interest in the deliverance. He wants us to be wise and good and happy, in order that we may illustrate the riches of his grace. He wants us to be witnesses to others of his fidelity to his promises, of the profit of godliness. This fact ought to quicken our faith and make us instant in prayer.—Selected.

Pathetic Unselfishness.

I remember being taken by my mother when I was a child to see a poor woman who was dying of a cancer. The disease was eating its way to a vital part and her doctor had given her exactly one month as her utmost limit of life. She was preparing for her end in a way that seemed practical and prosaic enough, but that struck me as being pathetic in its self-forgetfulness.

She was sitting up in bed with a basket beside her, finishing up the family mending, showing her eldest daughter—on whose thirteen-year old shoulders the burden of household care was to fall—how to fell down seams in the little brother's knee patches, and how to darn the heel of father's socks so that he would never feel the difference. She had impressed upon the girl how to make her father's favorite potato pone, how to manage her young sister when she got into the sulks, what to do for her father when he has his periodical fit of the cramps, and everything else she could think of that would insure comfort in the humble home she was leaving. She had all the work planned that she would do during the short span of life that was given to her. Her burial clothes were folded away in a drawer with sweet basil leaves among them.

I was reminded of the incident by reading in a paper recently of a man in Milwaukee who is preparing for something more terrible than death—insanity. He will be violently insane in a few weeks, and he knows it. Some time ago his skull was fractured; a gristle is fast forming about the cracked edges, which will surely press upon the brain and make him a maniac. He talks calmly and rationally of his approaching fate, and spends every moment of his brief term of sanity in making provisions for his family when he shall no longer be able to care for them. It is a situation worthy the pen of a dramatist.—Selected.

The man who tries to break away gradually from his evil habit will surely fail, for the reason that he begins by yielding in measure to his enemy. Any compromise with evil, however slight, is wrong; and one's only safety is in fleeing utterly the wrong.—Central Advocate.

Keep looking to Jesus, dear soul, and you will have the peace that passeth all understanding. Cleave you to Jesus, trust him by faith, and you shall be [illegible] you shall be made warm and vigorous, full of activity in God's service.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 19, 1893.

Rev. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

"What Baptists Believe," by the late J. L. Burrows, will be given to every new subscriber to the BIBLICAL RECORDER who will pay $2.00 in advance for a years' subscription. We will also give the book to every old subscriber who will pay his subscription to date and a year in advance.

Think of it! Your denominational paper, the subscription price of which is $2.00, one year, and a neatly bound book of over a hundred pages, containing a clear and fair expression of what Baptists believe and practice, all for the price of the paper.

Remember, this offer is to new and old subscribers alike.

ATTACKS UPON THE BIBLE.

One has but to watch the drift of the skeptical literature of the day to be convinced of the fact that the authors of such literature are disposed to make what capital they can out of Scripture incidents and statements which they imagine place God out of sympathy with the humanitarianism of an enlightened age. Ingersoll, Voltaire, and men like them, are fond of pointing, we believe, to such incidents as the destruction of Sodom, the death of the first born in Egypt, the extermination of Achan and his house, and that of the Amalekites, as furnishing proof that God in such cases was deficient in mercy, and, hence, chargeable with cruelty. They also claim that comparing God's statement that David was a man "after his own heart" with David's conduct in the case of Uriah, forces one to question the inspiration of the Bible, or places one under the necessity of admitting that the Bible contains hopeless contradictions; or else, to the conclusion that God, in some cases at least, winks at immoral conduct and uses partiality in the administration of justice.

In all such attacks as these on the Bible, or on God its author, those who are bold enough to make them, and those that essay to reply to them, should always remember two important facts:—

1. That unconverted and wicked men are not prepared to rightly interpret the language of God's Word, and are poor judges of what is right in the conduct of a sinless God.

2. That God is the Supreme Ruler of the universe, and is under no obligation to answer for himself at the so called bar of human justice.

That the remembrance of these things would throw a great deal of light on the discussions that spring up on such questions as those mentioned, one cannot for a moment doubt. How often do we find opponents of the Bible reasoning about things which, from the very nature of religion and true piety, they do not understand, and never can understand, in their unregenerate state. There are problems in God's providence, and in his dealings with men, that perplex even good men who live near the Throne, and know many of the mysteries of God, unknown to the world of sinful men. David must have been trying to solve one of these problems when he wrote, "This thing was too hard for me, until I went into the sanctuary." If there are mysteries that perplex good men who for long years have enjoyed the enlightening influence of the Holy Spirit, and yet, which become so clear in the light of the openings of God's providence as to prompt them to say, "He doeth all things well," we need not be surprised at the foolish vagaries of those who by life and moral character are utterly unable to discuss such questions. The chemist would have the same reason to smile at the presumption and blind credulity of the unlettered swain who might say, "I have studied nature for many years, and I know her secrets as well as you do," that the Christian man has to smile at the almost insane ravings of wicked men who presume to rightly interpret God's Word in the light of their own experiences and his providence.

And how often do converted and unconverted men forget that God is the supreme [illegible] over all, and in all. There is an [illegible] attack going on among men on [illegible] doctrine of predestination, and [illegible] attacks are such as to plainly [illegible] have forgotten that God is [illegible] that really they have no more [illegible] God's dealings with them [illegible] say to the potter, "Why [illegible] them?" "Jacob have I hated," [illegible] forgetting the essence of [illegible] eyes which men may [illegible] and yet it is a part of the Word. It is a noticeable fact that Ingersoll is particularly severe on this doctrine. Why this is so it is not difficult to understand. Nothing is better calculated to fill a bold rebel with rage than to hear, from time to time, that the King whom he has madly tried to preach out of existence still lives, and will summon him after awhile to appear before him and answer for his deeds.

It may not be amiss in this connection to add a few comments on some of the incidents mentioned in Old Testament history, on which men of the kind mentioned delight to dwell, and which they suppose furnish them with strong arguments against God or against the inspiration of the Scriptures. For instance, the overthrow and destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah may be cited as an instance of divine cruelty. The world, however, will never know the moral depth to which this people had sunk. The sins of the men and women of these cities were such that God could no longer tolerate them in his sight. The cup of their iniquity was full; and he who gave them life had a right to take it. If these people sent up an intolerable stench in the nostrils of Jehovah, did he not have a right to remove it? But how about the innocent children that were cut off with their wicked parents! Why should the innocent suffer with the guilty it may be asked. To this it may be replied that if these little ones were cut off in the days of their infancy they were saved. Death is not always a penalty or a punishment. It may be, as in this case, a blessing in disguise. If these children of the Sodomites had lived to grow up to be men and women they would have certainly been sinners, and perhaps more wicked than the parents before them. If then they were saved, then God showed mercy instead of cruelty in cutting them off.

So far as the destruction of Achan and his house was concerned, the same argument holds good. This impressive event carries with it the additional lesson that when God gives a command he means it, and that it will not do to trifle with the Lord. This, by the way, is just what a good many people at the present day presume to do. They see from the Bible that God has commanded certain things to be done in a certain way, in some cases setting the example himself; and yet they presume to go counter to the commands, or substitute something else in their place—a very risky thing indeed! It may be that God intended, for all time, to rebuke by this incident the spirit of covetousness and the folly of trying to rob him of that which he claims as his own.

Again, when it comes to extermination of the Amalekites it is to be remembered that their fathers had fallen upon the Israelites when they were least prepared to defend themselves. They had made a desperate attempt to destroy God's people, and thus to thwart God's plan of redeeming his people, and through them of blessing the world. It may not seem, on first sight, that they should have suffered for the sins of their forefathers; but this kind of suffering is the result, to some extent, of natural and spiritual laws. Besides, these ancient people seem to have been, as the Bedouin of to-day, a kind of robber people, and quite likely the sins of the generation cut off made them very offensive in God's sight. We are also forcibly reminded that though God's vengeance for wrong doing may be delayed, yet it will come; and that retribution for sin, though withheld, will in his own time be meted out to the wicked.

And there is no contradiction to be found in such passages as the one that declares David was a man "after God's own heart." David was a man—a great and good man; but yet, one with well defined faults. He was ever striving to do right, but Satan mastered him for the time, more than once, and then he did wrong. When he saw his sin he confessed it. When he lost the joy of salvation he followed God so hard for his mercy and grace that he could say, "As the hart panteth after the water-brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, oh God." The man that got after God in this way was a man after God's own heart.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Prof. J. R. Hankins has removed from Brownwood, Texas, to Dawson, Ga.

....Rev. M. Baldwin has changed his postoffice address from Winston to Huntsville, Yadkin county.

....Elder Thos. Carrick was with Elder Fant at High Point on the night of April 12th to preach on "Centennial of Missions."

....Rev. C. B. Williams of Winton occupied the pulpit of the First Baptist church, Fayetteville, on Sunday morning and night, the 16th.

....Mrs. G. A. Holding, relict of the late Calvin Holding, died in Raleigh on Monday morning last. The funeral took place at Wake Forest on Tuesday afternoon, the 18th.

....Dr. W. W. Landrum of Richmond, Va., is aiding Dr. J. W. Carter in a series of meetings in the First church, Raleigh. Dr. Landrum preached his first sermon on Monday night, the 17th, his text being "I went out full, and the Lord brought me home again empty." From Ruth 1:21. A large congregation greeted the Doctor at this first service, and a good meeting is anticipated. In addition to the services each night, there will be a daily meeting at 4 o'clock p. m.

....Rev. I. W. Thomas of Caldwell is reported to be doing the best preaching and pastoral work of his life, and his churches hopeful and active.

....Dr. R. D. Fleming of Warrenton, Dr. W. H. Edwards of Wake Forest, and Rev. W. R. Gwaltney of Wake Forest called to see us last Thursday.

....Rev. John E. White, pastor of the Baptist church, has gone up to Enfield to assist Rev. Q. C. Davis in a protracted meeting.—Wilson Mirror.

....It is not expected that the States will be represented in the Southern Baptist Convention on moneys for the Permanent Fund in the Centennial of missions.

....The pastor, Rev. J. W. Wildman, is conducting a series of very interesting meetings in the Baptist church at Wadesboro, we learn from the Messenger-Intelligencer.

....Rev. C. G. Jones, at present pastor of the First Baptist church of Chattanooga, Tenn., has been called to the First Baptist church at Roanoke, Va.—Baptist Courier.

....Dr. J. J. Hall is in Lynchburg, Va., aiding Bro. Truett in a meeting of much interest, and Dr. Durham preached for the Tabernacle people last Sunday morning and night.

....It is reported that Rev. Thos. Dixon, Jr., will shortly move his family from New York to Charles City, Va., and that he will go from that point to New York to preach every Sunday.

....Dr. W. E. Hatcher will deliver the address before the Literary Societies, and Dr. T. G. Jones will preach the sermon, at the close of Oxford Female Seminary, May 28th and 29th.

....Rev. Chas. L. Williams of Upland, Pa., has accepted the call to the chair of English Literature in Denison University, Granville, O., and will enter upon his duties there in September.

....We baptized nine candidates into the fellowship of Brooklyn church last week, and five again last night. We expect the Lord to keep us disturbing the waters very frequently.—Brooklyn Baptist.

....It is now the intention of Pastor Fant to begin a series of meetings at the Baptist church here about May 15th. He will be assisted by Rev. C. A. G. Thomas of Greensboro.—High Point Enterprise.

....A series of revival meetings are being held at the Baptist church this week. The pastor, Rev. R. VanDeventer, is being ably assisted by Rev. T. J. Taylor of Warrenton.—Henderson Gold Leaf, April 13.

....Bro. W. B. Wingate and family have removed from Ogden, Utah, to Salt Lake City, Utah, where they will in future reside. They send greetings through the RECORDER to their friends in this State.

....A series of protracted meetings are now being held nightly in the First Baptist church. The pastor, Rev. J. H. Edwards, is being assisted by Rev. C. A. Jenkens of Oxford.—Goldsboro Headlight, April 13.

....Rev. J. A. Hoyle and his little mission church at Maiden, Lincoln county, are reported in good condition—making progress—large congregations and Sunday school, and their new house of worship to be completed this year.

...."No man has a right to take offense because his opinions are controverted."—Western Recorder. But many persons do thus take offense, but it is a sign of weakness, generally, both in the person and the opinion held.

....Rev. J. M. Bridges, who has had charge of the Green Street Baptist church at Spartanburg for three months, has just closed a meeting and has added fifty to the church, twenty by baptism and thirty by letter.—Shelby Review.

....We have never understood just how Dr. Arthur T. Pierson, a Presbyterian minister and writer of many unreadable books, became the temporary pastor of that great Baptist congregation (Spurgeon's Tabernacle).—Religious Herald.

....Rev. A. W. Crabtree has moved from Hornet to Arlington, Mecklenburg county, and requests his correspondents to note the change. Bro. Crabtree's horse died recently, and he is now compelled to use a borrowed one to go to his appointments.

....Bro. James V. McCall, sheriff of Caldwell and clerk of his Association, was in Raleigh last Friday, and reports the cause in a most hopeful condition in his section. It would not take many members like Bro. McCall to make things hopeful in any church.

....An abstract of Prof. W. L. Poteat's paper—"The Effect on the College Curriculum of the Introduction of the Natural Sciences"—read by him before the North Carolina College Association at Raleigh, February 25th, 1893, appears in the Science of March 31st.

....Rev. Elias Dodson was wont to say: "Workers never grumble, and grumblers never work." We are reminded of this by what we have recently seen from certain grumblers in some of the papers in this State about our Boards and the mission work in and out of the State.

....The Lord is greatly blessing our work here (Elizabeth City). At the regular services during the past month, seventeen have been added, and nine of them by profession and baptism. Our house is taxed to its utmost capacity, even with extra seats. Pray for us.—Calvin S. Blackwell.

....At last accounts Elders G. M. Webb and O. L. Stringfield were holding meetings in the court house at Ashboro with good prospects of a successful meeting. Ashboro is one of the country towns in the State where we have never had a Baptist church. Our Board is trying to establish the Baptist cause in that large and wealthy county.

....Rev. D. McLeod of Washington is expecting to hold special meetings soon, and to have the aid of Rev. J. H. Lambeth or Rev. L. G. Broughton. This is one of the mission stations of our Board, and in this large and wealthy county, Beaufort, the Baptists have only three or four small churches.

....The Murfreesboro Index of April 7th stated that President J. B. Brewer had been offered the Presidency of two other female colleges, and the RECORDER copied the statement last week, but we are glad to state this week that Prof. Brewer will remain at Murfreesboro. We can't afford to let such men leave our State.

....Dr. B. F. Dixon of the Greensboro Female College has announced his resignation as President of the College to take effect in June. He will be succeeded by Dr. F. L. Reid of Raleigh, N. C.—News and Observer. Bro. Reid will not give up the Advocate, and we understand Dr. Dixon will go to Shelby to practice medicine.

....Bro. Peele says he thinks he will have the new Baptist church, at Jacksonville, Onslow county, in less than sixty days. This will be the first church building that ever graced that little town. It is not behind in bar-rooms, however. We are glad to know that the Lord is to have a good house there.—Brooklyn Baptist.

....Rev. S. C. Tapp, now at the Chicago University, writes as follows in renewing his subscription: "I cannot do without the old RECORDER. It comes weekly like a letter from home. Among all of the papers which come here from all parts of the country, I see none that are superior to the RECORDER. It is true to the Baptist cause, 'solid in doctrine'."

....Hertford church is moving up—interesting meetings. Prayer-meetings every Thursday night well attended. Dear Bro. Burfoot is helping me to carry on the work. He is one among the best men I ever met in my life. We, the Hertford church, by God's help will repair our house this year. Please remember our work in Hertford in your prayers. God and God alone only knows what this dear church has passed through.—Josiah Elliott.

....The spirit of missions is growing in Georgia. The First Baptist church of Augusta has taken upon itself the support of a missionary in China. The First church of Macon supports a missionary in Italy. The church at Hawkinsville has also one in Italy, and the Woman's Missionary Society and the Young Men's Society of Rome have taken upon them the support of a missionary in Mexico.—Christian Index.

....At the session of the Charleston Baptist Association, held at Black Swamp church 1789, a query was sent up, viz.: "Is it consistent with gospel order for a minister to have the pastoral care of two distinct constituted churches at the same time?" "Answered in the negative; yet we are of opinion that the pastor of one church may occasionally administer the ordinances and assist in another which is destitute."

....A limited first class ticket via Atlanta and Chattanooga, or via Asheville, Knoxville and Chattanooga to Nashville, Tenn., from Raleigh, costs $19. The roads east of the Mississippi have not yet agreed on terms to the Southern Baptist Convention. The cost will be, perhaps, one first-class fare, or one and a fourth, for the round trip. Will give notice so soon as the roads agree, and will publish next week the names of delegates appointed by the Board.—C. Durham, Cor. Sec.

....Last week we asked for information about the grave of Capt. Merrill, a deacon in old Jersey Baptist church, and one of the Regulators who was hanged at Hillsboro in 1771, and now we give the following from Bro. W. A. Graham: "I think Capt. Merrill was buried with the others hanged at same time near the large oak tree used as a gallows. It is in the grove in front of Mrs. P. C. Cameron's residence. Mr. Cameron, a few years before his death, placed a large slab at the grave."

....The time was when Baptists were accused of being opposed to education. Whatever may have been true in the past, Baptists are now in the front, educationally. For instance, in this country the Baptists have nineteen theological schools, the Presbyterians fourteen, the Episcopalians thirteen, Methodists eleven, Congregationalists ten, and other denominations range from five down to one. The Roman Catholics have twenty. So it seems that Baptists have a larger number of theological institutions, and we believe a larger number of students for the ministry than any other protestant denomination.—Ex.

....Mrs. John B. Johns, an aged Christian, a member of Mt. Moriah Baptist church, Wake county, for more than forty years, was buried last Sunday evening. Dr. C. Durham preached the funeral just before the burial to a large congregation of the neighbors and friends. Many colored people were there. One old colored man said to the preacher: "That was my old misses funeral you just preached. I heard all what you said, and I felt it too. She was the best woman ever lived and ever died."

....Good fortune has again come to our Theological Seminary. Mrs. Minnie Caldwell has conveyed to the Seminary real estate in and near Louisville sufficient to handsomely endow the President's chair and more. The value of the property is variously estimated, but it is perhaps safe to say that it will yield $75,000. It is for the William Beverly Caldwell, Jr. Endowment of the Presidency of the Seminary and for whatever else the trustees may decide. Mrs. Caldwell thus honors the memory of her deceased husband. She is a daughter of the late George W. Norton, Esq., whom she greatly resembles, and whose strong qualities of head and heart she has inherited.—Western Recorder.

....For want of space, some communications are crowded out of this issue.

....It is announced that Mr. James M. Brinson, formerly of Newbern, N. C., at present of Colorado Springs, Col., and Miss Mamie H., daughter of the late Rev. J. E. Carter, will be united in marriage at noon on Tuesday, the 25th inst., in the hall of the Philomathesian Society at Wake Forest College, N. C.

....The report on Foreign Missions states that we did not need men nor money for the foreign field. Assistant Secretary Bell took issue with this feature of the report, and from the needs of the field as they have come to the Foreign Board, showed that there was great need for discreet, efficient and consecrated men. There is need for just such men as fill pastorates in Georgia. Such men are in great demand for our foreign field.—Index.

....Rev. Baylus Cade, who has been assisting Dr. Leonard in mission work in Ohio for some months, is on a visit to friends in this city (Huntingdon, W. Va.) and vicinity. It was a great pleasure to meet Bro. Cade after some ten years of absence. He preached for Dr. Walker's people last Sunday, morning and evening, after which the meeting and greeting of old friends and relatives was thoroughly enjoyed.—Baptist Banner.

....The Georgia Baptist State Convention met in its seventy first session with the church in Dawson last week, Rev. J. H. Kilpatrick, President. The Convention was largely attended. They had a pleasant and harmonious session. The report of the treasurer for all objects showed the reception and disbursement of $109,216.70. Of this amount about $17,000 was used in State Missions. Georgia has 329,851 members in her Baptist churches, and many large and wealthy churches.

....Bro. M. A. Adams, Monroe, N. C., April 12, 1893, writes: "We are in a most glorious meeting now. Our house does not furnish sufficient seating capacity at regular service night, and we use all available space now in our meeting. There were ten conversions last night, and about twenty-five asked for prayer. There is a deep conviction throughout the town. My work is pleasant. My people are loving, kind and thoughtful. They give a most hearty co-operation. I am glad to be again identified with my North Carolina brethren. God bless you in your work and may you long live and remain at your post."

....The new Baptist church at Lowell is very nearly completed. The dedication exercises will be held the fifth Sunday in the present month. Mr. A. P. Earney tells us that Dr. T. H. Pritchard, of Charlotte, will preach the dedication sermon.——Rev. J. F. Morris, who recently had his leg amputated in Charlotte, has resumed his ministerial labors to the great delight of his friends. The charges he resigned when his illness had grown desperate all waited for him to recover. They did not accept the resignation and he is now filling his regular appointments as before.—Gastonia Gazette.

Another Word as to the Centennial.

Dr. T. T. Eaton writes me that he wishes to hear from all the States as to what has been done for the Centennial by the first of May, so that he may prepare a report to be submitted to the Southern Baptist Convention, which meets in Nashville, Tenn., May the 12th.

I therefore address this note to all interested, asking them to forward, at once, the reports of each Association to the members of the Centennial Committee appointed by our State Convention. The work of the Committee was divided. The matter of looking after the current expenses and of enlarging the foreign work, was entrusted to Dr. C. Durham, while the matter of raising North Carolina's part of the Permanent Centennial Fund was committed to the other five members of the Committee. In apportioning the associations to the different members of the Committee, Dr. J. L. Carroll of Chapel Hill had assigned to him the Beulah, Liberty, Montgomery, Mt. Zion, Pilot Mountain, Stony Creek, Three Forks, Yadkin and Elkin Associations. To Dr. J. D. Hufham, Tarboro, were given the Chowan, West Chowan and Tar River. To Rev. R. VanDeventer, Henderson, the Central, Flat River, Little River, Raleigh, Bisden and Waccamaw. To Rev. J. H. Edwards, Goldsboro, the Atlantic, Cape Fear, Cedar Creek, Columbus, Eastern, South Atlantic and South River. To T. H. Pritchard, Charlotte, Alexander, Ashe, Alleghaney, Anson, Brushy Mountain, Caldwell, Catawba River, Green River, King's Mountain, Mecklenburg and Cabarrus, Robeson, Richmond, Sandy River, South Fork, South Yadkin, Stanly and Union.

The brethren who have been asked in each of these Associations to look after the collection of money for the Centennial Fund will please report to the appropriate member of the Committee as soon as possible. State what money is in hand, what has been pledged, and if you can, when these pledges will be redeemed. Send all moneys directly to J. D. Boushall, Treasurer of the Convention, Raleigh, N. C., and mark it if it be collected for that purpose, "For Permanent Centennial Fund." Please act with the utmost promptness, brethren, as the time is exceedingly short.

Last Call of F. M. Board.

Treasurers, agents, pastors, churches, societies and all other persons having funds for the Foreign Mission Board will please send the same before the last day of April, when our books close. The Board must have $40,000 before that date in order to report to the Convention "no debt."

A Correction.

FUNDS ON WAKE FOREST COLLEGE.

The editor of Charity and Children misunderstood the subscriber, as appears in an editorial April 7th, 1893, entitled "A Suggestion," in regard to the invested funds of Wake Forest College. There are no amounts on hand uninvested, and have not been since July 7th, 1892.

THOMAS H. BRIGGS,
Treasurer of Wake Forest College.
Raleigh, April 15, 1893.

We ask special attention to the above. If you will then, brethren, read the editorial to which Bro. Briggs refers, which is repeated in editorial in Charity and Children of April 14th, you can the better understand the matters involved.

The figures and statements in the latter editorial, referred to above, about the expenses of the Board, are more badly mixed and misleading than the statements in the first editorial about the endowment fund of the College, which Bro. Briggs corrects.

Every item of expense, known to us, is given each year in the report of J. D. Boushall, Treasurer of the Convention, with the certificate of W. N. Jones, Auditor. The report is then adopted by the Convention, published in the minutes, and fifteen hundred copies of the same are, by the Secretaries, Bro. N. B. Broughton and Dr. N. B. Cobb, sent out to the pastors and brethren all over North Carolina. No such report of expenses, in any denominational work in this State, known to us, except the Board of Ministers' Relief, is given to the public as is given by the Treasurer of the Convention of the expenses of the Board of Missions and Sunday schools.

We are certain no such report of expenses of our Orphanage work is ever given to the public.

The salary of the General Manager, salary of the Treasurer, salary of the agent for Charity and Children, salary of writers for Charity and Children, teachers, matrons, cooks, laborers on the farm, carpenters, printers, traveling expenses of General Manager, agent of Charity and Children, trustees, speaker and preacher for the annual meeting, freight, postage, telegrams, stationery, fuel, light, &c., are never given to the public as separate items of expense in our Orphanage work. But just such a report of the expenses of the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools has been given to the Convention for sixty years and published in the minutes for the information of all. Of course there is a broad field for honest differences of opinion about what ought to be the expenses of each department of our denominational work, and the same opportunity exist for a variety of opinions about the forms in wh ch reports ought to be made to the denomination.

The best, therefore, that can be done, it seems to us, is for the denomination in its meetings, which may be charged with the duty, to give the wisest and best instructions possible under the circumstances, and then for all to work together, along the lines thus marked out, for the general good of our Master's cause.

C. DURHAM.

Our Missionaries.

Union meetings and Sunday school Associations will be in session at, perhaps, about fifty places next week, April 28th–30th, in this State. The winter and spring, thus far, since the Convention, have been given to collections for Home and Foreign Missions, and for the "Centennial of Missions." All money, to be counted in the report of the Treasurer at Richmond and Atlanta for the above objects must be received by them on Saturday, April 29th. It will be, therefore, too late to take collections at these meetings for Home or Foreign Missions, or for the "Centennial of Missions," and have the same counted in the present year's work.

WHY NOT,

therefore, take collections at each of these Union Meetings and Sunday-school Associations for STATE MISSIONS? We have done better this year, since the Convention, for State Missions than was done for the same months last year, and the Board is due their missionaries less on the past year's work than it was due them at this time a year ago on the preceding year's work; but some of them do most sorely need what is due them by the Board. They ought to be paid at once.

BRETHREN,

will you not see to it at your Union Meeting, or your Sunday-school Association next week, that the people are given an opportunity to contribute something to help pay these faithful missionaries in our own State the balance due them on last year's work? Please do not forget it.

WE ASK

the Treasurer of each Association, Union Meeting, or church, having money, any amount, however small, on hand May 1st, for State Missions, to send it at once to J. D. Boushall, Treas., Raleigh, N. C.

And, if the Treasurer of any Association, or Union Meeting has, since our Convention in December last, paid money direct to the missionary on the field that the proper vouchers be sent to me at once, and the same will be duly credited and acknowledged. The work, so far as we know and believe, never has been in better condition at this time of the year. Notwithstanding the scarcity of money, and unpaid salaries, the missionaries are pushing on with their work, many persons are being added to the churches, congregations and Sunday-schools are large, and many new houses of worship are being built.

C. DURHAM.

Hon. T. W. Mason of Raleigh will deliver the annual address at Buie's Creek Academy, Harnett county, on May 11th. The enrollment of the Academy this spring is 146.

Small Pastorates.

THE DARK SIDE.

In many respects it is more difficult to be the pastor of a small church than a large one.

1. Small congregations are harder to preach to than large ones. There is lacking that contagious enthusiasm which no speaker was ever known to despise. Gladstone says: "A speaker gets from his hearers in vapor that which he gives back to them in flood." They help to feed him. If the congregation is large there will be a sufficient number of ardent listeners who invite the preacher to go on and tell his message.

And then the inspiration of the song of the great congregation is lacking in the small company. Nothing is more inspiring than a great hymn as the words swell into the harmony of many voices; and there is nothing so dispiriting as a few squeaky voices out of tune and out of time.

It is much harder to prepare a sermon for a small congregation. The preacher cannot have out of mind the crowd to which he has to preach. The good congregation inspires preparation as well as delivery.

It is more difficult to find suitable subjects. The range of subjects is largely gauged by the size of the congregation.

Early in the week a rich subject suggests itself to the preacher's mind. Elated he thinks, "Well, there is one sermon for Sunday." He thinks again and realizes that it would apply to only half dozen who would hear him. He tries another and another, and each time he is confronted with the appalling conclusion that no one of the subjects, so far, will fit the few who will hear. So late in the week, after many abortive attempts, he hurriedly prepares what seems best suited to the real congregation before him.

2. In small churches unpleasant things are more easily seen and felt. There is lacking in the movement what the balance wheel supplies in mechanics—momentum to give regularity and smoothness, and to overcome the numberless small jars of resistance. Where there are but few the contact becomes so intensely real that there is a constant wearing in to where nerves are tender. There is a certain helpful change of contact that is impossible. This is one reason why small churches usually mean short pastorates. The church soon feels that they have seen all round the pastor and learned how human he is; the pastor in turn feels that he has used up all the material on that field for him.

If anything unpleasant occurs he is compelled to see it. He sees every absence from church and feels it keenly. The people know very well that he craves their presence, and he wonders whether they have taken offense at something, or are just thoroughly indifferent. He may lie awake Sunday night, and turn over the perplexing question in his mind till it vanishes into his troubled dreams, but when he awakes the problem is still unsolved.

The contrary, or sensitive brother, has the enviable advantage to be coveted by every disturber of the peace. The fellow with fretful quills, who stings at everything and everybody, in a large church with a large spiritual force would be no more worry than the gnat to the great animal which did not so much as know it was there.

3. The pastor is easily discouraged with the seemingly small and inadequate results. No glowing letters from him telling of members received every Sunday night. His church must stand low on the list of contributors to the great objects. So no wonder he feels, sometimes, that he ought not to accept even the small salary he does receive; that it is only time killing work in which he is engaged after all.

A BRIGHTER SIDE.

It is indeed a gloomy situation that cannot be relieved by some cheering view.

1. The pastor of a small church is not compelled to do so much pastoral visiting; hence he has more time for study, wide and general study that has reference to his life work as a whole. And if his range of subjects is narrow it ought to have the effect of driving him to being more specific in his application of gospel truth. It is the single aim kind of shooting he must do, and if the birds are few he is compelled to do that kind.

For the young pastor especially, there is afforded a better opportunity for studying human nature. The crowd furnishes a broad and general view, but that is all. When the anatomist would study the human frame thoroughly he selects but few subjects. So the pastor of a small church can study men more narrowly, in such a way as to learn their weaknesses and points of strength. This close study of men can be of inestimable value when he is called to a larger field.

2. As to results. We go wide of the mark when we attempt to measure and classify the results of any effort whether it be human or divine. We just don't know. We do not know what influence was first set in motion to bring about many of the glorious results we behold to day. And as to the influences about to be set in motion "thou knowest not which shall prosper, this or that."

We are entirely too much enamoured of numbers in our calculations of success anyway; in fact we do not know that the decimal system of notation is used in the kingdom of heaven at all.

An aged minister, writing to his son, who was the pastor of a small congregation, said: "Remember how much better it is to do a little good, substantial good, than by smooth and false doctrine to obtain crowded congregations and do them mischief. Our influence does by no means depend on crowded congregations, nor is it at all proportionate to them. Uniformly, as far as I can see, my influence as a preacher has been greatest when my congregations have been small and discouraging, and great depression about my work has preceded success."

The fact that so large a proportion of our missionaries and preachers for the home work, are coming from these obscure village and country churches, ought to give fresh life to our tired hands; we may be building better than we know. If we are doing the work God gave us to do we are doing the highest and grandest work that can be done.

After all, what would become of our country if it were not for the work done by the great rank and file of men and churches that silently fulfill their "destiny obscure?"

X. Y. Z.

To the Pastors and Churches of the Mt. Zion Association.

Dear Brethren:—As chairman of our Associational Centennial Committee, I make earnest appeal to you to use all possible diligence in finishing up promptly our contributions to this great work. Let no one fail behind. Let us, if possible, go beyond our fair proportion, so as to make up the lack of some that may fail. In the event of failure in the State, it will be pleasant to feel that the responsibility does not lie at our door.

The little church at Chapel Hill has raised and forwarded $200, one fifth of the Mt. Zion quota, and one seventy fifth of that of the State.

J. L. CARROLL.
Chapel Hill, April 17, 1893.

April 10th.

Seventy-three years ago I was born. In 1885 I fell from a stroke of paralysis while preaching in the First Baptist church of this city. I recovered from this so as to be able to hobble about with the aid of a stick. Three years ago I fell in my front yard and crushed my left side. Since then I have been confined to my bed and chair, most of the time suffering excruciating pain. I still am unable to rise from my chair or turn on my side in my bed.

I may be called away any month or week or day. I think I am resigned to the will of God. There is no dark river before me. My Heavenly Father has been extremely gracious to me. He has permitted me to live to see my youngest and last child baptized. May the Lord grant that no one of them may dishonor their profession.

I have two wishes, if I may express them, to write out my Chair Talks and to revisit Texas. The Master's will be done.

"AMEN.

I cannot say,
Beneath the pressure of life's cares to day,
I joy in these;
But I can say
That I had rather walk this rugged way
If Him it please.

I cannot feel
That all is well, when dark'ning clouds conceal
The shining sun;
But then I know
God lives and loves, and say, since it is so,
Thy will be done.

I cannot speak
In happy tones; the tear drops on my cheek
Show I am sad;
But I can speak
Of grace to suffer with submission meek,
Until made glad.

I do not see
Why God should e'en perm it some things to be
When he is love;
But I can see,
Though often dimly through the mystery,
His hand above.

I do not look
Upon the present, nor in nature's book,
To read my fate;
But I do look
For promised blessings in God's holy book,
And I can wait."

Up to and before the late war, Dr. Graves gave his brethren of the South great trouble. Since that time his influence has been small. Union meetings April 29th and 30th at Perry's Chapel and Midway. Rev. W. H. Edwards to preach the introductory sermon at Perry's; Rev. J. V. Devenny at Midway. Sermon on Sunday at Midway by Rev. W. Atkinson.

SUBJECTS FOR DISCUSSION.

1. Are our churches sufficiently careful in the reception of members? Bro. I. T. Newton to open the discussion at Perry's; Bro. R. R. Day at Midway.

2. Is church membership essential to the full enjoyment of Christian work? Bro. A. B. Wester to open the discussion at Perry's; Bro. A. O. Jones at Midway.

3. Is there Bible authority for the part that is now taken by Christian women in mission work? Bro. N. Y. Gulley to open the discussion at Perry's; Bro. W. J. Ferrell at Midway.

COMMITTEE.

The Meeting in Greensboro.

Dear Recorder:—Last night we closed our meeting of about ten days. There were many drawbacks, but the Lord abundantly blessed us. There were over forty professions of faith in Christ. The church has been benefited by this work, and we go forward with the hope of a continuous revival in the future. Our Sunday-night crowds have been so great that we could not accommodate them. A gentleman and wife of another denomination was present two weeks ago and told us to get fifty more chairs at his expense.

The Lord is with us, and the work advances. Affectionately,

Bro. Joseph B. Ferebee Ordained.

Sawyer's Creek Baptist church called a presbytery to examine Bro. Joseph B. Ferebee with a view to his ordination to the work of a gospel minister.

After a full examination, conducted by Dr. R. R. Overby, the council unanimously decided to ordain him.

On Sunday night, April 9th, in Woodville Baptist church he was publicly set apart to the work of a minister of Jesus. Rev. Dr. R. R. Overby preached the ordination sermon. Rev. Josiah Elliott offered the prayer and presented the Bible. The writer gave the charge. The right hand of fellowship was given by the council, and Bro. Ferebee pronounced the benediction.

Union Meeting.

The next Union Meeting of the Liberty Association will be held at Randleman Baptist church on the 28th and 29th of April, 1893. The program adopted by the Union for the occasion is as follows:

1. Introductory sermon by Thos. Carrick on distinctive Baptist principles.
2. "Let your light so shine," etc. J. N. Stallings and J. M. Hilliard.
3. How may we have conversions all the year round? J. K. Fant and J. A. Summey.
4. Why should the Baptists at this time make a special effort for Foreign Missions? Thos. Carrick and H. Morton.

Efforts are being made to secure rates on the railroad fare to the Union Meeting, which we hope will be successful.

Let all who are interested in the work support it by their presence at the next meeting.

Do not Forget Your Home Board, Brethren, in Distributing Your Collections.

Let it be remembered that we begun the year ten thousand dollars in debt, that we have paid twenty thousand dollars as the last payment on the Havana House, that we have been obliged to enlarge our work, that the appeals for help which come to us from our vast territory were never so numerous or so pressing, and that we greatly need largely increased contributions in order to make proper exhibit at Nashville. Our efficient treasurer, who has rarely made such appeal but has been accustomed to go along and meet the obligations of the Board whether the churches send the money or not, has sent us the following note which we hope our brethren will heed:

ATLANTA, GA., March 21st, 1893.

DR. I. T. TICHENOR, COR. SECRETARY:

Dear Sir and Brother:—I am delighted to learn of the numerous pledges made to Centennial Missions and Centennial Chapel fund. Maryland, Kentucky, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and other States have done well. I see from the papers that the pledges generally were made with the understanding they were to have to April 15th to redeem them. Now I wish you to urge upon all who have or may pledge to pay promptly by the 15th of April. I am now behind, or in debt to the bank, one note which falls due in April and must be paid. This debt is on account of church building, and I trust the brethren will bear this in mind and get their checks ready to send to me in the early part of April.

Yours fraternally,
A. D. ADAIR, Treas.

As the 30th of April comes this year on Sunday, the treasurer will keep his books open until the 1st of May (Monday), but they will positively close on that day, and we beg that treasurers or others having money in hand for Home Missions will forward at once.

I. T. TICHENOR,
Cor. Secretary.

A BEAUTIFUL LIFE.—The death of Bishop Brooks touched the hearts of our countrymen as it has rarely been touched. When the news of his sudden death flashed across the wires, lamentations were heard on every side, and the involuntary expressions of popular sorrow were manifest as the conventional professional utterances. A collection of sincere testimonials to the worth of Bishop Brook's helpful attitude toward his fellow-men is of great interest. Thomas Whittaker (3 and 5 Bible House, New York) publishes in a handsome pamphlet a record of the service held in loving memory of the late Phillips Brooks, D. D., at Music Hall, New York, Feb. 16. Addresses by Dr. Greer, Rabbi Gotthell, Father Ducey, the Rev. Lyman Abbott, Dr. Storrs, Dr. Day and Mr. Choate show how broad is the religion which enables men of many minds and creeds to pay tributes from their several points of view. A beautifully engraved portrait of Phillips Brooks appears on the frontispiece of this memorial, which has caught something of that spirit of "inextinguishable hopefulness for his kind" which was characteristic of that rare soul. Twenty five cents will buy a copy of the pamphlet, postage free.

RAILROAD RATES

I am advised by the L. & N. that a rate of one fare for the round trip is in effect to Nashville, account Southern Baptist Convention, from all points on that line; and also by the N. C. and St. L. that a rate of one fair is in effect from all points on their line west of Chattanooga, inclusive; south of Chattanooga and from other points not on the line of the L. & N. or N. C. & St. L. the rate is one and one-third fare to L. & N. or N. C. & St. L. junction points, plus one fare to Nashville.

A rate of one fare has been granted by all railroads in Texas.

All other lines, so far as heard from, grant a rate of a fare and one third, on the certificate plan. The Southern Passenger Association has not announced any special rates yet. As it will be too late to publish another card, delegates are requested to inquire at railroad station, and if special rates have not been made, to write me at once.

O. F. GREGORY,
Sec'y in charge Transportation.

In arranging for the coming session of the Southern Baptist Convention in this city, the committee desires to have as soon as possible the names of all persons knowing themselves to be delegates, either of the Convention or the Woman's Missionary Union or the Education Society. We wish in sending out this notice to call special attention to the following points:

1. We will make ample provision for entertaining only accredited delegates. This rule will be rigidly adhered to.

2. As we expect to furnish homes to all delegates, we will not be responsible for any bills made for entertainment at hotels.

3. All delegates who may prefer hotel accommodations at their own expense and will write to the committee to that effect, will have the very best possible arrangements made for them.

4. The committee will be glad to furnish any information or to make any arrangements at boarding houses and hotels for all visitors who may request it.

5. A special committee on reception will meet all trains and furnish information and assistance to both delegates and visitors.

A Few Thoughts.

BY SCATTERHEAD.

"Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." John 3: 5.

There has been a great deal of controversy about this text of Scripture. Most of our good and learned commentators say the Scripture under consideration refers to regeneration by the Spirit and baptism in water, and there are numerous other opinions in regard to the exposition of this passage of truth. The writer has read about all the different ideas in regard to these precious words of the Saviour spoken to a Master of Israel, and as he has no reputation at stake, he will present a few scattering thoughts, although not original.

Nicodemus was a mighty man among his people, and occupied a powerful high position, as he was "a ruler of the Jews," "a master of Israel," and "a man of the Pharisees." We suppose he knew the Scriptures well, and like most of his sect he wore a mighty nice religious garb of his own make. Nicodemus was at ease most of the time, and was right well satisfied with himself, as he was of the opinion that it was mighty hard to find a better fellow than he. One night he beheld himself in a new light, and with his high position in the religious world and his outward show of righteousness, he got a glimpse of himself, and concluded he was a powerful ugly creature. Nicodemus felt very much dissatisfied with himself, also a deep sense of need, and a mighty craving for something that Pharisaism could not give him, so he went to the Great Teacher for help. God was drawing Nicodemus. No one goes to Christ unless he is drawn by the father. God moves upon the heart of the sinner, applying the word by the Spirit, and realising his deep sense of guilt and of need, and an aching void in his heart, he willingly goes to Christ, though it be "by night." The soul covered in moral darkness, and feeling that he deserves to be plunged into the "blackness of darkness," Nicodemus went to Christ. He knew the law and the traditions of his sect, but he was wonderfully ignorant about the plan of salvation and being mounted on stilts, he had overlooked the simplicity of God's plan of salvation. Christ told him just what he needed —that he must be born again." Nicodemus was mighty proud of his station and birth—a son of Abraham, and it was right humbling for him to be called down from the "very highest to the very lowest round in the ladder." The Saviour made the poor fellow understand that his privileges and distinction would not carry him into the kingdom—that in order to be saved, he must be born from above.

1. Christ first showed him the necessity of the new birth. We ought to thank God that Nicodemus did go to Christ and was the happy occasion for the blessed Saviour to reveal to us so much of his precious truth. We learn that regeneration is God's work from beginning to the end. Man does not co operate in this grand and glorious work, "but is only the subject and God the operator." Regeneration does not take place in the old nature, but in the soul, as the flesh might be born a thousand times and still would be flesh. The heart of man is totally depraved. "The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked." We find the heart the seat of depravity and full of sin and corruption. The natural heart of man is all wrong, and delights only in the service of Satan. The polluted heart is enmity against God, and does not love him, and not to love him is the very essence of depravity. We find that a change of heart must be effected, a new creation takes place in the soul by which the believer is made "a partaker of the divine nature," before the sinner can enter heaven. Some try mighty hard to explain away the new birth or regeneration of the soul, and claim that the change is in the old nature. The work is gradual, and goes from one stage to another until the sinner at last gets mighty good and strong, and is able to get the old nature under his feet, and that he is then a changed fellow by his own good works. Some make the new birth apply to the new body which arises from the grave. Hell born and hell bound doctrine. The body of the believer is unchanged, and a mass of sinful corruption, until caught up with Christ. The new birth or regeneration is the beginning of a new life—the implantation of a new nature in the heart of the believer by which he is made a "new creature in Christ Jesus." God implants the germ of holiness in the heart of the believer, and his aspirations and the deep longings of his soul are ever upward and godward. God does not try to improve our old nature: he has said it is lost, guilty, evil only, and evil all the time, but he gives the believer a new and heavenly nature. "No man putteth a piece of new cloth unto an old garment."

2. Showing the necessity of the new birth and its source, we will in a few words endeavor to show how or by what means it is produced. Regeneration is brought about in the soul by the Holy Spirit, the agent, and the Word, the instrument or sword which is used in the hands of the Spirit to quicken dead souls. God's word brought the innumerable worlds into existence. "By the word of the Lord were the heavens made." God's word created worlds, and the same word quickens dead souls; so we find God's word is both creative and regenerating. Nothing but the voice of the Son of God can impart life to the sinner "dead in trespasses and sins." "The dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live." John 5: 25.

"Born of water and of the Spirit." We say this Scripture does not teach two births, the natural and the spiritual; neither does it teach, as we think, baptism and regeneration. What then is meant by "born of water." We find John 1: 11–13, that every one that believes on Christ's name is born again—born of God. "He that heareth my word and believeth on him that sent me hath everlasteth life." John 5: 24. "But these are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing, ye might have life through his name." John 15: 31. So then if we believe the record concerning Christ, we have eternal life—not a head belief alone, but a belief that gets down into the heart, "for with the heart men believe unto righteousness."

"Born of water" represents the Word of God. As one able writer has said, "There is life-giving power in the Christ whom the Word reveals, and in the Word which reveals him." The Holy Spirit as the agent applies the Word as the instrument, the water, to the soul, and life is communicated to it. The voice of the Son of God, which is the Word, quickens the dead soul. Christ is revealed to the soul by the Spirit, using the Word as the means. The Word is powerless unless used by the Spirit, and the Spirit uses no other means but the Word in saving souls. We are begotten by the Word of God. "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth." Jas. 1: 18. We are born by the Word. "Being born of incorruptible seed by the Word of God." 1 Pet. 1: 23. Water cleanses, so does the Word of God. "Christ loved the church and gave himself for it, that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the Word." "He saved us by the washing of regeneration and renewing by the Holy Ghost." Eph. 5; Tit. 3. From the above quotations of Scripture we are bound to conclude that the water used in the text represents the Word. Can the heathen be saved without the Word which contains the gospel? Can any soul be saved without the Word? If you can't answer, read Romans. Let us depend more on God's Word and Spirit, and sinners will be converted unto him. People converted by God's means are intelligently saved and forever saved. We have too little faith in God's Word and Spirit. We depend too much and expect too much from human oratory to reach and save souls. Too many "ear ticklers" now-a-days and not enough heart reachers. Men constrained by the love of Christ to tell the good news of salvation don't care so much for fine rounded sentences. But they want sinners saved from the wrath to come. A sight of the preaching goes no further than the ear, because that is the target aimed at. Men whose hearts are filled with God's love and Spirit direct their shots at the heart and they are not apt to miss their mark. More heart power is needed. We need more men whose hearts are filled with the love of God and who have a childlike confidence in God's Word and Spirit. Big sermons are not needed to save men, but God's Word and Spirit must do the work. To God belongs all the glory in saving men. "My Word shall not return unto me void."

The hymn "Nearer, my God, to Thee" is just now a subject of controversy. President Weston, of Crozer Theological Seminary, claims that "the hymn has in it no New Testament ideas, no New Testament imagery, no New Testament spirit, no New Testament desire. Beautiful it is, poetic it is, religious it is, married to a sweet tune it is; New Testament it is not." He especially objects to the line "Even though it be a cross that raiseth me," claiming that "the New Testament never uses the word 'cross' as a synonym for woes, or sorrows, or griefs." Zion's Advocate takes issue with President Weston in this fashion:

Must we give up this hymn? Does it deny, by the remotest implication, salvation by the cross of Christ? If so, it is only by teaching that each saint may have his own cross. Does not Christ teach the same? What does he mean when he says, "Whosoever doth not bear his cross and come after me cannot be my disciple." Christ does not here say "my cross," but "his," that is, as the Revised Version renders it, "his own." One's own cross has therefore so much to do with one's own salvation that only by bearing it can one be a disciple of Christ. Does the hymn teach anything different? Does it teach that solely by our own suffering, without the atoning work of Christ, we may be saved? It does not seem to merit such construction. It is a happy expression in song of the lesson contained in Jacob's experience at Bethel, when he was fleeing from his brother and was made to hope in the God of his fathers and the God of promise. Let us keep on singing it "with the spirit" and "with the understanding also." As well say that we cannot be sons of God because Christ alone is "the Son of God," or that we shall not hereafter wear "crowns of righteousness" because Christ alone wears "the crown," as to say that our crosses have nothing to do with our salvation because we are saved by "the cross."

It is certain that the hymn has often voiced the prayer of some of the holiest men and women. It is however, only just to say that Dr. Weston's criticism is one that others have made, and he states that the late Dr. William R. Williams felt so strongly on the matter that he refused to give out the hymn when requested.—Christian Inquirer.

Revivals.

Revivals are no new thing. Thousands of years ago the psalmist prayed: "Wilt thou not revive us again, that thy people may rejoice in thee?" And a prophet hundreds of years before the Saviour came into the world cried: "O Lord, revive thy work, * * * * in the midst of the years make known; in wrath remember mercy." In the eighteenth year of Josiah's reign God heard the prayer of his people and gave them a blessing, so that the record reads: "There was no passover like to that kept in Israel from the days of Samuel the prophet; neither did all the kings of Israel keep such a passover as Josiah kept." But, then, Josiah, with the princes and the priests, prepared themselves by consecrated obedience for the coming service. So it was in the pentecostal revival after the ascension of the Saviour. The record reads: "These continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women and with Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren."

The history of the revivals in the past, the facts concerning revivals in the present, all show that when the church really desires a revival, then she obtains it. We have God's promise: "Thus saith the Lord; I will yet for this be inquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them; I will increase them with men like a flock" (Ezek. 36: 37.) Then we have the church's work: "As soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children" (Isai. 63: 8).—Christian Press.

Webster and the Ground-Hog.

Of all the associations connected with the much slandered American citizen, the ground-hog, and his day, there is none which should be more familiar to all his fellow-countrymen than an anecdote of the great Daniel Webster, which, though known to every school boy of fifty years ago, may be new to the present generation of readers: A ground hog, or woodchuck, was caught on the Webster farm, and Daniel, then a lad, besought his father to spare his life, while his brother Zeke insisted that it should die. Their father said he would act as judge, while his boys, as counsel for the prosecution and defence, should make arguments for and against the prisoner, after which he would decide his fate. Zeke then made a powerful plea, and the ground-hog's doom was apparently sealed, when Daniel arose, and in one of those masterly addresses, which afterward made him famous, so worked upon his father's pity and compassion that when he had finished the old man cried out, tears streaming down his cheeks, "Zeke! Zeke! you let that woodchuck go!"—School and Home.

From Florida.

Although this is the time when the thousands of winter residents in Florida crowd the trains for their Northern and Western homes, many yet remain with us, and probably will do so for a month. Every winter increases the number who come. And every winter lengthens the time of their stay. Although the sun begins to grow hot in May, many are loth to leave our fair skies for the rain and mud of the more fickle Northern latitudes. Of course we Baptists rejoice in this state of affairs. We would be a strange sort of people were not such the case. For it brings us our friends. It also brings us the best heart and brain of the country. And, so far, we have not been slow to be benefitted by it. We Baptists, I mean. For, even if a man is a great giver to the philanthropies at home, and feels that he has given his last penny, when he gets down here and beholds the vast needs of this great State, his heart at once opens in a new place. He thaws out under the influence of our needs, even as his blood warms under the shining of our glorious sun. Many of your readers are personally acquainted with some of the benefactions wrought by Northern money in Florida. Many of them have been business ventures. And when we say this, the mind immediately reverts to the palatial hotels of St. Augustine, which were built by Mr. H. M. Flagler. Or, possibly one thinks of our railroads and orange groves, the products, mostly, of Northern capital. But greater blessings than these have come to us. Splendid institutions of learning have been built and equipped with the best buildings, the best apparatus, and the best teachers. Accordingly, as good college education may be had here in Florida as may be had anywhere.

STETSON UNIVERSITY.

And there is one institution which has, above others, made this possible. It is our own Baptist school, the John B. Stetson University, of De Land. Scarcely seven years old, it already surpasses in equipment and in thoroughness of work any institution of the kind in the State, and is superior, in these respects, to most of our Southern institutions of learning. We have no hesitancy in making this statement, having had cause to look into the work of many of them. And this excellency has not, of course, come from its superior appointments in buildings and the like, although, as I have lately pointed out to your readers, our university in this respect is unsurpassed. What, then, has produced such efficiency in so short a time? The cause of it was a gift of the Empire State to us. When you sent us President John F. Forbes, one of two highly talented brothers, the other of whom is at your own Rochester, you robbed yourself; but you gave us our strongest man. It is to his wisdom and efficiency, more than to anything else, that is due the success of our university. Thoroughly equipped, conservative and yet progressive, he has been the moving force of the whole work. As a man should be more grateful to his mother-in-law than to any one else because she has given him his wife, so is our university profoundly grateful to the old Empire State for the splendid gift of President Forbes and his estimable wife. And, surely, it would not do to mention President Forbes without naming the men who have stood by him and made his success possible. I refer to Messrs. H. A. DeLand, C. T. Sampson and J. B. Stetson. Mr. DeLand, the founder of the city of that name, was also the founder of the university, and gave largely to it. Mr. Sampson, of Washington City, noted for his benefactions, has figured prominently in many handsome gifts to the university, among which is a finely-selected library of 4,000 new books. And, finally, the man after whom the university is named—Mr. Stetson. Any one at all acquainted with our great philanthropists and greatly successful business men, knows of this the noblest Roman of them all. Not only has he given splendid buildings and large sums to the institution, but again and again has he come to its relief with a liberality which would be amazing in any one else but him. Ah, what a great big heart he has, and how grateful Florida Baptists are to him could not be told in a thousand pages! His presence, and that of his noble wife, are an inspiration to us every winter.

The Baptists of Florida and the trustees of the university are undertaking to raise $30,000 to add to the endowment, which is sorely needed. For the cause of Christ, money could not be better expended. If any of our friends of the great North, many of whose boys and girls are cared for by this same university every winter, are at a loss to know where to make the best investment of the money they wish to give to Christ's cause, let them come and see our university or inquire into the work it is doing.

CHURCHES AND PASTORS.

New houses of worship are springing into being in several parts of the State; but probably the most important are three neat brick houses—one in Pensacola, another in Orlando, and still another in the gate city, Jacksonville. The brick house of worship is a rarity in Florida, firstly, from the fact that the people, when they built, were too poor to build anything but frame structures; and secondly, the bricks made here are poorer than the people. Pastor MacGregor of Jacksonville, who is a successful lecturer, is devoting the proceeds of his efforts in this direction to his church building fund; and this makes me think to say that our people are hoping for help, so greatly needed in church building here, from the permanent fund of $350,000 which the Southern Baptist Convention are trying to raise. Florida's quota of this is $8,000. But, then, she gets it all back, for the board in Atlanta has promised to expend this much in our State if the quota is raised.

Among the visitors to our State lately were Drs. Conwell and Reese of Philadelphia. The former captured several audiences by his lectures, while Dr. Reese preached one of the finest sermons this scribe has ever heard. His style is as peculiar as it is charming.—Among the recent additions to our ministry is Dr. William Henry Strickland of Atlanta, Ga. He goes to Madison. We are glad to have him among us.—Another addition is Rev. S. M. Hughes, who comes to Orlando from South Carolina. He comes, the right man, to a fine field much in need of him.—The corner stone of the Tabernacle of the Baptist Chautauqua is to be laid some time in April. The location of this Chautauqua is at Sea-Breeze, on the Gulf of Mexico, and is said to be admirably adapted to the purposes for which it was selected.—The Baptist Witness, the organ of our convention, has so greatly improved that it challenges comparison with our best religious weeklies.—Prof. Jackson, formerly of the Morgan Park Seminary, but now engaged in literary work, has been spending the winter in DeLand, and his son has been attending the university at that place.—Florida is also, as are other States, troubled with the religious reform crank. Its latest manifestation is in the shape of a man who was once a Baptist preacher, but is now a mountebank. He, however, uses the opera houses, and has about a corporal's guard for an audience.—Rev. C. S. Farriss, in The Examiner.

Valuable Works.

Valuable denominational works are published by the American Baptist Publication Society from the pens of eminent Southern authors. Among those whose books are upon the shelves of the Society are works from such authors as Drs. Broadus, Boyce, Burrows, Curry, Dagg, Dickinson, Eaton, Frost, Fuller, Jeter, Pendleton and Tucker, and very many others equally well known. They are sound, instructive and attractive.

To the Preachers of the Raleigh Association.

Brethren:—The time for our Centennial work is very short, and probably it is not possible to make a personal canvass of the churches. But the opportunity of making an offering must not go unimproved. We have decided, therefore, to ask each preacher in the Raleigh Association to bring this matter up at once, and to take a collection in each church he serves. Do not worry yourself nor your churches about the several different objects to which it can be appropriated. Take it for "the Centennial of Missions." Let it be the offering of each church towards celebrating the great Centennial year. Do not delegate it to the sisters, nor to the Sunday-schools (unless between your appointments they can see and solicit something from every member). But the time is so short that unless something is done at once, some churches will fail to have a part in this work.

Brethren, make the appeal yourselves. Give all necessary explanations. Let this offering be entirely separate from the regular work of the church. And by or before the third Sunday in April, see that each church is reported with its Centennial collection to Bro. J. D. Boushall, Treasurer, Raleigh, N. C. Now, brethren, to the work, and do not fail to have each church included.

Something to Remember,

if you're a weak or ailing woman:—that there's only one medicine so sure to help you that it can be guaranteed. It's Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. In building up overworked, feeble, delicate women, or in any "female complaint" or weakness, if it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back. It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and strengthening nervine, and a safe and certain remedy for woman's ills and ailments. It regulates and promotes all the proper functions, improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and strength.

Nothing else can be as cheap. With this, you pay only for the good you get.

Expressing Love.

Expressing love is as truly a duty as feeling love. Love gains by its expression, and he who does not express his love can never have that measure of love which is possible through its expression. Words and acts of love are needful, not in order to prove love, but to exhibit it, and to give it added strength through its exhibit. He who delights in telling God of his love for him, and in showing his love for God by acts of affection to those whom God loves, has more of love for God day by day because of this exhibit of his love. And the same principle holds good in our love for our fellows. It cannot be as great without its free expression as with it.—S. S. Times.

The agnostics change their point and mode of attack too often to make any breach in the solid masonry of the walls of Christian evidence. Each generation of them thus wears itself out, and the truth as it is in Jesus stands firm.—Nash. Advocate.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

Wives in Japan.

Mrs. J. A. Brunson, in the Foreign Mission Journal for April, 1893, gives the following information, which she obtained from her Japanese teacher, about wives in Japan:

In ancient times it was the custom when a female child was born in Japan to let it lie upon the floor for three days, to show that woman was of the earth, and that man, her superior, was from heaven. Her parents deemed a knowledge of house-keeping and a little sewing a sufficient education for her to fill her place in life, which was, in reality, to be summed up in the three obediences, and did not require much independent thought on her part. In fact, the more completely she subjected herself first to her parents, then to her husband and his parents, and lastly to her eldest son, the more was she to be commended for her good behavior and discretion. The ancient law permitted, nay, compelled a man to be divorced from a wife who refused to obey his parents, showing them all due reverence and respect.

And mediævalism is not dead in Japan yet, though western ideas are beginning to revolutionize the forms of government. Customs which have prevailed for centuries are so strongly implanted in the very nature of the people that it will be many years, if ever, before woman will be accorded a position corresponding to that of her occidental sisters. It is not considered proper for a wife to resent the conduct of her husband, however dissolute he may be. She must remonstrate kindly and humbly with him. Even if he introduce into her domicile a mistress upon whom he bestows all his endearments, she must behave in a most conciliatory manner towards the minion, and keep her sweetest smiles and profoundest salam for her recreant lord. Otherwise, she might be sent back to the home of her parents, in which case she would be greatly censured for her unfortunate disposition and want of discretion.

The daughters of Dai Nihon are usually gentle, graceful and attractive. As wives they are faithful and self-sacrificing. There was a case in Osaka several years ago of a wife who voluntarily laid down her life to shield a husband, who, as the sequel shows, was too base to deserve the name of a man. He was gambling one day when an altercation arose between himself and his comrade. In the dispute he became greatly angered and killed him. Terrified at his deed and the consequences which he knew would be death, he fled to his house and told his wife of the occurrence and of his fears. Brave, generous, devoted, self-forgetful soul that she was, she loved the craven wretch better than her own life or honor. So she said, "I will die that you may go free. Take this sword and kill me. Then go and tell the authorities that you were driven to madness and despair by discovering an amour between the slain man and me, and in a moment of frenzy you killed us both." Did he have one spark of gratitude, generosity or love in his soul for that noble wife? Did he clasp her to his heart and tell her that he would fly with her and escape, or in the event of failure, that he would let his own life pay the penalty of his crime? No; my cheek burns with shame for my fellow-man when I relate that the vile coward plunged the dagger into the true heart that had beat only for him, then fled in an agony of fear to the police and told his tale of woe. He was pitied by the public for having so lecherous and false a wife that he was driven to the awful deed of staining his hands with the blood of her and her paramour. He was allowed to escape with only a few months imprisonment.

Wives of the lower classes are in some respects more fortunate than those of high rank, since poverty has a tendency to place both sexes upon an equality. They usually share their husbands' councils and have much more freedom than is accorded to their wealthier sisters. Passing along the back alleys of cities, with the low dingy houses on either side, the shrill tones of untidy dames collected at the wells, the common property of all, fall rather unpleasantly upon the ears. If we listen to the conversation of those "well councils," as they are rather facetiously styled in Japan, we find that the women are busy discussing the merits or demerits of some absent member with whom perhaps they are on ill terms, or else lauding the virtues of their respective husbands, each vigorously maintaining that she has the best man of all. If one of the company should be lucky enough to come by a small sum of extra money, she proudly invites the "well council" to which she belongs to a feast of tea, cakes, and other inexpensive delicacies, in order that they may rejoicingly partake of her good fortune with her.

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.

One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B. Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

Reunion of the Former Students of Oxford Female Seminary.

At a meeting on April 11th, 1893, of the Alumnæ Association of Oxford Female Seminary, it was unanimously resolved to invite the former students and teachers of the Seminary to attend the approaching commencement the last of May. The purpose is to have a large reunion, and the invitation is extended to the former students and teachers of Oxford Female Seminary from its organization in 1850 to the present, and to the students and teachers of Raleigh Baptist Female Seminary, which for ten years was conducted by our President.

The programme for commencement is unusually attractive. The speakers are eminent for ability; the graduating class is large; the music talent is beyond the average; and the art exhibit will be full and handsome; and the reunion of old friends will be delightful.

Entertainment will be provided for all those who will notify President Hobgood of their purpose to attend the Reunion. All such are requested to send in their names as soon as possible—certainly before May 15th. The railroads will give the usual reduced rates.

We cordially invite our sisters to re-visit their alma mater. She, with the whole town of Oxford, will give them a hearty welcome.

What has the Society Done?

A Baptist brother living in Missouri calls attention to the fact that the Sunday school Board of the Convention has generously distributed $3,000 of its expected profits for the present year to the mission boards of the Southern States, to aid their mission work, and asks: "What is the Publication Society doing for mission work in these States?"

This question is entitled to a candid answer. On inquiry, the bookkeeper of the Missionary Department of the Society makes the following statement: "The Society expended last year in direct mission work in the States covered by the Convention, $13,081.78 in cash, and $2,690.18 in books at catalogue prices. Reducing these books to wholesale cash rates, they would amount to $1,614.11 cash, making an aggregate of $14,695.89 expended last year in cash, and its equivalent of cash, in mission work in the Southern States. The amount this year just closing will be more. For the last twenty eight years an average of full $10,000 each year has been expended by the Society in the Southern States in direct mission work.

Besides this, the Society made last year donations of Bibles and Testaments, books, and other Sunday-school literature, amounting, at catalogue prices, to $7,850 78. And the average value of the grants made every year for the last twenty eight years, is $5,280.

The answer, therefore, to the question is in brief this: The Society has given every year, for twenty-eight years, over $15,000 to aid the mission work in the Southern States. It should never be for a moment forgotten that every order made of the Publication Society for Sunday-school books or periodicals adds to the Society's ability to help the mission work of Baptists in all sections. "Not only does the literature itself do good, but the profits go directly to mission work."

A Visit to Stone Mountain, Blue Ridge.

"The works of God are fair for naught,
Unless our eyes, in seeing,
See hidden in the thing the thought,
That animates its being."

The sun has dispelled the murky mist that at dawn hung low on the mountain peaks, and within our view Stone Mountain looms up high above the surrounding peaks, which sink away from us in the presence of this great handiwork of God. There it stands defying the storms and rains that have for ages, mercilessly beat against it. There is no frost on its gray walls, it stands unclothed, as the bare truths of God's written word, it needs no protection from the biting blasts of winter or the melting showers of summer. It stands as an emblem of the infinite God, and we feel the insignificance of man as we gaze upon this massive structure of nature.

Through thick underbrush we press on toward the mountain, briars and the dense laurels impede our progress, at last we are compelled to follow the run of Roaring Creek, which winds through the jungles of the mountain forest. Jumping from rock to rock our progress is slow and not until the sun has reached the zenith do we reach the foot of the mountain. Without rest we begin the perilous ascent, we carefully pick our way over the rough granite until we reach the summit. On the summit at last! Here, what a weird scene meets our gaze, to the east across the valley for miles can be seen cultivated fields. The smoke curling from the mouths of many chimneys, and there a knob rising grandly above undulating hills. Far across the [illegible] distinctness can be seen the Brushy Mountains, forming the eastern barrier of the plain, from this range rises the lofty peak of Pilot Mountain, supposed by many, to be an extinct volcano. To the north and west nothing can be seen but the dark forest clothed peaks of the Blue Ridge. What a scene and yet what a few visit this noted peak, and how many there are that know nothing of it. Like the mountain of Christ, to it, the way is narrow, temptations thicker than the briars and underbrush at the foot of this mountain impede our progress and the ascent to the summit of Christianity is more difficult than the ascent to the summit on which we stand. We look around us—here is the study for the Geologist. The surface of the mountain for several hundred yards around is the same. Great fissures run through the rock for hundreds of yards. What a mighty force it must have been to split this massive rock!

The sun is fast sinking and we must haste to descend or night will compel us to spend the night on the mountain. Oh! for the mind of an Irving for one half hour; what a glowing description I could write of this mountain, seated on yonder cone. Alas! I have not. We descend carefully, as we came. At the foot again. The sun has set and the great shadow of the mountain falls on the valley below like a cloud, with one long lingering look at the mountain, which in the twilight now appears like a huge pillar connecting earth and heaven, we hasten away through the lugubrious forest.

Mrs. M. T. Yates.

This distinguished missionary of the Southern Baptist Convention is spending some time in our city. There is no name in the ranks of the workers for Jesus in foreign lands more honored for noble deeds and consecrated life than that of Mrs. Matthew T. Yates, of China. Her husband, the late Rev. Dr. Yates, was said by an eminent missionary of the East to be "head and shoulders above any man in Asia," and his wife stood by his side, as she now stands alone, worthy of the name she bears and the grand cause she represents. Mrs. Yates is accompanied by her son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Seaman—the former a gentleman of fine intelligence and business ability, connected in other days with the noted Shanghai banking house of Oliphant & Co.; the latter a lady of rare accomplishments, with all the rounding of character and manner acquired by the best European education and the most cultivated society of the Orient. Mrs. Seaman is a native of China, but not a missionary by appointment, though she is thoroughly one when estimated by generous endeavors and contribution for the evangelization of the Celestial Empire. After a visit to the Columbian Exposition, later in the season, the party will return to their loved and delightful home in the busy entrepot of China, Changhai, followed by the prayers of many to whom their presence in this country has been a benediction.—Religious Herald.

Dr. Boykin's Worm Killer.
"The best selling Vermifuge in the market."—Reports furnished to any regular physician when requested,

We have never asked for a certificate. We have some of the strongest ever given—all sent without solicitation. Read a few only of the many evidences of its great merit:

LA GRANGE, N. C, July 1887.
Mr. J. P. Joyner:—I gave my child one dose of Boykin's "Worm Killer," purchased of you. It brought 366 worms. I consider it the best worm medicine made. Respectfully, J. W. THOMAS.

Messrs I. M. & B. F. Powell, prominent merchants in Columbus county, N. C., wrote us in July, 1887 that "Rev. T. C. Floyd gave his child one dose of Boykin's "Worm Killer," and the result was 367 worms."

Mr. W. J. Davis of Ridgeway, S. C., says: "I have quite a demand for your "Worm Killer." It is the best Vermifuge I get."

Dr. R. H. Edmunds, a well known physician and farmer, writes under date of Ridgeway, S. C., May 26th, 1884, "that a negro girl 10 years old, near him, took two or three doses of the 'Worm Killer,' and passed 366 worms."

Price: 25c. per Bottle. Take no other.

The Leaksville Woolen Mills, Leaksville N. C., need no introduction to the public in North Carolina and adjoining States. This is simply to remind you that they are still "in touch" with the people, working up their wool into various forms of finished product at satisfactory prices. A handsome catalogue containing samples of their new and attractive styles of Fancy Cassimeres and All-Wool Flannels, together with all other goods made by them, is sent to any address on application. Besides an interesting article on "Wool and How to Handle It," the catalogue contains full particulars in regard to shipping wool. If these details are carefully followed, we guarantee prompt return of goods.

Write to Hiram Foard, Sec'y, Leaksville, N. C. for catalogue, before disposing of your wool.

New Spring Dress Goods.

Among the new Dress Goods for the Spring will be noticed some distinct changes, both as to colors and styles, from those of the past season.

Our advance lines of Dress Fabrics for this season are already on sale, and embraces the newest shades and textures in Plain Materials, as well as the latest ideas in the handsomer French Novelties.

This year, Cotton Dress Fabrics will be shown in many dainty effects, and our present exhibit of these is the most extensive we have ever made.

We suggest to our patrons to buy early, as most of these goods are our own importations, consequently many styles once sold cannot be duplicated.

Requests for samples should indicate something as to colors, and about what price goods are desired.

Cash with the order, of $5.00 and over, goods will be delivered free (except furniture and crockery) to the nearest Express Office or Railroad station.

DIED.

NEAL—Died, on April 10th, in Caswell county, Mrs. Rebecca G. Neal, wife of Thos. C. Neal, and daughter of Azariah Graves. She was cut off suddenly of heart disease, leaving her husband, seven children, and many friends, in great sorrow. She was forty years of age, and had been many years a member of Trinity Baptist church. How sad to us all. J. K. HOWELL.

DIXON—Mrs. Polly Dixon departed this life March 20th, 1893, in the seventy-sixth year of her age. She had been thoroughly identified with the work of the Master's kingdom for more than fifty years. At the time of death she was a consistent member of Ephesus Baptist church. The writer conducted her funeral services from her home on the 21st ult., and she was laid away in the family burying ground to await the resurrection morn. May God's blessing rest upon those who are bereft of mother and friend.

Roxboro, N. C. W. F. WATSON.

ALDERMAN—Owen Alderman, Sr., was born March 5th, 1810. March 5th, 1893, while at dinner, given in celebration of his eighty-third birthday, he was stricken with paralysis, and four days later, March 9th, entered into the rest that remains for the people of God.

In some respects Mr. Alderman was a remarkable man. The writer recalls a most impressive personality—a man of strong convictions, great nervous force, enthusiastic in all his undertakings, wonderfully retentive memory, rare conversational powers and speaking ability. Strength and symmetry we think of in connection with his character. A friend writes of him, "He was an old-fashioned gentleman, who was honest and honorable in all his dealings, charitable and courteous with his fellow men, and who went to his rest followed by the reverent sorrow of all who knew him."

Over sixty years ago he gave his heart to the Saviour and united with the Baptist church. He served as deacon fifty-five years, and until recent years was prominently identified with Christian work within his Association.

In the summer of '86 he lost his wife and only daughter, their deaths occurring only a month apart. After this double bereavement the infirmities of old age came on space, becoming more and more apparent to those who loved him. The last few years he was blind In the eventime it was not light to him, but his soul was filled with sunshine, his faith grew stronger, his inner spiritual life brighter. Bereavement and suffering produced a purity and mellowness of character, and a ripening of Christian graces, until at last he was like a sheaf of golden grain ready for the harvest.

He leaves five sons to mourn his loss, to cherish his memory, and to imitate the excellencies of his Christian character.

A FRIEND.

COVINGTON—At Red Springs, Robeson county, N. C., March 23d, 1893, of paralysis, Bro. Robert Thos. Covington in the forty-first year of his age, leaving a lonely widow, in her desolate home to mourn his sad departure.

Bro. Covington was born in Richmond county, N. C., March 4th, 1853, and, at an early age, about sixteen, gave his heart to Christ, in a meeting held at "Cartledge Creek Meeting house," and was baptized into the fellowship of that church by old Bro. Monroe, perhaps, who, at that day, was a "great light" in all that region of country.

About ten years ago Bro. Covington moved to "Red Springs," and, seeing the possibilities of that "wonderful water," at once commenced the publication of a paper, The Scottish Chief, which had a prosperous run for several years, at that place. But Bro. Covington, ever looking to the higher interests of the favorable locality where he had resolved to abide for life, began to labor in earnest, in many respects, for the moral and spiritual improvement of the Red Springs community. Especially did he long for a Baptist church to be established in that thriving and intelligent centre of traditional pedobaptist Scotch settlers, and he set about the work of inducing Baptists of means and character to locate in, and around, the place; and, as a result, several substantial farmers purchased lands and homes near by, through his influence; a church was built; a Baptist household of "the faith" organized; and a preacher sent to them.

Bro. Covington was also the originator and the Secretary of the "Red Springs Agricultural Fair," and it was while engaged, heart and soul, working day and night, for the success of this great enterprise, that he was stricken, almost helpless, with his first attack of partial paralysis, on the 25th of August 1891. And from that time his labors of every kind, seemed to be nearing the end. But his trust in God failed not, neither did his faith waver in any degree, in the final success of the Lord's cause in Red Springs.

The Sunday-school, the prayer-meeting, the regular meetings of his church, the prosperity of his town, and the general welfare of the entire people, all lay near his heart to the last, even when he could just barely drag himself about the town, with a smile and a pleasant word for every one. "Bob" was a "good fellow," is the universal testimony of Red Springs people.

A second stroke of the same terrible affliction, not long ago; and then a third, and last one, a few days since, and the end peacefully came to all his sufferings here, and the Lord took him up to the home above.

The funeral services were held in the Baptist church of Red Springs, and conducted by Rev. W. J. Fulford of Maxton, and were largely attended by the country people around, as well as by the town folks, the business houses all being closed during the same, and the mortal remains of our dear "Bro. Bob," now rest in the quiet cemetery, near the home he loved so well, and the people, in whose service, it may be said, he yielded his life.

But "the places that knew him once will know him no more forever." May the God of the widow comfort the heart of our bereaved sister in this hour of her deepest sorrow, and help her to cast all her burden upon him, who careth for her.

Tributes of Respect.

At a regular communication of Harnett Lodge, No. 358, A. F. & A. M., held in their Hall of Hector's Creek Academy, Harnett county, March 28th, 1893, the following was unanimously adopted:

It is at all times a sad duty to announce the death of a member of our order, but the sadness on this occasion is made the more piercing from the fact that he who is the subject of this tribute was so endeared to the membership of this Lodge by his untiring energy in establishing and maintaining the same. Bro. D. C. Holland, who was for so many years an active and influential member of this Lodge, died at his home in Harnett county, on the 1st day of February, 1893, at the age of sixty-five years. He was in every sense of the word a true man—true to his family, true to his church, his lodge, and to every obligation of his life. He was a man of undoubted integrity and possessed to an unlimited extent the confidence of the community in which he was born, lived and died. He was a man of strong convictions and had the manhood to express them on any subject. The loss is not only to this Lodge, but to the entire community, of which he was such an upright and valued citizen. We miss his kindly greeting, his gentle sympathy, his friendly criticism and his unselfish wisdom in our councils; and as we lay this token of affection on his grave, call it not weakness if our eyelids moisten, for he was one of those whom to know was to love and remember. Therefore Resolved 1. That we bow in humble submission to the decrees of him who makes no mistakes.

Resolved 2. That we extend to his loved ones our warmest sympathy in their sad bereavement.

Resolved 3. That a copy of this tribute and resolutions be spread on our minutes, and a copy be sent to the Central Times and BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

Chickens and Eggs,

AND HOW TO GET 'EM.

Use Polk Miller's 'Victory' Poultry Food.

IT ADDS GREATLY TO THE FOWLS' LAYING, and I have never seen a case of Gapes in young chickens when it was used. Now, I would as soon do without salt in my food as to undertake to raise fowls without Polk Miller's Chicken Food.
WILLIS W. HOBSON,
Powhatan county, Va.

We buy it by the dozen boxes, and when my wife has a sick fowl of any kind "we make for these Powders, and that's the last of it." It is an infallible remedy with us.
WM. A. WILLROY,
King William county, Va.

I have used one box, and found it very beneficial to young fowls. Have not lost any with Gapes since I commenced its use.
MISS NELLIE DIGGS,
Mathews Courthouse, Va.

It is a sure preventive of Gapes, and we consider it indispensable in our future efforts at "poultry raising."
MRS. L. H. GRAYBILL,
Arch Mill, Botetourt Co., Va.

It stopped Cholera entirely among my fowls.
MRS J. K. HANNAH,

My Mother's Hands.

Such beautiful, beautiful hands!
They'er neither white nor small,
And you, I know, would scarcely think
That they were fair at all.
I've looked on hands whose form and hue
A sculptor's dream might be;
Yet are those aged, wrinkled hands
Most beautiful to me

Such beautiful, beautiful hands!
Though heart were weary and sad,
These patient hands kept toiling on,
That the children might be glad.
The tears well forth as, looking back
To childhood's distant day,
I think how these hands rested not
While mine were at their play.

Such beautiful, beautiful hands!
They are growing feeble now,
For time and pain have left their work
On hand and heart and brow.
Alas! alas! how near the time
Of pain and loss to me,
When 'neath the daisies, out of sight,
These hands will folded be.

But, O, beyond the shadow land,
Where all is bright and fair,
I know full well these dear old hands
Will palms of victory bear.
When crystal streams through endless years
Flow over golden sands,
And when the old grow young again,
I'll clasp my mother's hands.

What to do for Nursery Accidents.

Bites.—Sometimes while playing with a dog or cat the children get bitten. Very often the teeth do not go through the skin, and the fright is the worst thing in such cases. When the teeth do go through the skin you should immediately apply a hot bread poultice, and renew this when cold.

Broken Limbs.—These occur as the result of falls off a table or chair or down the stairs. The first think to do is to send for the doctor. Do not lift the child from the floor at once, as very often, when the bone is broken, lifting the child allows the limb to hang, and the sharp, broken end of the bone may tear a hole in the skin, or even damage the blood vessels, which are very near to the bones, and either of these complications makes the injury much more serious. Before moving the child you must place the injured limb in such a position that no further harm can be done. If the leg is damaged, gently tie it to the other leg with soft handkerchiefs above and below the place where it is broken. If the arm is broken, place it tenderly on a soft cushion, and let one person attend entirely the careful lifting of this cushion as the child is lifted into bed. He should be placed upon a mattress, and not on a feather bed. Do not attempt to take off the clothes, but leave everything as it is until the arrival of the doctor.

The same treatment should be adopted in the case of any of the bones being put out of joint. This is the best place to give a serious warning against allowing anybody to lift, swing or jerk a child by its arms. Often by a sudden jerk or lift one of the bones is put out of joint near the elbow and this leaves a permanently weak arm. Nursemaids and others are greatly to be blamed for the habit of jerking children over crossings or puddles. Whenever a child is to be lifted, it should be caught around the waist or under the shoulders, as no harm can be done in this way.

Burns and Scalds.—Where matches are left about, or there is not a proper fire-guard always in front of the fire, burns are frequent. Should the clothing catch fire, immediately lay the child flat on the floor and roll the hearthrug, a shawl, or some woollen garment, round it to smother the flames. If a doctor can be obtained, leave the child quiet, only keeping it warm, and, if faint, giving hot milk as a drink. If the doctor cannot be got at once, very carefully remove the clothing, cutting any part which tends to stick to the skin, and leaving it where it sticks. Do not break any blisters, but cover the whole surface with strips of linen soaked in oil, or, where oil cannot be obtained, dredge flour thickly over, and then cover with cotton wool.

Scalds result when the child upsets a cup of hot tea or a kettle, etc., over itself. They are treated in the same way as burns. All cases of burns and scalds are serious, and should be seen by a doctor as soon as possible.

Cuts.—When the child gets a cut with a knife or any sharp object, such as glass, or from a fall, wash the cut well with warm water, to remove any dirt which may have got in, and then put a piece of clean soft linen round the part, and fasten it on by winding cotton round it, or by means of a handkerchief or bandage. Should there be much bleeding, or the wound be large, you should send for the doctor, as a stitch may be required to prevent a very ugly mark, which would be left if the cut were allowed to gape open.

Falls.—Children are constantly tumbling, and generally their falls are not very severe. Should they have a bad fall on to the head or back, this should be carefully attended to, and an examination made by a doctor, as serious consequences often develop some time afterwards. Such children have become cripples from falls down the stairs, or from their nurse's arms on to their backs. If the child is stunned, lay him flat and keep him quiet. Loosen the clothing, and give him fresh air, but do not attempt to rouse him, and let him be seen by a doctor as soon as possible. Even slight falls should be prevented whenever possible. There should be a gate at the top of the stairs, fitted with swinging hinges, so that it is always shut and fastened. Young children should not be allowed to climb into chairs or to the table, etc., as many accidents may result.

Choking, Buttons, etc.—If any [illegible] in the child's throat, and it threatens to choke, try to pull it up with your fingers, passing them as far down as possible, and hooking the substance up. If this is impossible, make the child swallow coarsely chewed bread to try and send it down. Do not give emetics or aperient.

Sufficient has now been said to show how a little intelligent first aid is often of great use in preventing serious consequences following the little mishaps which are likely to occur in the nursery.—Cassell's Family Magazine.

MONROE STATION M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH,
(REV. J. C. ROWE, PASTOR.)
MONROE, N. C., Feb. 23, 1892.

Mr. W. H. Witherspoon:

Dear Sir—Five months ago I bought an Electropoise of you for the treatment of muscular rheumatism, pain in the right side and chest and the unpleasant results of grippe. The use of the Electropoise has relieved the pain and greatly benefited the rheumatism, besides improving my general health very much. I prize it very highly, and have used it in my family for colds and grippe, and obtained satisfactory results in every instance. Yours truly,

J. C. ROWE.

Ashamed of Them.

A groupe of persons was one day last summer strolling through the throne room of the palace at Versailles, such as is too often duplicated among Americans in Europe and at home.

A father and mother, loud voiced and richly dressed, somewhat pompous in manner, stood near a picture, glancing anxiously whenever they spoke, as if in dread of criticism, to a young girl who held herself a little apart from them. Her features showed that she must be their daughter, but in other respects she was as different from them as if she had been born in another rank in life.

Her dress and manner were quiet and well bred, her voice low and clear. She spoke to the guide in Parisian French, and was as gentle and lacking in self-assertion as they were coarse and pretentious. In a word, they had bought for her the education and training which they never had had.

They followed her with fond, admiring looks mingled almost with awe, while she discussed the portraits in the galleries with a friend. The good building contractor and his wife had seldom heard of these famous Bourbons and De Medicis of past ages with whom she was so familiar. She answered their questions with cold civility, but when it was possible, she ignored them altogether. It seemed as if she would gladly have forgotten that they were in the gallery, or, indeed in her life at all.

Presently she stopped before a picture of the Madonna which has been ascribed to several painters. The girl had keen, well trained artistic sensibilities, and she looked with kindling eyes at the outline and color of the beautiful figure which for three centuries has delighted the world.

"And to think," she said to her friend, turning away with a sigh, "that even the name of the painter is forgotten. He must have given years of his life to this picture, and yet nobody remembers him or is grateful!"

"That sort of thing happens often in the world," said her friend, looking thoughtfully at the old couple who were wandering about neglected. They had poured out their money, their cares, their prayers and love to make this woman what she was, and she was the first to ignore them, to disown the debt!

Ungrateful and unloving, she lacked the essential qualities that are the charm of true womanhood, and with all her culture was less worthy of respect than the parents she despised.—Youth's Companion.

The Sheep and Wool Industry.

There is a more general belief in the value of sheep on the farm than at any former period in the whole history of our agriculture. A reason for this, perhaps, lies in the fact that the agricultural press has been almost a unit in urging farmers to consider this branch of the stock business. The result has been that during the past year our flocks have been increased by a million and a half head, and our wool product by 10,000,000 pounds.

This is a move in the right direction, and we hope the near future will show a still greater increase. We think it would be hard to find any farmer who has gone intelligently into the sheep business, keeping good stock and giving good care, whose profits from his year's work have not been considerably augmented by their aid. If any of our readers are still a little doubtful upon the sheep question, we would suggest that they observe the men who have been trying it. Are they going out of business, or are they making arrangements for larger flocks and for still better care?

Within the past thirty years the wool production of the United States has very nearly trebled, yet we could double it again without more than meeting the requirements for our own consumption.—Indiana Farmer.

The Wanton Calf.

A calf, full of play and wantonness, seeing the ox at plough, could not forbear insulting him. "What a sorry poor drudge art thou," says he, "to bear that heavy yoke upon your neck, and go all day drawing a plough at your tail, to turn up the ground for your master; but you are a wretchful dull slave, and know no better, or else you wouldn't do it. See what a happy life I lead: I go just where I please; sometimes I lie down under the cool shade; sometimes I frisk about in the open sunshine, and, when I please, slake my thirst in the clear sweet brook; but you, if you were to perish, have not so much as a little dirty water to refresh you." The ox, not at all moved with what he said, went quietly on with his work; and in the evening, was unyoked and turned loose. Soon after which he saw the Calf taken out of the field and delivered to a butcher, who immediately led him to be slaughtered. But just as the fatal knife was about to be applied to his throat the ox drew near, and whispered to him to this purpose—"Behold the end of your innocence and arrogance! it was for this only that you were suffered to live at all; and pray now friend whose condition is best, yours or mine?"

Moral.—To insult people in distress is the property of a cruel, indiscreet, and giddy temper; for as the proceedings of fortune are very irregular and uncertain, we may, the next turn of the wheel, be thrown down to their condition, and they exalted to ours. We are likewise given to understand by this fable what the consequence of an idle life generally is, and how well satisfied laborious, diligent men are, in the end, when they come quietly to enjoy the fruits of their industry. They who by little tricks and sharpings, or by open violence and robbery, live in a high, expensive way, often in their hearts, at least, despise the poor, honest man who is contented with the virtuous product of his daily labor and patiently submits to his destiny. But how often is the poor man comforted by seeing these wanton villains led in triumph to the altar of justice, while he has many a cheerful summer's morning to enjoy abroad, and many a long winter's evening to indulge himself in at home, by a quiet hearth and under an unenvied roof: blessings which often attend a sober, industrious man, though the idle and the profligate are utter strangers to them. Luxury and intemperance, besides being certain to shorten a man's days, are very apt not only to engage people with their seeming charms into a debauched life, utterly prejudicial to their health, but to make them have a contempt for others, whose good sense and true taste of happiness inspire them with an aversion to idleness and effeminacy, and put them upon hardening their constitution by innocent exercise and laudable employment. How many do gluttony and sloth send into an untimely grave! while the temperate and the active drink sober draughts of life, and spin out their thread to the most desirable length.—Exchange.

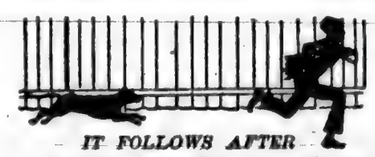
A nursed troubled grows very rapidly. Turn from it and let it fade from sight.



IT FOLLOWS AFTER

—a disordered liver—that you're subject to attacks of cold or chills on slight exposure. You get "tired" easily. The feeling is accompanied by a "tired" digestion, which fails to assimilate the food. This often results in what we call Indigestion or Biliousness.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets arouse the liver to vigorous action, and this in turn starts the machinery of the body into activity. Liver, stomach and bowels feel the tonic effect, and in consequence the entire system is invigorated. The processes become self-regulating, and a reserve force is stored up against exposure to disease.

If you're too thin, too weak or nervous, it must be that food assimilation is wrong. This is the time to take Pleasant Pellets. They permanently cure Constipation, Sour Stomach, Dyspepsia, Sick or Bilious Headache, Dizziness and Jaundice.

Catarrh cured by using Dr. Sage's Remedy.

Doing Good.

Acts 10: 38—"Who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the Devil, for God was with him."

"Who went about doing good." How complimentary would be such words recorded in the memoir of some departed worthy, or upon the tomb of some deceased friend. Suppose, in passing through a cemetery, we should find this epitaph, "Who went about doing good," &c.? What reflections would be awakened in our minds! What kindness and reverence we would entertain for the memory of such an one! We would instinctively call to mind deeds of self-denial and unselfishness—of compassion, tenderness and sympathy. We would be constrained to say, here lies the friend of the orphan and the widow, the poor and the afflicted. We should feel like doing homage to one of such noble record. Possibly our thoughts might revert to a Howard visiting the filthy prisons of Europe in the interests of fallen and suffering humanity. We might think of the many benefactors of our race who devoted their lives to the good of mankind. We need not help thinking of such self denying men as Brainerd, Martyn and Judson, who consecrated their lives to preaching the gospel to the perishing. But after we had thought of all these and a Paul besides, our minds would turn to him who surpassed all them, "who went about doing good," who never did anything but good, for he was holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners.

To do good should be the highest aim of every intelligent being, and is worthy of God himself. In its noblest, purest sense, it is a desire begotten of God. Hence, Jesus could say that he came from heaven not to do his own will but the will of him who sent him. While it should be the aim of all men to do the greatest possible amount of good, yet the vast majority of mankind hate good, love evil, and pursue after it. Oh, the pains, the sorrows, the wretchedness flesh is heir to, because man drinketh iniquity as the ox drinketh water—rolls sin under his tongue as a sweet morsel. What miseries the drunkard has heaped upon a family left in poverty and shame! What moral blight are infidels and the venders of pernicious literature of to-day inflicting upon society! Think of Paine, a Voltaire, an Ingersol, and the novelists of the times. These stand at the fountain-head and poison the streams from which our youth quench their thirst. How shocked we would be to see their epitaphs written "who went about doing good"! What mockery to inscribe such words upon the tombs of Alexander, Cæsar and Napoleon, who deluged the world in blood and caused one general wail from the bleeding hearts of millions to ascend to heaven. Upon their tombs might be appropriately inscribed "But one sinner destroyeth much good."

Our subject to day is

DOING GOOD.

And the most perfect illustration of it is Jesus who spent his entire life in doing good to men. He was wholly absorbed in this object and it was the constant end and aim of his ministry on earth. He came to destroy the works of the Devil and to save the souls of men. His mission was to preach the gospel to the poor, to heal the broken hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind.

Christianity is aggressive. It is not content to have a place and a name in the world. It has a divine mission. "Go," said Jesus, "into all the world." The disciples understood by this command that they were not to remain always at Jerusalem. Its mission is not to sit still and wait for chances or opportunities, but to make them. Its disciples have no plea for idleness by saying "No man hath hired us." "Son, go work to-day in my vineyard." See the example of Jesus. He did not sit still and wait for something to turn up—did not wait for the lame, blind and diseased to come to him, but sought them out.

Matthew tells us he went about all Galilee, teaching in the synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sicknesses, &c. Such was his fame that great multitudes followed him from Judea, Galilee, Samaria, Decapolis and other places, and he healed them all. He was thronged by crowds who cast the lame, the blind and the palsied at his feet. The life of Jesus was a busy one, so that often he had not time so much as to eat. So you see Jesus was constantly engaged in doing good. He was not fitful and spasmodic. His zeal knew no abatement, hence he could say "the zeal of thine house hath eaten me up." Souls were perishing, hence he must be about his Father's business. Now he is at Jerusalem, now in Perea, then in Galilee, then in the coasts of Tyre and Sidon. In Luke 9: 10–17, we see the amount of good he did in one day. The six days before his death occupy nearly one-half of John and about a third of the other gospels. He was always abounding in the work of the Lord. He felt that a necessity was laid upon him: "I must work while it is called to-day." And how much he did no tongue can tell. John says the world could not contain the books that might be written of him. Who can estimate the good he did? He sowed beside all waters and gave a portion to seven and to eight.

Then I notice that Jesus was not easily discouraged in doing good. He paid no attention to croakers and grumblers. He did not cater to popular tastes—did not seek popularity nor the applause of men. He did not swerve from the path of duty to avoid the censure of men. He did not even seek to please men. When denounced by scribes and Pharisees, he did not cease his labors. If his ministry was not successful in one place, he went to another. When persecuted in one city, he traveled to another. He did not aim to attract attention by making a noise or raising a sensation. He did not blow a trumpet when he performed a cure or preached a sermon, nor did he advertise his subjects. He did not stop by the way to dispute about annise and cummin, and tithes. He had no stereotyped way of doing good. Some must read their prayers, wear a gown, preach in a consecrated pulpit, and be buried in a consecrated cemetery. Some waste time over the shibboleths of parties. Nor was he one of the kid-glove gentry. He sought out the publicans and harlots.

The mission of Christianity in the world is to do it good. It has originated all those agencies which have blessed mankind. Asylums for the insane, the orphan and the afflicted have sprung up through the agency of the gospel. Institutions for the deaf and dumb and the blind, homes for the aged and infirm and the needy had no existence prior to the Christian dispensation. Bible societies, Sunday schools and missionary organizations for sending the gospel to the heathen had their origin among Christian nations. Our anti-mission brethren have opposed all these agencies but in doing so they have been found fighting against God, and the seal of his disapprobation seems to rest upon them. All who bear the name of Christ have a work to do in building up his cause in the earth. There is no retreat for the church except in disaster. She must go forth with victorious banners. She must go from conquering to conquer. There is a great conflict to be engaged in, and each soldier is expected to do his duty.

As voluntary and accountable agents, we can choose our sphere of doing good. No one has a right to censure his brother in this liberty.

There is no monopoly in doing good. All classes may enjoy this privilege. All grades of talent may find employment. There is ample scope for all, for the field is the world. We can teach in the Sunday-school, or give as the Lord has blessed us to sustain the gospel at home or send it abroad. We can visit the poor and the afflicted. We can rejoice with them who rejoice or weep with them who weep. We can hold up the hands of some fainting pilgrim. We may cheer some discouraged soul. We may give a cup of cold water in the name of a disciple. We can place a wreath on some forgotten grave. We can lift some burden or make some soul happy. The word of cheer and encouragement may stimulate some timid soul to press on. We may carry the gospel from house to house and distribute religious tracts. The work of colportage furnishes efficient means of accomplishing good. By this agency the gospel may be carried to the lowly and the destitute. A colporteur sold an old book to Richard Baxter's father. Baxter, reading it, was converted, and wrote the "Saint's Rest," which was the means of Philip Doddridge's conversion. Doddridge wrote the "Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul," which was the means of bringing to Christ Leigh Richmond, the author of the "Dairyman's Daughter." This book was the means of Wilberforce's conversion and thousands of others. And Wilberforce was the author of a work which was instrumental in the conversion of the distinguished Dr. Chalmers. True it is, "There shall be a handful of corn upon the tops of the mountains, the fruit whereof shall shake like Lebanon." Colportage is necessary in this age of vile trash and vicious books. The press is teeming with yellow-covered novels and books arrayed against religion and morals. This is an age of reading, and men will read something either good or bad. The venders of polluted literature may be found at all our busy thoroughfares, at the railroad station and on the train. Now the colporteur must meet those with the Bible and with good books and tracts.

In addition to this, we must in self defense disseminate our denominational literature. Each denomination is actively engaged in disseminating its own literature. In this work Rome is not behind the rest. Unitarianism, Swedenborgianism, as well as every form of skepticism and infidelity, are busy at work, endeavoring to subvert the doctrines of the Christian religion and to overthrow the very pillars of Christianity.

To do good God must be with us. The measure of our obligation to do good is the measure of our ability. "She hath done what she could." While this is true, our labors are in vain without the divine favor and blessing. The text tells us that God was with Jesus and assigns this as a reason for his success. Hence, he could say, "I can of mine own self do nothing." And he said to his disciples, "Without me ye can do nothing." Hence, he commanded his Apostles to tarry at Jerusalem until they were endued with power from on high. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." Spiritual power is needed. We must go forth armed in the panoply of heaven. Wealth, talents, genius, rank, influence and numbers are of little avail unless God be with us. Let us, then, seek the divine blessing. Let us be assured of the divine presence, for Jesus himself has promised it, "Lo, I am with you alway even unto the end of the world."

The Call to the Ministry.

Brother Editor:—As there has been a great deal said in the RECORDER about the call to the ministry, I would like to express my views, if you will let an old farmer scribe do so.

I think that Bro. White and Bro. Taylor stand flat-footed with both feet on God's word—that God calls every one of his followers to preach his word to the best of his or her ability—that he implants this desire at conversion. God holds each and every one responsible for the culture of this desire just as he does the culture of the talents and gifts with which he has endowed them.

I believe that God has left the calling of men to the bishopric to the churches, and why? because he has given them the qualifications that they might not err. God has founded his church on true republican principles. He gives each one of his followers a fair showing in the race set before them, spiritual and temporal. He has founded his kingdom upon justice and equity, that each one of his followers should have a fair showing in the great race of life. I don't believe any man has a right to be "whining" around that "God has called me to be a bishop," but that he should wait for some church to discover his fitness and call for his ordination, so he could serve them. I am opposed to ordaining men until their services are needed; it is contrary to the plain teachings of the Scripture. It was not so in the beginning when the Apostles went out and planted or organized the churches. They had no bishops or elders, but they were self contained and had a holy self-sufficiency, each one exercising his gifts and doing his own preaching. How long this state of pastorless churches prevailed cannot be ascertained; but I presume that when the fires of Calvary began to grow dim, the "Devil slipped in the churches, and began to puff up men with self aspirations," each one thinking that he was the greatest preacher and that he ought to lead the service. This state of things brought about confusion, and Paul conceived the idea of ordaining bishops or elders to have the oversight of this matter in order to prevent confusion, and that those who were set apart for this work might give themselves fully to it, cultivate their talents, gifts and holy desires to their highest susceptibility, and consecrate themselves fully to the work and take the place of their absent Lord as under-shepherds. Not that they were to do all the preaching, but that they were to lead the services and designate who should preach to prevent confusion, and that they might cultivate the talents and develop the gifts of their flock in imitation of the Great Shepherd, so that each church might become a live, active, consecrated and successful body of believers, with their talents, gifts and desires cultivated and developed to the highest point.

I don't believe in any superstitious call. It is contrary to the plain teachings of God's word and also of reason, because God never does foolish things. We very often hear men say God called them to be ministers, and when the churches educated them, they proved complete failures. In other cases, they were physically unable to preach. But God don't make mistakes. A few years ago a young brother thought God had called him to the foreign field, but he died before he had finished the necessary preparations.

God don't force men into his service, or into the ministry, but he has opened the way wide and invites all to come to his service and implants a desire in every breast to be useful and to win others to his service. I say again that he leaves to the churches the duty of calling men to the full work of the ministry, and that no man ought to be ordained unless some church needs him and calls for his ordination, or unless his services are needed in a destitute and foreign field.

I believe that there has been too much stress laid on the call to the ministry, and that its tendency is evil and that continually. I believe that the most gifted and the most competent are often kept out of the ministry by this great stress that has been laid on the call to the ministry. On the other hand, it opens wide the door for the "superstitious" to enter; for more than a quarter of a century Western North Carolina has furnished the most of the young men who have been educated and set apart to the full work of the ministry. I am glad that Western North Carolina is becoming enlightened, and that the D. D.'s are teaching true theology, and that the great mass of the followers of Christ will have a fair showing in the great race, and that they shall soon be educated and fully developed.

Then the churches will receive such an impetus as never before. Ignorance makes men moral cowards. What would intelligent and cultivated Greece have thought of Julius Cæsar if he had started to conquer the world with a trained and well-developed set of officers and had neglected to teach his private soldiers how to use their weapons of warfare? They would have thought that he was crazy. Cæsar knew that his success depended upon the culture and the training of his private soldiers as it did upon his officers. The tendency of Christianity at the present day is to conquer the world for Christ with a trained ministry to the neglect of the masses. I hope the time will soon come in this enlightened age when young men will be ashamed to be "whining" around, exclaiming that God had called them to the ministry, and Jacob like, stealing the bishopright of others, but they will remember that God calls every man to preach—that he has given each one a talent, and holds each individual responsible for the care and development of the talent that he has committed to their care and keeping. It is contrary to good government in church or state for aspirants to be "whining" around seeking positions. I don't believe that God ever intended any such thing in his church, but that the church should seek the man who best fills the place.

The Scriptures teach us plainly that God reveals the secret of men's fitness to fill the office of bishop or pastor to the churches—not in a superstitious way, but that he has given them the capacity to discern the fitness of men to fill this high position. When Titus went aronnd to ordain bishops, he didn't tell the churches to look up aspirants for this exalted position, but he told them to select one of their own number. God never intended for his church to be cursed with aspirants for office, but that his people should select them by their own voice, on true republican principles, from their own number, and that they were to devote all their time to that church individually and should be their shepherd. No man is capable of being shepherd of but one flock. Spurgeon with his giant intellect fully developed was never capable of being the shepherd of but one flock.

Two Extremes.

Years ago our Baptist people were perhaps rather on the extreme in so frequently and persistently thrusting a discussion of their distinctive views on other people. Then our views were deemed so important that they were advocated in nearly every sermon preached. It may be that some of our views were given rather undue prominence, to the neglect of other important matters. But if this extreme resulted in some harm, it also did much good. It stirred up people to an examination of Bible teachings; and when persons became Baptists, they believed something, and could give a reason for it.

From the time of Christ and the Apostles to the present time, Baptists have stood alone in the advocacy of a regenerated church membership, of believers alone as proper subjects for baptism, of immersion as Bible baptism, and of immersion as a prerequisite to the Lord's supper. Formerly, these fundamental Bible teachings were kept more prominently before the people than they are now. Finding these teachings in the Bible, and believing them, made Baptists that stood for something. They had some religious backbone. In those times Baptists believed these principles to be so important that rather than give them up they would go to prisons, whipping posts, and the stake.

But now we have drifted to the opposite extreme. Now our preachers but seldom preach our distinctive views; and if they do, they almost apologize for holding them. They have so much to say in praise of Christian charity and liberality as to leave the impression on people that distinctive Baptist doctrines are ugly, troublesome things that need to be palliated and apologized for.

If Baptists are made at all under such teaching, they are as a rule weak and wavering, ready to be carried about with every wind of doctrine. These are the wishy-washy Baptists who, if something is done in their church they do not like, can go and join a Pedobaptist church where much is taught and practiced they believe to be unscriptural. These are the kind of Baptists who deem it more important to follow a relative or friend into a Pedobaptist church than it is to follow Christ in the example he set and the truth he taught.

But these people say, "I believe in immersion. I have been immersed. I could not join a Pedobaptist church and be sprinkled. I do not believe sprinkling is baptism at all. I do not believe in sprinkling babies."

If you believe in immersion as the only Bible baptism; if you do not believe in sprinkling, then it is utterly inconsistent for you to join a church where you will give your life, your influence, and your money to uphold a church that practices what you believe is unscriptural. If Christ was immersed, and taught immersion as baptism, then it is positive disobedience and disloyalty to practice, or in any way support, sprinkling or pouring for baptism. And yet we have fallen on times of such extreme looseness and indifference to Bible truth, that many persons are guilty of this glaring inconsistency.

So extreme is the looseness of these times, that we constantly hear it said, "It makes no difference what church you belong to, just so you are a christian." This is the same as saying that error is as good as truth—that sprinkling is as good as Bible baptism—that babies are as much entitled to baptism as believers—that disobedience is as good as obedience—that a man-made church is as good as the one set up by Christ.

It is plain to every thinking mind that all the different churches cannot be right. Each one holds faith and practice differing from all the others. Each one claims to hold such important truth not held by others as to justify them in having a separate organization to support and teach their distinctive views. Each church believes all others to be wrong in many important particulars. It is, therefore, impossible for all to be right; and to say that one is as good as another is absurd and false. If one was as good as another, each would hold and practice the same Bible truth. If they did this, all would come into one church.

Here is another extreme. Baptist parents have become criminally indifferent in regard to the religious training of their children. If they teach them any thing in regard to their becoming Christians, it is a rare thing for them to teach them anything in regard to becoming Baptists. Recently a Baptist mother said: "I never said a word to my children in my life about churches. I let them grow up and choose for themselves." This negligence has become common among Baptists. It is all wrong. The difference between Pedobaptist denominations is really too unimportant to cause them to divide. They ought to unite. To choose between these denominations is a matter of little importance. But Baptists differ widely and fundamentally from all other denominations. To be a Baptist means something. You ought to have Bible reasons for being a Baptist; and you ought to teach these reasons to your children. A wise Catholic said: "Give me a child until he is seven years old, and I care not who takes him after that; he will be a Catholic." Baptist parents are failing to teach their children Bible truth in regard to churches, and their children are drifting off to other denominations. If any people have truth to teach, and ought to teach it, Baptists are the people. Let Baptist writers, teachers and preachers urge this duty on Baptist parents.

A Desire to Encourage.

The Bible tells us to exhort and admonish each other. We desire sympathy to encourage us in the service of our Lord, to our growth in grace into a closer relation with our Saviour. Is it not the desire of all our hearts, "Oh for a closer walk with God!" Why are we walking so far from him? He has so kindly asked us to take up the cross and follow him. Are we complying with this request? Not as fully as we should by any means. Let all of us who profess to be followers of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ take fresh courage and determination to follow nearer the cross, more earnestly obeying the teachings of our Saviour. Let us not do as Peter did—follow afar off, but like the humble servant that bowed at Jesus' feet. How can we afford to do so little for Christ, after he has done so much for us, unworthy creatures as we are? He has given his life for us, spilt his precious blood on Calvary's mount that we might have life eternal. After he has done so much for us and proven his love, we ought to say we love him because he first loved us. We have realized his love to some extent, and may prove our love to him by keeping his commands. He says "Take up the cross and follow me." He has shown us how to live and how to labor. Let us, in the first place, go to the throne of grace and ask God to give us the Holy Spirit to lead us in the path of righteousness. We all have a work to do for our Lord. To all idle servants he says, "Go work in my vineyard." Brother, the work you do for the Master, as well as the pay you get for it, will be very enjoyable. Try it. We are not all called to go to China or some other heathen land to preach the everlasting gospel in person, as some of our brothers and sisters are, yet we are to preach through them by helping them.

And then the work at home devolves upon us. Every one of us are under obligation to serve our Lord; so let us get at it. "Now is the accepted time. Now is the day of salvation." Let us pray for each other and be united in every good word and work that tends to the advancement of our Lord's kingdom, and when it is done, we'll sit down on the banks of the river of life in the shade of the trees and talk it over with joy inexpressible and full of glory.

Amidst the whirl of machinery, in the bustle of the street, even in the midst of conversation, we may be able mentally to disappear out of time, and stand for the instant in eternity face to face with God. A few prayers are more precious than momentary ejaculations offered in the midst of daily occupations. He who has formed this habit has a strong tower into which he can retreat in every time of need.—Stalker, D. D.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 26, 1893.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

"What Baptists Believe," by the late J. L. Burrows, will be given to every new subscriber to the BIBLICAL RECORDER who will pay $2.00 in advance for a years' subscription. We will also give the book to every old subscriber who will pay his subscription to date and a year in advance.

Think of it! Your denominational paper, the subscription price of which is $2.00, one year, and a neatly bound book of over a hundred pages, containing a clear and fair expression of what Baptists believe and practice, all for the price of the paper.

Remember, this offer is to new and old subscribers alike.

AN "OVERLOADED MINISTRY."

A recent article copied in the RECORDER from the Christian Inquirer, on the above subject, has created somewhat of a sensation we believe among the brethren. We are very much in the habit of thinking, in our Southland at least, that the supply of ministers does not, as a rule, meet the demand. But it appears from the statements of our esteemed contemporary, and from information gathered from other sources, that in parts of the eastern States especially, the supply of ministers considerably exceeds the demand. In fact, so far as the section referred to by the Inquirer is concerned, things have surely assumed rather a serious attitude to justify the editor of a dignified journal in using the following language, "A church is no sooner vacant than forty men spring up ready to take the vacant pulpit. We hear every day of men of pure character, large experience, and fine education, who cannot get settlements. It is poor encouragement to study for the ministry when, after long courses of education, so many gifted men fail to find churches to preach to, which seems a duty."

We do not suppose that the author of the above words means to confine his remarks to Baptist preachers and churches; but there is nothing in the article referred to, certainly, that would exclude them; so we suppose he is referring to the state of things generally among the evangelical churches of his section. If the Inquirer's article is a true description of the condition of things, (and the writer does not seem to be exaggerating), as to ministerial demand and supply, the situation is one that ought to excite grave thought among our people; because the eastern States claim to be rather in the van of American people in material, mental and religious progress; and, as there is a great tendency among the Southern people to acknowledge the push, energy and piety of this progressive part of our great union by adopting many of their customs and plans of secular and religious work, the day may be near at hand when our supply of ministers may be far in excess of the demand. Christ's command, "Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest to send forth more laborers into the harvest," was intended by the Master to be incumbent on his disciples for all time, and the evident surplus of ministers in some sections of our country, and possibly of other countries, demands that we should seek to know the causes which have led to this overloading of the ministry, and that we should apply the needed remedies. The mention of what we conceive to be some of these causes will suggest, we hope, the needed remedies on the part of all who are concerned.

1. One evident cause of this state of things is, we think, the mistaken notion on the part of laymen that they can work much more successfully for Christ if they ask for and receive license from the churches and afterward ordination to the gospel ministry. It is a well known fact that almost any young or older man among us, who shows anything like average capacity for the work, can often obtain a license to preach the gospel if he insists on it. Especially is this the case when he has a glib tongue, ready address, and what is called "smartness,"—a quality, by the way, which in the eyes of the average Baptist and the average American, stones for many faults. Often a brother no sooner shows a gift to "exhort" his brethren with some power than many will say to him, "You ought to preach;" and this remark is so common that the brother [illegible] that he can do much good by exhorting and by preaching as any laymen is permitted to do, without license or ordination. [illegible] of the RECORDER as to the call to preach are, we [illegible] well known. Such have to say that the man who has not a well defined and clear cut experience of a call to preach has no right to ask for either license or ordination. Why, oh why, cannot our godly laymen on whom the Lord has conferred the gift to speak to the edification of his people be content to labor in an humbler sphere than to attempt the regular work of the ministry? And when will our people learn the fact that a man may be pious, learned, eloquent and gifted as a speaker, and yet not necessarily be called to preach the gospel as his life's work? Verily, we may have to re-set the old Baptist landmarks soon on this subject, and insist, as did our forefathers, on a downright heartfelt experience of a call to the work before we "lay hands" on any man.

2. A second cause may be found in the fact that more and more the ministry among our churches is assuming the air, the tone, the features of a profession; and the number of those who wish to enter the ministry for the respectability and the money that is in it, is increasing. The justness of this remark is well sustained by the following words from the article mentioned: "The trouble lies largely with ordaining councils, and unscrupulous churches, that allow the poorer quality (of ministers) to glut the market. A smart insurance agent, or a ready-speaking carpenter, or a gifted house-painter, thinks he could be useful in the ministry and keep on with his trade, and a foolish church calls a council to ordain him. The work is done, and the man with the glue pot or paint brush in one hand, and a limp Bible in the other, crowds out the man who has had a dozen years of hard study in the academy, the college, and the theological seminary."

3. Another reason why particular sections of country have an overloaded ministry is perhaps found in the fact that many such enter the ministry with the idea that they will be called readily to preach in sections of country that they prefer; and being disappointed in this, they are unwilling to go to sections less favored, or to the foreign field, in which there is ample room for their talents and demand for the word they preach. These fall back readily on a convenient secular employment and bide their time, and perhaps hasten their next opportunity by doubtful advances to surrounding churches, and questionable methods to secure pastorates already filled, and still more questionable means to secure them when vacant. It bodes no good to our Zion, or the people of any other creed, if it really ever happens that our vacant pastorates, like vacant political offices, should excite a scramble among churchless aspirants. And it is a sad fact that some good men in some sections of our country are almost forced into the attitude of waiting aspirants by the surplus of men already inducted into ministerial work, who, having entered in the manner just described, have no higher sense of the sacredness of their calling than to actually indulge in a ridiculous scramble for a tempting pastorate, or for one that has a "living" in it. It is time surely to cry a halt!

4. A fourth reason may be found in the fact that the opinion is becoming quite common among some of our best thinkers that God may call men into the ministry for temporary work, and when that work is finished they do right to retire entirely from the gospel ministry and resume some secular employment. Possibly this opinion may be correct, but we can but think that its general prevalence would be calculated largely to increase the number of those who enter the ministry, or retire from it, with no deeper sense of duty than can be found in a mere personal preference of a work on their part which they lightly enter and as readily drop.

5. A fifth reason can be found in the ready compliance of ordaining councils in the matter of setting apart men for the work of the ministry at the bidding of thoughtless churches, or at the mere request of the candidates themselves, without subjecting them to anything like a searching examination as to their call to the work. Well may the Inquirer say, "What if the church in Scrubtown say they want him! What if the little 7x9 house was crowded on the Sunday when he was advertised to preach on the 'Witch of Endor!' What if his aged father is a pious deacon who would be offended if he did not pass! No candidate should be put into the ministry unless he is mentally, morally, and theologically prepared for the work."

TWO QUESTIONS.

(1) If a person has been excluded from a Baptist church, would it be proper for a sister Baptist church to override the discipline of the first church by receiving said member into her fellowship immediately, and without any confessions on the part of the excluded person?

(2) When a person has been excluded from church fellowship, and supposes that he has been unjustly dealt with, what course is open to him to obtain redress?

I ask these questions, not because I desire to be informed as to Baptist usage, but because I have been asked similar questions of late, and I wish our churches generally to be informed as to Baptist usage on these points.

JNO. S. HARDAWAY.

ANSWER.—To the first question, we answer that it would not be proper for a church to receive an excluded person under the conditions stated.

To the second question, we reply that the excluded person should apply to another church for admission, giving at the same time a full statement of his trouble with the excluding church. Then let the church applied to appoint a committee, composed of wise and discreet members, to examine into the matter at issue; and if, after the completion of the labors of the committee, the church should be fully convinced that the excluded person had been unjustly dealt with, then let him be admitted to membership. No Christian should be wrongfully kept from church membership.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

ROCKINGHAM.

Any one leaving Raleigh in the early spring will be surprised to find how far advanced the flowers and vegetation generally are when compared with what he left not over seventy miles north of him. Here in Rockingham I could see the young peaches for some distance from the trees. The leaves of some trees were nearly grown, and if I had put my visit off a week later I would have had strawberries for dinner.

Bro. Johnson was due to preach at Lilesville on this, the second Sunday; but the death of Bro. Jones kept him at home to conduct the funeral services, which he did from the Baptist church.

A good meeting had just closed, in which there were a good number of professions, and a fine interest generally.

The congregations at the Baptist church are always good, and the brethren are moving on just as well as they could wish.

The uniting of the Richmond and Anson Associations is most acceptable to every one I heard speak of it. A stronger and more enthusiastic interest will be created in the work of the Association.

Bro. Johnson did all he could for me in my work, not only in his own congregation, but went with me to Roberdell Factory, three miles away, where I spent some time with the brethren who live at the factory. I found some of the very best brethren there. We need by all means to look after these people more energetically than we have ever done before. The training they get in their work, and the prompt and certain pay of their wages, fits them to be the very best and most useful members of our churches.

Bro. H. C. Dockery believes in being comfortable and well fixed at home, both on his own account as well as for his friends. He is arranging by means of a "hydraulic ram" to supply his house and lot with splendid spring water, which is a half mile away. This he will do at comparatively small cost, and what a luxury it will be! Bro. Dockery, while apparently run over with business, is fully alive to his church work, and will go the Southern Baptist Convention, and also attend the meeting of the Board of Trustees at the approaching commencement at Wake Forest College.

I spent half day at Lilesville, which was the first opportunity I had ever had of stopping in the town. It is to all appearances strictly a Southern town, the inhabitants of which, as a rule, had plenty of the comforts of life, and were not particularly desirous of increasing the number and variety of their neighbors. I regarded it a privilege to visit the home of Col. Liles, who died some years ago, and which is now occupied by Mrs. Liles and Miss Sallie, the youngest daughter. The house remains just as it was fifty years ago. And the marks which time has made only tend to deepen the impression that it was the home of a happy family, only two of whom were now sheltered by the old roof.

Bro. W. R. Cox (not the Congressman), but an old friend in years past, was very kind to me, and I was only too glad to be permitted to spend a portion of the evening in his home.

I never saw people so stirred up as I found them at except probably in the case of Fife or Sam Jones. For several days Bro. Adams has been carrying on a meeting in the Baptist church, and the people of all denominations are going in crowds. Chairs are being brought in from the stores and the homes of the people to accommodate those who come to hear preaching. I was at two services. I do not think I ever saw people more interested or more eager to hear. The preacher made no attempt at display, but was very plain and simple in what he said, yet it seemed to impress those who heard in a way I have not often seen. The music was led by a young Brother Price of Chicago. He plays exceptionally well, but has no voice to amount to anything. There are, however, some fine voices in the choir, and the whole congregation seems to be charmed by every piece sung.

These things are more or less a mystery. Big sermons and grand music often fail to impress the people, while other men and other means not so pretentious, carry the people, as it were, "by storm." "Not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

I found Bro. Austin's people in the midst of a good meeting in the Second church in Charlotte. Bro. N. S. Jones, who was assisting him, was taken sick, and had to return to his home in Salisbury. Dr. Pritchard is now assisting Bro. Austin, and the meeting is growing in interest each day.

The brethren of the church are greatly rejoiced at the prospect of keeping their pastor. The evidences which Bro. Austin has had that he is much loved and appreciated by his people ought to do much to strengthen and encourage him in his work.

I spent Saturday and Sunday with Bro. M. L. Kesler at the old historic church at Spring Hill. I suppose there is no better community anywhere in the State than the one around Spring Hill church. The people are so thickly settled that in places it looks almost like a country village. "Uncle John Monroe," as every one calls him, was pastor of this church for sixty-three consecutive years. His photograph, so I learn, is in nearly every house in the neighborhood. Better than this, however, he was enabled to photograph the principles and piety of his life upon the hearts of the people who sat under his ministrations, and who now venerate his memory as few people do.

Spring Hill has had a permanent school for generations past, and this has done much to fit and qualify the membership of the church for the excellent work it is now doing. Bro. W. J. Mathews, a graduate of Wake Forest College, has charge of the school at present, and steps are now being taken to enlarge the patronage and facilities of the school.

Bro. Kesler, the pastor, and a number of the brethren aided me in securing quite a good list of new subscribers. J. C. C.

....We hear much these days about "turning on the lights." It is all right to turn on light, nobody objects to that, but turning on light is one thing while turning out spite is something else.—Rev. M. L. Kesler.

....We learn from the Wadesboro Messenger and Intelligencer that the meeting at the Baptist church there is still in progress, and great interest is being manifested. Bro. Wildman, the pastor, is preaching excellent sermons nightly to large congregations.

....It is said the Presidents of the United States, Senators, Judges, and Governors, as a rule, come, not from the so called great Universities, but from the graduates of the small Colleges. Real solid drill work, as is done in the Colleges, will make men.

....Rev. G. L. Finch, of the Second Baptist church, who was quite sick last week, is able to be out again, though still quite feeble. His appointments were filled the past two Sundays by Revs. Edwards, Nelson and Johnson.—Goldsboro Headlight, April 20.

....At the Southern Baptist Convention at Nashville, we suggest that no hymn-books be advertised, nor that there be any specially imported tune raisers. Let Bro. Penn and Bro. Durham get together and proceed to raise the roof on "There is a fountain," etc.—Baptist Witness.

....Rev. Hight C. Moore, the efficient pastor at Morehead City, will on the second of May be married in the First Baptist church in Goldsboro to Miss Laura Peterson the accomplished daughter of Mr. J. E. Peterson of Goldsboro, N. C. We extend our congratulations.

....Please announce through the RECORDER, that Dr. Chas. E. Taylor will deliver an address at Aulander Bertie county on Friday, May 5th, before a joint meeting of the teachers of Bertie, Hertford and Northampton. A cordial invitation extended to all.—C. W. Mitchell.

....The South Fork Union Meeting will be held with the Baptist church at Lowell in Gaston county, on Friday before the 5th Sunday in April. The new house will be dedicated on Sunday, the sermon being preached by Dr. C. Durham of Raleigh.—M. P. Matheney, Pastor.

....Rev. J. A. Smith, pastor, was aided in an interesting meeting at Whiteville last week, by Rev. L. Johnson of Rockingham. Bro. Johnson is one of the men who seems to know just what to do to bring things to pass and he is, therefore, succeeding splendidly well in his churches.

....The Trustees of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary are called by Dr. Jno. A. Broadus to meet at the Nashville House, Nashville, Tenn., 7:30 p. m., May 11th, 1893. The Trustees of the Seminary in this State are Drs. John Mitchell, C. Durham, T. H. Pritchard, and Bro. J. M. Heck.

....The committee on hospitality at Nashville, Tenn., will not give free entertainment to delegates to the Southern Baptist Convention appointed on funds contributed to other than the regular work of the Home and Foreign Mission Boards—not on funds contributed to "Centennial of Missions."

....Dr. Hall says: "No man could have been received more heartily than the good people of Lynchburg, Va., received me during my recent visit there. Bro. Truett most deservedly has a warm place in the affections of his people. He will lead them with wisdom and ability. It was a precious meeting."

....The American Baptist Education Society will meet this year at Nashville, Tenn., on Thursday, May 11th, the day before the meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention. To reach Nashville, therefore, in time for the meeting of this Society, delegates will have to leave Raleigh on Tuesday, 9th of May.

....The revival services in the First church, Raleigh, are still in progress. Large congregations attended every night during the past week. The afternoon meetings were also well attended. There have been no small number of professions of religion, and many unsaved persons have manifested concern about their souls' salvation. Dr. Landrum preaches the gospel with unction and great power, and our people are delighted with him.

....Rev. W. R. Gwaltney of Wake Forest says: "On last Saturday night (15th), Dr. A. E. Dickinson, editor of the Religious Herald, lectured here on 'Success and Failure.' The small chapel was full, and all were highly entertained. On Sunday he preached two sermons full of the marrow and sweetness of the gospel. Now and then, here and there, for more than thirty years, I have been hearing him speak and preach, and he never fails to grapple and edify me. We shall always be glad to see him come this way."

....The recent death of Miss Margaret Fox in Brooklyn, N. Y., recalls the fact that forty-five years ago, she and her sister Catherine, then living in Ithaca, N. Y., started spiritualism in this country. They acted as "mediums" and attracted great attention. Presently other "mediums" started up, and lo! a new ism was born! The whole thing was exposed, and the Fox girls afterward admitted that it was all a fraud; but the dupes went on believing in the "manifestations" of the "mediums." In this evil world it is easier to start an ism than it is to stop it.—Western Recorder.

....The following is the program of the next annual commencement of Wake Forest College: Monday night, class-day exercises; Tuesday night, alumni address by Walter E. Daniel, Esq., of Weldon; Wednesday morning, annual address before the Literary Societies by Rev. J. C. Hiden, D. D., of Richmond, Va.; Wednesday night, Baccalaureate sermon by Rev. A. C. Dixon of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Thursday morning, graduating orations by Messrs. S. McIntyre, I. T. Newton, S. J. Porter, J. C. Kittrell and E. Y. Webb. It has not been decided who shall deliver the Valedictory and Salutatory addresses.

....Dr. Pritchard seems to be very happy in his work at Charlotte, and why not? The brethren seem to love him very much, and express the highest appreciation of his sermons. He and sister Pritchard have an elegant suite of rooms at the Central, one of the very best hotels in the State. And among the many excellent attractions which the Doctor notes with pleasure, he feels a lively interest in the large number of fine pointer dogs which hold their citizenship in the "Queen City." I hear it on the best of authority, that there are six preachers and a Presiding Elder in Charlotte who take them "on the wing"—December will be more pleasant than May to these brethren.—J. C. C.

....Rev. L. G. Broughton, Winston, N. C., April 23, 1893, writes: "A great revival has broke out under the auspices of our church in Salem. For sometime we've been holding cottage prayer meetings down there. The Spirit got hold of the people and the brethren. We are holding services every night in the largest room we can get. Last night the house was packed and standing all around the door. Six persons were happily converted and deeper interest I've never seen. They will join our church. We go on next week. Steps have been taken to get the 'gospel tent.' We hope to have it by May 15. Services at the church moves on well. Crowds overflowing at night."

....On some of the railroads in the State of Connecticut and perhaps elsewhere, there are "corpse tickets" issued for the transportation of dead bodies. The corpse is obliged to have the same form of ticket as the live passenger, and both read: "This ticket entitles bearer to one first class ticket passage in either direction." The idea is very suggestive. The church is a train, the members are passengers ticketed through; but what a vast number of "corpse tickets" there must be! The tickets are good "in either direction"—back to the world, or on to the New Jerusalem. The down train is often more crowded than the up train—corpses generally do not care which way they go.—Inquirer.

....We are having an unusual number of protracted meetings for this season of the year. The churches in Winston, Warrenton, Rockingham, Monroe, Wake Forest, Charlotte, Salisbury, Henderson, Greensboro, Golsboro, and perhaps others we do not now recall, have recently been blessed with good meetings, which have greatly strengthened and built them up. We rejoice greatly in these good tidings from the churches. And especially are we happy in the thought, that these revivals have been conducted without the aid of professional evangelists. We have been earnestly praying for, and sincerely hope to see, the day when these men who by all sorts of "clap trapry" hand-shake people into the church will find no demand for their service in the Baptist church of North Carolina.

....The revival services at the Baptist church, noticed last week, are still in progress. The interest, which was great at the start, is unabated. The church has been crowded at every night service, and large audiences attend the afternoon services. The pastor has preached the Word with power and it has been accompanied by an outpouring of the spirit. There have been twenty odd conversions, and most of them have given in their names as candidates for church membership. The ordinance of baptism was administered to four persons Sunday night, and there will be baptising to-night and to-morrow night. The singing, led by Prof. Price, has been all that could have been desired. It has no doubt contributed greatly to keep up the interest.—Monroe Inquirer.

....Following is an extract from Rev. R. T. Bryan's letter to Sister Yates, recently to hand: "The whole church was very glad to hear of your safe arrival, and to receive your message of love. They requested me to return their love to you. The old Deacon Wong made a very touching prayer for you. The last Sunday was one of the happiest days that I ever spent. God was surely in our midst. More of your school children, and Bro. Tatum's school boys too, came than usual, and remained to hear preaching. The audiences both at the East Gate and North Gate were very large and attentive. More of the church members than usual were present, and without any request from us about a dozen went down to the East Gate. The pastor's wife and your old armah were among the number. We are carrying on a protracted meeting, and the members are taking part—feel that it is their meeting. My prayers are answered in a large measure in regard to the members."

....Dr. R. S. MacArthur has recently written some powerful and true words about "The Enlarged Church of the Future" as follows: It must be remembered that the gospel properly preached touched every relation of life. To preach the gospel properly, the moral elements in politics must be clearly defined, broadly discussed, and earnestly emphasized. The relations between employer and employed must also be the theme of pulpit discourse. The great principles which underlie all home relations are involved in the preaching of the gospel. The only hope of this lost world is in the gospel of Christ when it is properly defined, earnestly preached, and practically applied. There can be no human substitute for this divine panacea for the ills to which flesh is heir. When the gospel is thus understood, declared, believed, and practiced, strikes will be impossible, cruelty on the part of the strong will be unknown, and faithlessness and prejudice on the part of the weak and poor toward the rich will be impossible. If the pulpit is to reach the thought of the next generation, it must exalt its standard, widen its range, simplify its creeds, and properly apply to all the relations of life the glorious doctrines of the gospel.—Secretary. If this truth were applied in North Carolina it would settle the James City trouble without bloodshed. The most the negroes ought to do is to pay for the land what it was worth before the war and interest on the amount since that time.

....The Baptist cause is gaining the ascendency in Louisiana, especially so in New Orleans. Our missionaries there, Drs. David I. and John Purser, are working nobly and with every appearance of success. Thirty-five accessions to the Valence Street church was the visible result of the series of meetings there. Now they are continuing the series with the First Baptist church. Owing to cramped quarters, they are holding these meetings in "Garden District Theatre." I enclose you a clipping from yesterday's Picayune: "There was another good and highly encouraging meeting last night at the Garden District Theatre, conducted by the Brothers Purser, Ingraham and John. From night to night, some new songs are sung. The singing from the choir and the congregation shows fervor and devotion on their part, but the solos or the duets, by either, of both Prof. Brown and the pastor, Dr. John Purser, are rendered with touching and expressive tenderness and volume and reach the hearts of many. The sermon of Dr. Ingraham Purser last night on the 'Handwriting on the Wall,' was one calling forth intense and thrilling interest. At his invitation, a large number again arose for prayer, that they might experience the forgiveness of sin. An inquiry meeting is held at seven o'clock for conversation, instruction, etc., in an adjoining room with those who desire advice and instruction, and a similar meeting of fifteen or twenty minutes at the close of the regular services. The services are to continue daily at 9:30 a. m. and 7:30 in the evening."—Edgar D. Burgess, Fordoche, La.

Delegates to Southern Baptist Convention Appointed by the Board.

"Seasonable Notes about Summer Crops" is the title of a little publication just issued by T. W. Wood & Sons, Seedsmen, Richmond, Va. It calls attention to crops that can be profitably or advantageously put in at this season of the year, and gives points about their culture and uses which are timely and of interest to every farmer. It will be mailed free of charge, on application to above mentioned firm, provided you mention THE BIBLICAL RECORDER.

Dr. Dickinson at Wake Forest.

Dr. A. E. Dickinson of the Religious Herald was at Wake Forest College recently and delivered a lecture to the students. We print his closing remarks:

A young man had come back from the Theological Seminary to enter upon an important pastorate, and many were the friends who were congratulating him upon the high honors he had won in University and Theological studies, and on the brilliant future before him in the great church whose call he had accepted, when an old man present added a word. He said: "Young man, you now need but one thing to put you into full sympathy with your work and the world, and that is some great sorrow, which shall bring to your aching heart a sweet and abiding sense of the truths you are to preach to others."

The old man was right. All the learning of all lands and ages will not fit us to work aright with men and for men, unless we, like our Master, are touched with the feeling of their infirmities, and can weep with those who weep, as well as rejoice with those who do rejoice. The heart even more than the head wins in life's great conflict. When both heart and head are rightly trained and rightly directed, how sure and steady one moves on to the accomplishment of his mission on earth.

There must be, too, a whole-souled devotion to the special calling to which you give yourself, and a constant seeking to avail yourself of every help that can be secured. In this day it will not do to run in the old ruts—to cling to methods simply because they were held by those who have gone before you. In everything we should look out for a more excellent way. It has been well said that "nothing has been done by man that cannot be better done. There is no effort of science or art that may not be exceeded. There's no depth of philosophy that cannot be deeper sounded; no flight of imagination that may not be passed by strong and soaring wing."

But, to improve on those who have gone before us, we must go ahead of them in burning enthusiasm and tireless labor. It is the sharpness of the appetite which extracts nourishment from food. If one is devoid of appetite, his food does him no good. And thus it is with the manifold advantages we have over our fathers in facilities and appliances for working out greater results in art and science, and all that. We should accept gratefully this better equipment, these more favorable environments, and turn them to the best possible advantages. The men who have thus far ruled the world have been the men who have done this, and it will be so to the end. There is nothing like having a lofty aim, and a determined purpose, and an all consuming zeal. One of the world's greatest warriors, when reminded that man was the creature of circumstances, replied: "But I make circumstances." All things are possible to the brave-hearted man who is ready to do and die for the right, but nothing awaits him who is half hearted and distrustful but failure. If I were asked for one of the greatest evils of the day, I would not hesitate to reply, too many indiscriminate attempts at helping people who ought to be left to help themselves. It has been half a century since a venerable minister of the gospel, in discussing the evil consequences of helping people, who would be all the better for helping themselves, said: "If one were to ask me for a fish I would much prefer to send him a hook and let him catch the fish himself."

We must help others, of course we must, but we will do that all the better if through life we have a profound and all consuming desire to make the best of the gifts with which God has endowed us, while at the same time we encourage all around us to do the same.

In the highest sense, young gentlemen, no man who lives aright will fail of being a magnificent success. He may not have what the world points to as its highest proofs of success. He may not have a large amount to his credit in bank; he may hold no office of high political influence, but he will have what is far better. The Apostle Paul and Martin Luther and Adoniram Judson were accounted as failures by many in their day. The humble Nazarene was thought of as a failure, by many around him, the very day on which he said: "If I be lifted up I will draw all men unto me." He saw even then, despised and rejected as he was, that his life and death would lift the world back to God—that through all time and among all intelligences, in heaven and earth, his work would tell, and hence he was calm and serene even under his sorest trials. He could afford to wait and to be patient. Thus each of us may catch his spirit, think his thoughts, follow in his footsteps and move on the same lofty plain, knowing that as surely we too shall come off conquerors and more than conquerors through his grace.

The great result of Christ's life came after he had left the world. Every new convert since has been a new Lazarus, walking forth from his grave to tell how wisely and well the man of Nazareth wrought. Every new tear that has trembled in the eye of the Christian, as he has gone forth to do the bidding of his Master, has been a new demonstration of the success of his holy mission on earth. To some extent this will be true of all who live aright. They may be sad and discouraged with what they see of the little they are doing in the world, but they do not see it all. Our works follow us, and down through the ages, and through the everlasting ages, good influences will extend and spread. We only begin to live when we die. To decide this question as to how much of a success your life has been, you must wait until you can bring to bear upon it the arithmetic of heaven. Up there upon some towering Alpine peak you may be able to count up the good that the weakest and feeblest saint has done, but you can never do it here. Crowns and kingdoms are to be taken into the account, and here we know not how to estimate them. Then up and onward! Life is too short, its issues are too vast for us to hesitate or doubt, or waste its precious moments. Remember that there is no lost cause in the conflict to which I summon you this day. Every one who thus lives shall succeed grandly. And remember, too, as another has said: "The talent of success is nothing more than doing what you can do well, without a thought of fame."

From the Seminary.

Dear Recorder:—Last Monday evening at 7 o'clock a shadow was cast over the Seminary in the death of Bro. C. C. Coggin of Rich Hill, S. C.

Bro. Coggin graduated at Furman University, South Carolina, and this was his second year at the Seminary. Bright, promising, consecrated, he is taken away at the threshold of life. We loved him, for he lived among us a cheerful, sweet, Christian life. We can truly sympathize with those back in South Carolina whose hearts are crushed by the loss. But "we sorrow not as those who have no hope."

Bro. Coggin was pastor of two churches in Kentucky at the time of his death. He was one of our best preachers, and we doubt not that our Lord saw that his work was done. We don't know, but we know he does.

The funeral exercises were held here at the Seminary Tuesday morning, and the students and professors in a body marched to the depot in the evening as his remains were taken to the train to be sent home.

Rev. D. W. Herring came last Friday. His coming among us has been to many hearts a stimulus to more earnest consecration, and I can say I believe that his sweet spirit, his burning words, his faith, and intense earnestness have been used as an instrument in creating such an interest in missions and the necessity of taking the gospel to the heathen as has not been felt even here for a long time.

Let me say to those churches who are praying for men that the good Lord seems to be answering their prayers. Our hearts are made glad as we see many of the brightest, strongest men in the Seminary saying that they feel that the Lord has called them to go to the heathen, and they feel that if the Lord says go, he will be with them "alway, even unto the end." And brethren, you want a man to represent you in the field. They say they are willing to trust you, and to go in the Lord's own appointed way, knowing that he will never fail them. The heathen are dying now, and shall we not do all we can? I will say also that we have been surprised to see the number of brethren who are taking hold of Bro. Herring's plan of work; and these men are, it is to be noted, among the strongest men in the Seminary or anywhere else.

The Seminary did not, as an institution, publicly invite Bro. Herring to speak, because it did not wish to seemingly commit itself to his plan of work; but every one was anxious to hear him, and the most kindly feeling prevailed. The lecture rooms were freely thrown open to him by the faculty, and he spoke on China Wednesday night to the students.

One man said, "That man is 'crazy' like Paul was." Many said it was the best lecture on missions they had ever heard. Others said it was the finest speech that had been made on that subject this year at the Seminary.

On Thursday night he spoke on his special plans of work. Every one was compelled to see that his purpose and his motive were like Paul's—like the Master's. And all were bound to see that he was giving us straight Baptist principles, and that he did not leave the track of the Bible. One thing was specially noticeable,—he honors God. Not with his mouth, but his whole spirit and action was an honor to Jesus the Christ. He believes God. He said, "If the principles of Baptists are good, the practice of them is better." "I am a Baptist," he said, and all of us are bound to believe it.

Oh, we do pray that the Lord God may send us more men who have the faith, common sense, consecration and power of D. W. Herring.

It is our prayer that prejudice may be removed by religion, and that Southern Baptists may listen to the cry of the lost across the blue water, and send to them the gospel "which is the power of God unto salvation."

Meeting in Lynchburg.

The city of Lynchburg, Va., has been greatly favored in having Dr. J. J. Hall of the Tabernacle Baptist church, Raleigh, N. C., conduct a two weeks meeting with the College Hill Baptist church. From the beginning to the end of the series great crowds filled the church at each service, and indeed large numbers were obliged to go away not able to get in the church. Dr. Hall's sermons have the orthodox flavor, and his sympathetic voice, gentle manner, and persuasive eloquence, render him well nigh irresistible as a preacher. His earnestness and evident belief in his message impress his hearers with the great importance of the gospel and their need of a Saviour. He will be long remembered in the hill city.

The meetings have resulted in a great awakening of the church. Many backsliders were reclaimed, and stragglers brought into line. There were between fifty and sixty professions of conversion, and many inquirers asking to be prayed for at every opportunity given them, even at the last meeting of the series. A number have already been received for baptism, and others will be received. The meetings have had the most gratifying results, and lasting good has been accomplished in many ways that cannot be summed up in figures.

From China—The Late Dr. Royall.

Dear Recorder:—My heart is saddened at the news of the death of Dr. Wm. Royall. I thank God that I ever came under the instruction and influence of such a pure, noble, godly man. He was an Israelite in whom was no guile. My feeling toward him ever since I knew him has been akin to that of son to father. One by one our good and great men are going. May God raise up many others worthy to follow in their footsteps.

The Pruitts are expected at Hwanghein in a few days.

I hope in a few days to say a few words on the call to foreign mission field. Thanks for that editorial. All well here.

From Henderson, N. C.

Dear Recorder:—I have only time for a line. I think it proper when a brother pastor aids in a meeting, that mention be made of it. Bro. Taylor of Warrenton was with me ten days. I had the pleasure of baptizing last night, and will lead others who have been received for baptism in the way our Lord went. While souls, I trust, were converted, I think no small part of the results was in the strength of the membership gained. Brother Taylor fed them (us), and we are stronger for his visit. He will long be remembered by the church. I knew he was a good preacher, but had not realized that he was so great a preacher.

I go to-morrow to help Bro. Willcox in some Centennial work.

Fraternally, R. VANDEVENTER.

Henderson, April 21, 1893.

Dr. N. B. Cobb.

The following resolutions were passed by Sharon Baptist church, Warren county, N. C., on the first Sunday in April, 1893:

WHEREAS, Dr. N. B. Cobb has resigned the pastorate of this church, which he has served for three years; therefore

Resolved, That in accepting the resignation of Dr. N. B. Cobb as pastor of this church, we are fully impressed with the fact that we sever our connection with an able and affectionate minister of the gospel of Christ, a kind, affectionate and faithful pastor, and that we congratulate any church that may at any time be so fortunate as to be favored with his services.

Ordered, that the foregoing be entered on our church record, and that a copy be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

P. R. PERKINSON, Church Clerk.

Southern Baptist Convention.

The thirty-eighth session (48th year) of the Southern Baptist Convention will be held with the Baptist churches in the city of Nashville, Tenn., beginning Friday, May 12th, 1893, at 10 a. m. Preacher of annual sermon, Rev. W. E. Hatcher, D. D., of Virginia; alternate, Rev. J. Morgan Wells, D. D., of Texas.

LANSING BURROWS,
OLIVER F. GREGORY,
Secretaries S. B. C.

RAILROAD RATES.

I am advised by the L. & N. that a rate of one fare for the round trip is in effect to Nashville, account Southern Baptist Convention, from all points on that line; and also by the N. C. and St. L. that a rate of one fair is in effect from all points on their line west of Chattanooga, inclusive; south of Chattanooga and from other points not on the line of the L. & N. or N. C. & St. L. the rate is one and one-third fare to L. & N. or N. C. & St. L. junction points, plus one fare to Nashville.

A rate of one fare has been granted by all railroads in Texas.

All other lines, so far as heard from, grant a rate of a fare and one third, on the certificate plan. The Southern Passenger Association has not announced any special rates yet. As it will be too late to publish another card, delegates are requested to inquire at railroad station, and if special rates have not been made, to write me at once.

O. F. GREGORY,
Sec'y in charge Transportation.

In arranging for the coming session of the Southern Baptist Convention in this city, the committee desires to have as soon as possible the names of all persons knowing themselves to be delegates, either of the Convention or the Woman's Missionary Union or the Education Society. We wish in sending out this notice to call special attention to the following points:

1. We will make ample provision for entertaining only accredited delegates. This rule will be rigidly adhered to.

2. As we expect to furnish homes to all delegates, we will not be responsible for any bills made for entertainment at hotels.

3. All delegates who may prefer hotel accommodations at their own expense and will write to the committee to that effect, will have the very best possible arrangements made for them.

4. The committee will be glad to furnish any information or to make any arrangements at boarding houses and hotels for all visitors who may request it.

5. A special committee on reception will meet all trains and furnish information and assistance to both delegates and visitors.

The careful observance of these rules will greatly facilitate the work of the committee and add to the comfort of the great crowd which we are expecting.

[illegible] RATES.

Maxwell House (headquarters), [illegible] $2.50; Duncan Hotel, $2.50; [illegible] Howe, $2.00; Commercial Hotel, [illegible] Bailey House, $1.50; boarding [illegible] erally from $1.00 to $1.25.

[illegible] names, please address R. B. P[illegible] man.

What Missionary Baptists Think of the Bible Communion.

This do in remembrance of me.—Luke 22: 19.

There is no one who could be more pleased than I to see all Christians united in the worship of our Lord and Saviour. But that can never be. There may be a time when all other denominations, save the Baptist, will unite. But the Baptist can never enter into such a union, for they would have to give up a part of the Bible. And God's Word has and always will be dear to the Baptists. Our forefathers thought it worth climbing the cross by the flash of the furnace into the celestial city, and I hope that the present and succeeding generations will not think less of it. What the world needs to day is more love for Christ, so that we can preach the gospel and read the Bible without prejudice. We know that we are safe in God's keeping, for "the righteous shall hold on his way," continue to repent of his sins and pray to God; that is, the tenor of the pilgrim's life is heavenward. For only those who hold out unto the end are true believers. The pilgrim may not always travel at the same pace. The Bible don't say that the Christian shall always travel at the same rate, but it very plainly teaches that he shall continue to journey Zionward. If you will allow the common expression, sometimes we travel in a sweeping gallop, then again we are cooled down to a trot, and again to a very slow walk, and sometimes we are glad even to crawl; but yet the true child of God holds on his way, and adds strength unto strength—that is, continues to grow in grace. The Bible don't say that you can get religion and then fold your hands and float clear through to heaven; but to the reverse, the text says, "The righteous shall hold on his way." That is, continue to strive against sin. One act of faith will not save you no more than one meal will suffice you for twelve months.

I hear some fellow say, "I had religion once, but I lost it." Well, let's see about that. See John 8: 31. "Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, if ye continue in my Word then are ye my disciples indeed." "Well," you say, "Adam fell." Sure enough he did. But you must remember that Adam was under an unbending law, and just the very reading of the ten commandments condemns us all. We are saved by grace. "Well," you say, "the angels fell." Well, sure enough they did. But they, too, were under law. But you and I don't know much about them. "The things that are revealed are ours, but the things which are hid belong to God." "Well," you say, "Judas fell." Well, let's see about that. The Saviour said he was a "thief from the beginning." Judas could not fall any lower than he was, for he was "a devil from the beginning," and never had any religion to lose. There are a great many wet weather Christians now-a-days. They are very religious during the summer months, but are regular devils during the winter. I am not in favor of murder, but it really looks like it would be a good thing for some of those summer Christians if some good fellow would knock them in the head with a sledge hammer while the revival is going on. "The righteous shall hold on his way." "Well," you say, "I know I was a better man last summer than I am now." You say you have quit drinking whiskey. You say you have quit the ball room. Well, all of that may be so, and yet you may not know what is meant by being born again. See 1 John 2: 31. "They went out from us, but they were not of us; for if they had been of us they no doubt would have continued with us."

Well, you say, what is the meaning of all that Scripture in Hebrews about apostatizing? Well, how do you know but that God is using that very Scripture as a spur to keep his children in the straight and narrow way? See Heb. 6: 9. "But, beloved, we are persuaded better things of you, and things that accompany salvation, though we thus speak."

While we believe in election, we also believe every other doctrine taught in the Bible. A Hardshell without religion is the hardest shell I ever met. I mean those fellows who say "What is to be will be." Those fellows who are waiting for God to quit drinking whiskey for them, waiting for God to quit telling lies for them. While God predestinates the end he also predestinates the means.

While Paul was in an unknown sea awaiting shipwreck, he told the ship's crew that not even a hair should fall from their heads because of the shipwreck; and yet when part of the crew began to leave the ship Paul said, "Except you all remain in the ship ye cannot be saved." And just so with you and I. Except we repent of our sins and give God our hearts we cannot be saved. Every person born into this world is elected to a seat (a home) in heaven, for "whosoever will, may come." So you see it depends on your will.

There is another false doctrine abroad in the land. While the Calvinist swing to the extreme on the one side, the Arminian go to the extreme on the other side. If you will trace this man devised doctrine of getting and losing religion whenever you want to, to its root, you will find it is almost, if not, blasphemy. Its tenor runs to glorify man, not Christ. Yea, it almost counts the blood of Christ an unholy thing, and unable to save. Yea, it strives to make our God a puerile God by giving you religion to-day and taking it from you on the morrow. Our Saviour compared the spiritual birth to the natural. Now we know that it is impossible for us to be born again naturally. Well, it is just as much impossible to be born a second time spiritually. If you could prove to me that one soul who had been born of the Spirit and cleansed by the blood of Christ was ever lost, I would from henceforth cease to pray and preach; for if one soul that had trusted in Christ could be lost, [illegible] that one. See 1 Peter 1: 23. "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the Word of God which liveth and abideth forever." So you see, just so long as God's Word shall endure, just so long will he who is born by that Word live. See John 3: 36. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life." Not going to have it, but hath it already. This Scripture does not say that the Christian shall live a million of years and then die. No, that would not be everlasting. Everlasting means without end on earth or in heaven. See John 4: 14. "But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." That is, the water of life is not only going to be in you forever, but it is going to spring up, and flow out to others, for "a city that is set on a hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick" that it may give light. See John 10: 27, 28. "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me, and I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish, neither shall any pluck them out of my hand." I have omitted the word "man" in this reading, for it is not in the original.

Now eternal life is eternal. But my having eternal life does not free me from temptation. No, Satan desires to have us all in his sieve that he may sift us as wheat. Well, says some one, why can't I fall? See Jer. 31: 3. "The Lord hath appeared of old unto me, saying, Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love; therefore with lovingkindness have I drawn thee." Also Jer. 32: 40, "And I will make an everlasting covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them, to do them good; but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me." Then, again, read the Saviour's own words, Matt. 24: 24, "For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect." The Saviour says by this Scripture that there will be some great deceivers in this world after he is gone; but they shall not be able to deceive and destroy those who have been born again. See Rom. 5: 10. "For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son; much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life." So you see the Christian's life is just as sure to endure forever as the Lord himself. If there was no other Scripture for the Christian's assurance but the eighth chapter of Romans, that would be enough to make the true child of God forever safe. And yet I hear some people say, "I hope I have religion—I don't know." Whenever I see one of those great big doubters I put him down as a great big unsaved sinner. See 2 Tim. 1: 12. "For the which cause I also suffer these things: nevertheless I am not ashamed; for I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." And yet some people will say, "I don't know whether I love the Lord or not." Now we are told in the Bible that the church is the Lamb's wife So, then, we are married unto Christ. And if I was your wife, and you treated me like you do the Lord, I would leave you. Now I know that I am a married man, "and I know whom (not in whom) I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I trusted to him against that day." See Phil. 1: 6. "Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ." That time has never come since I first gave my heart to God, even when doubts and fears were most severe, that I could stand up and say I don't love the Lord. And yet I deserve no credit for keeping myself. If I was left to keep myself I would be ruined and lost in less time than twenty-four hours. But thank God I haven't anything to do with my own keeping. "I have left it all with Jesus long ago." So it is the Christ that is in me that perseveres. "He worketh in us both to will and do of his own good pleasure." 1 John 5: 6, "Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God."

Just so long as Jesus Christ lives, just so long must his true follower live. "For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." Col. 3: 3.

Yawning and Deep Breathing.

Yawning is not considered a mark of politeness, but Dr. Naegelt, of Germany, says that it is one of nature's remedies, and acts like massage on the lungs and several internal organs. He advises every one to exercise the lungs and all the muscles of breathing as often as possible by yawning and stretching, and believes that many chronic lung troubles may thus be prevented. In cases of nasal catarrh, inflammation of the palate, sore throat and earache, he recommends yawning from six to ten times in succession and then swallowing. The result will be surprising. This advice of Dr. Naegelt's is evidently based on the same principle as deep-breathing, which is one of the greatest benefits in bronchial and pulmonary troubles. Many people, who have been threatened with consumption when young, believe that their lives have been saved by the persistent practice of deep-breathing. This not only exercises in a beneficial way all the internal organs of the chest, but is a protection against disease, as blood full of oxygen is the most effective germ-killer.—Watchman.

The parent who permits his child to have his way without let or hindrance the first few years of its life need not be surprised to find that child head-strong, disobedient and unloving in latter years. There is such a thing as mistaken kindness.—Central Baptist.

Walking by Faith.

Walking by faith is not so attractive a mode of spiritual locomotion as walking by sight; but it is the only mode practicable with the universe as it is; and God's grace makes this mode not merely a possibility, but an advantageous possibility. In the natural world men walk by sight, seeing what is before them and what is on either side of them; but they do not always pursue the direct course as a result of their open vision. That which they see outside of their pathway often tends to draw them away from a forward movement, so that they walk in a wrong direction because they are walking by sight. On the other hand, here comes a blind man along a city street. He sees nothing, but in his hand he bears a staff with which he feels his way just a pace or two in front of him. By means of that staff he is sure of a single step in advance—nothing more. Yet how confidently he presses forward, never swerving to the right or to the left, but taking each step firmly as safe and sure, and as the only step which is sure or safe. To the extent of that single step the roadway is plain to him, and he trusts its maker as having had a wise plan in its preparing. By his abiding faith in the road maker, he walks even more directly forward than he might if he saw the other ways which skirt that roadway. There are trials to the man who cannot see; but there is a gain to the man who, not seeing, will walk by faith, and who says, in all sincerity:

"So I go on not knowing;
I would not if I might:
I would rather walk in the dark with God,
Than go alone in the light;
I would rather walk with him by faith,
Than walk alone by sight."

As a cure for chilblains, frosted feet and chapped hands, Salvation Oil is a conspicuous success. 25 cents.

No good deed, no genuine sacrifice, is ever wasted. If there be good in it, God will use it for his own holy purposes; and whatever of ignorance, or weakness, or mistake, was mingled with it, will drop away as the withered sepals drop away when the full flower is blown.—Farrar.

Letter from New Mexico.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—If you will allow space in the RECORDER for a few lines from a brother far away, I will try and tell you what we are doing and how we are getting along in the west.

I want first to make the remarkable statement (be it said to the credit of our postal system) that I have not failed to get a single number of the RECORDER since my removal from Raleigh to Raton. They are sometimes delayed, but they come after awhile. I received one, however, the wrapper having been worn out and my name tied on the paper with a string. I said, as I received it, whoever that mail agent is, or whatever he is, God bless him for tying my name to the RECORDER. I can't describe the eagerness and longing experienced in looking for the dear old paper on the expected day of its arrival. Nor can I describe the interest with which the wrapper is torn from it, as then I go from page to page, reading and re-reading again and again. So many dear brethren have passed away since I left you, so many unexpected ones too, that now as I begin to unfold the RECORDER I wonder "who has gone home now," Bro. Jno. R. Maynard being the last of whom I have had knowledge. And is all that is to be said of this good (and I could add great) man been said—that he was pastor of a few country churches, was persevering and earnest. Let me say that I loved him, and he knew I loved him before God called him from the work shop. I loved him because he was good and pure and true. I loved him because he was like Jesus in many more respects than that he used the hammer and the saw. He has gone to his reward, and it is great and abundant.

Spring time has come, and the poet, and he that is not a poet, finds no flowers, for there are none here, never have been, nor ever will be, for it gets dryer and dryer. Wish I could tell you how dry it is. As I write, shut in by four "adobe" walls, the wind is howling around me, and the room, the air, and the outside world is filled with dust and dirt almost to suffocation. Indeed, the dust is so dry and light, and the wind at this season blows with such unremitting force, that it whirls great clouds of dust thousands of feet in the air, at times absolutely veiling the sun as a storm cloud. While the climate in New Mexico is in a great many respects the finest in the world, it is in many others the most disgusting. As for me, I should not and do not complain, for I came seeking health, and I now have every indication of its returning. I weigh 143 pounds, and can eat as much and enjoy it as fully as a day laborer. Nobody in this world can ever know what is endured by home missionaries in New Mexico except those who have been on the field. But I shall not speak of this now. Suffice it to say that while my duties as pastor and preacher in Raton are arduous, yet the Lord has blessed me wonderfully in so many ways that there is no ground for complaint, and I am rather filled with praise and thanksgiving.

I have been in Raton nearly a year. The church in this time has more than doubled its membership, having received in all 25 members, 17 by baptism, 8 by letter—14 constituting the church at the beginning of the year. I have been asked to remain another year, which I will doubtless do. The people are alive, zealous and anxious to work, so by the continued blessing of God we expect a grand work for another year.

God bless you, the RECORDER, and all the dear brethren.

Mrs. Wood's health is bad, and she will doubtless return to Raleigh this spring or summer.

Mrs. E. P. Stone, who arrived here from Raleigh last November, a sufferer of pulmonary trouble, has not done as well as we had hoped, and I am exceedingly sorry that I cannot report her condition improved. If she had come to New Mexico just one year sooner it would have been so much better for her. Truly yours,

JONATHAN WOOD.

Raton, New Mexico, April 11, 1893.

Like a Thief in the Night,

Consumption comes. A slight cold, with your system in the scrofulous condition that's caused by impure blood, is enough to fasten it upon you. That is the time when neglect and delay are full of danger.

Consumption is lung scrofula. You can prevent it, and you can cure it, if you haven't waited too long, with Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. That is the most potent blood cleanser, strength-restorer, and flesh-builder that's known to medical science. For every disease that has to be reached through the blood, for scrofula in all its forms, consumption, weak lungs, bronchitis, asthma, and all severe, lingering coughs, it is the only guaranteed remedy. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back.

The proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy know that their medicine perfectly and permanently cures catarrh. To prove it to you, they make this offer: If they can't cure your catarrh, no matter what your case is, they'll pay you $500 in cash.

A father and his little son were riding along a familiar road with a gentle horse. To gratify the child the father placed the reins in his hands, but at the same time, unseen, retained his own hold on them. As they rode on, they saw approaching them, at terrific speed, a runaway team. The danger was great and imminent. But the father guided his horse so that a collision was avoided and the danger escaped. When all was over, the little son looked up to his father, and with a choked utterance, said: "I thought I was driving, but I wasn't, was I, papa?" So often does the child of God, when some peril has been escaped or some deliverance has been vouchsafed, in ways unforeseen and unthought of, have occasion to say, "Father, I thought I was driving, but I wasn't." It is blessed to feel that the reins are in the hands of one mightier and wiser than we are.—N. Y. Evangelist.

The Fountain Criticised.

A certain man placed a fountain by the wayside, and he hung a cup near to it by a little chain. He was told some time afterwards that a great art critic had found much fault with its design. "But," he said, "do many persons drink of it?" Then they told him that thousands of poor people—men, women and children—slaked their thirst at the fountain. He smiled and answered that he was little troubled by the critic's observations; only that he hoped that on some sultry summer's day the critic himself might fill the cup and be refreshed.

The Bible is the fountain with the cup. Just now there seems to be an unusual number of critics. Some of us seem afraid lest confidence be shaken and its honor be decreased. But let us be sure of this, that from this standpoint of its munificent Designer the only question is: "Do many persons drink at it?" and that God, the giver, is fully satisfied in knowing that increasing multitudes of earth's weary, wistful souls are slaking their thirst at his fountain—blest fountain which can satisfy the craving, the yearning desire of every fainting soul, famishing for the water of life. O that men who are troubled with doubts and questionings and skeptical thoughts about the Bible would calmly examine it for themselves! O that in a candid, teachable frame of mind they would take it up and read it! The test of experience is the disarming of criticism. The book itself is its best witness and defender.—Sabbath Reading.

What is Pluck?

This is the one that won: "Fighting with the scabbard when the sword is broken."

The following are some of the best definitions sent in:

Moral backbone.

The power a man has to say "no" when he knows his wife wants him to say "yes."

Fearlessness free from foolhardiness.

The chivalry of nature's knighthood.

That which enables one, when fighting against adverse circumstances and knocked down, to rise and try another round.

The heart of a lion in the body of a man.

The best remedy for despair.

The force which converts an ordinary man into a hero.

Honest daring without caring.

The absence of fear in the presence of danger.

The courage to do the right thing at the right moment.

Irresponsible stout-heartedness.

That which keeps a man up when he is down.

The offspring of courage and the mother of success.

Moral grit.—London Tid-Bits.

Marriage is a Failure.

When there is too much latch-key.

When dinner is not ready at dinner time.

When he snores the loudest while she kindles the fire.

When politeness, fine manners and kindly attentions are reserved for company or visits abroad.

When the lord of creation pays more for cigars than his better half does for hosiery, boots and bonnets.

When the money that should go for a book goes for what only one side of the house knows anything about.

When both parties persist in arguing over a subject upon which they never have thought and never can think alike.—Springfield Union.

The Bright Side.

Cheerfulness can become a habit, and habits sometimes help us over hard places. A cheerful heart seeth cheerful things.

A lady and a gentleman were in a timber yard situated by a dirty, foul-smelling river.

The lady said: "How good the pine boards smell!"

"Pine boards!" exclaimed the gentleman. "Just smell this foul river!"

"No, thank you," the lady replied. "I prefer to smell the pine boards."

And she was right. If she, or we, carry this principle through our entire living, we shall have the cheerful heart, the cheerful voice and the cheerful face.

There is in some houses an unconscious atmosphere of domestic and social ozone which brightens everybody. Wealth cannot give it, nor can poverty take it away.—Miss Muloch.

Why should we live half-way up the hill and swathed in mists, when we might have an unclouded sky and a visible sun over our heads if we would only climb higher, and walk in the light of his face?—Dr. Maclaren.

Look within. Within is the fountain of good, and it will bubble up, if thou wilt ever dig.—Antonius.

Foolish Consistency.

Emerson tells us that there is no particular virtue in consistency. How stupid a man must be, he says in effect, who is not wiser to-day than yesterday, and who does not accordingly have to change some of his opinions.

"A man will never change his mind who has no mind to change," says Archbishop Whately, and Faraday expresses the same idea when he charges us to remember that, "In knowledge that man only is to be despised who is not in a state of transition."

There is a medium between what a worthy old gentleman calls "whiflin' about like a weathercock" and remaining rigidly in one rut of belief. Most of us know instances of men who cannot bring themselves to say anything which would contradict what they uttered last week or last year.

A certain Irishman once declared that he had owned a horse which was fifteen feet high. A few days after he referred to the same animal as being fifteen hands high.

"But," said a listener, "you gave it the other day as fifteen feet."

"Did I, thin?" said Patrick, "Well, I'll stick to it. He was fifteen feet high."—Exchange.

To the Preachers of the Raleigh Association.

Brethren:—The time for our Centennial work is very short, and probably it is not possible to make a personal canvass of the churches. But the opportunity of making an offering must not go unimproved. We have decided, therefore, to ask each preacher in the Raleigh Association to bring this matter up at once, and to take a collection in each church he serves. Do not worry yourself nor your churches about the several different objects to which it can be appropriated. Take it for "the Centennial of Missions." Let it be the offering of each church towards celebrating the great Centennial year. Do not delegate it to the sisters, nor to the Sunday-schools (unless between your appointments they can see and solicit something from every member). But the time is so short that unless something is done at once, some churches will fail to have a part in this work.

Brethren, make the appeal yourselves. Give all necessary explanations. Let this offering be entirely separate from the regular work of the church. And by or before the third Sunday in April, see that each church is reported with its Centennial collection to Bro. J. D. Boushall, Treasurer, Raleigh, N. C. Now, brethren, to the work, and do not fail to have each church included.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

Female Servants in Japan.

The servant girls in city families are usually rustic maidens who come into the towns in order to earn a livelihood. At first their complexion is extremely dark, having been previously accustomed to labor bare-headed in the rice and vegetable fields. Their hands are also rough, but their plump, graceful little forms and good natured smiles compensate in a large measure for these defects. They are regarded as objects of curiosity and targets for mirth by the juvenile members of the household, who mimic their quaint speech and poke fun at them for their want of proper breeding. But they are quite docile and give strict attention to the instructions of their mistress, and hence soon learn just how to sink upon the floor, how many times to polish their noses upon the mat, and how many honorifics to use when proffering tea or cake. They usually work quite diligently and look very picturesque moving about the house with their loops and coils of ebon hair, covered by a blue cloth to keep the dust from despoiling the shining tresses. Their long flowing sleeves are bound back by a cord crossing at the breast and back, displaying their shapely, well-rounded arms. They patter about, pigeon-toed, in their cloven stockings here and there, making the house tidy, cooking the dinner, and responding to the calls of the master or mistress by a loud and, to a foreigner, startling "Hei." Speedily presenting themselves when called, they fall upon their knees on the soft, clean mats that cover the floor, making one or more profound salams as the case may seem to require, and await instructions. When their terms of service expire, they are too much enlightened to wish to return to their country homes, and frequently marry and remain in the city. Sometimes they are so captivating that they are won by a male servant in the same house before the expiration of their contract. When one is about to enter into married life, her master often helps her to purchase the wedding garments and makes her useful presents as a reward for faithful services.—Mrs. J. A. Brunson, in Foreign Mission Journal.

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.

One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

Reunion of the Former Students of Oxford Female Seminary.

At a meeting on April 11th, 1893, of the Alumnæ Association of Oxford Female Seminary, it was unanimously resolved to invite the former students and teachers of the Seminary to attend the approaching commencement the last of May. The purpose is to have a large reunion, and the invitation is extended to the former students and teachers of Oxford Female Seminary from its organization in 1850 to the present, and to the students and teachers of Raleigh Baptist Female Seminary, which for ten years was conducted by our President.

The programme for commencement is unusually attractive. The speakers are eminent for ability; the graduating class is large; the music talent is beyond the average; and the art exhibit will be full and handsome; and the reunion of old friends will be delightful.

Entertainment will be provided for all those who will notify President Hobgood of their purpose to attend the Reunion. All such are requested to send in their names as soon as possible—certainly before May 15th. The railroads will give the usual reduced rates.

We cordially invite our sisters to re-visit their alma mater. She, with the whole town of Oxford, will give them a hearty welcome.

MRS. ANNA HUNTER HARDAWAY,
President of Alumnæ Association.

What has the Society Done?

A Baptist brother living in Missouri calls attention to the fact that the Sunday-school Board of the Convention has generously distributed $3,000 of its expected profits for the present year to the mission boards of the Southern States, to aid their mission work, and asks: "What is the Publication Society doing for mission work in these States?"

This question is entitled to a candid answer. On inquiry, the bookkeeper of the Missionary Department of the Society makes the following statement: "The Society expended last year in direct mission work in the States covered by the Convention, $13,081.78 in cash, and $2,690.18 in books at catalogue prices. Reducing these books to wholesale cash rates, they would amount to $1,614.11 cash, making an aggregate of $14,695.89 expended last year in cash, and its equivalent of cash, in mission work in the Southern States. The amount this year just closing will be more. For the last twenty eight years an average of full $10,000 each year has been expended by the Society in the Southern States in direct mission work.

Besides this, the Society made last year donations of Bibles and Testaments, books, and other Sunday-school literature, amounting, at catalogue prices, to $7,850 78. And the average value of the grants made every year for the last twenty eight years, is $5,280.

The answer, therefore, to the question is in brief this: The Society has given every year, for twenty-eight years, over $15,000 to aid the mission work in the Southern States. It should never be for a moment forgotten that every order made of the Publication Society for Sunday school books or periodicals adds to the Society's ability to help the mission work of Baptists in all sections. Not only does the literature itself do good, but the profits go directly to mission work."

S.

How Shall We Answer This?

The Baptist Ministers' Relief Board of North Carolina can only do the work for which they have been appointed by the State Convention, as the churches furnish them the means to accomplish it. For some time I have felt that our aged beneficiaries were being neglected. We have had but one Board meeting since the Convention in December last. At that meeting we appropriated all of the available cash in our treasury for the relief of our beneficiaries. We expect to have another meeting this week; and we are faced by the sad fact that there is not sufficient cash in our Treasurer's hands to make a decent appropriation to each one we are helping. On the eve of our intended meeting, comes this private letter from an aged veteran of Christ. It was not intended for publication, but I venture to give it. How about Christ's words, brethren and sisters, on "that day" when he shall say "I was a hungered, and ye gave me meat." But now for the letter:

"____ ____ ____

____ ____, N. C. "

Bro. Woodson—Sir: I thought I would write you a few lines to inform you of my condition. I do hate so much to have to do so, but it seems that I am forced to do so from necessity. On the 16th of February I received a check for ten dollars. I have been getting along on that until now, but it is gone, and I only have seven cents left me to pay [illegible] and we are now living on very [illegible]. I thought I would write you a few lines and explain to you the situation. I hate to call upon you for a favor, but The Lord knows I would not do so if I could get along without it, but I have no way of making any money, and I am not able to do much, especially hard work. The time has been when work was a pleasure to me, but that day is passed and gone. In looking over the records, I find that if I should live to see the 19th of October next, I will be seventy-five years of age, and I feel the effects of age very much.

We are now living very close. The ten dollar check you sent me the 16th of February last is all the money I have had in that time; so if it is possible for you to send me a little help, it would be so thankfully received. Your brother in Christ,

____ ____."

You have read it, brethren, what shall we do about it?

New Spring Dress Goods.
Among the new Dress Goods for the Spring will be noticed some distinct changes, both as to colors and styles, from those of the past season.
Our advance lines of Dress Fabrics for this season are already on sale, and embraces the newest shades and textures in Plain Materials, as well as the latest ideas in the handsomer French Novelties.
This year, Cotton Dress Fabrics will be shown in many dainty effects, and our present exhibit of these is the most extensive we have ever made.
We suggest to our patrons to buy early, as most of these goods are our own importations, consequently many styles once sold cannot be duplicated.
Requests for samples should indicate something as to colors, and about what price goods are desired.
Cash with the order, of $5.00 and over, goods will be delivered free (except furniture and crockery) to the nearest Express Office or Railroad station.

It is quite natural for men to find a condition of things that is very unsatisfactory and especially when they are looking for it. Every little while such a condition seems to dawn on some good brother, and in fact he seldom sees anything else, more particularly if he is in a state of unrest and is performing the duties naturally belonging to himself, at only about half rate. We can usually find what we look for. What would be more natural than for one who is meeting his own obligations only about half way to find very many bad things in other people? When some person sits down with us and can give the particulars about the shortcomings of all his neighbors and many of his distant friends we may well wonder if there can possibly be anything wrong with said brother. So it is when a member of a church can tell all the defects in the character of every other member in the church. If the dear brother were exceedingly busy in discharging his own obligations he would not have much time left to learn all the defects of other people. Hardly a character can be found in which there is not something good and it is much more profitable to study the good qualities of a very unworthy man than to devote time to searching for his defects.—Indiana Baptist.

DIED.

GARRARD—Died, at his home near Durham, N. C., March 17th, 1893, Mrs. S. E. Garrard, aged twenty-seven years. She was a good woman and a zealous member of Rose of Sharon church. She leaves a husband and three children to mourn her loss.

PASTOR.

HAWLEY—Miss Mary Hawley passed away to rest on March 26th, 1893, in her seventy-fifth year. She was baptized in 1838, by Rev. Stephen Senter, into the fellowship of Antioch Baptist church, of which she remained a faithful member until her death. She leaves one sister, one brother, and many relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

M. A. HAWLEY.

Jonesboro, N. C., April 15, 1893.

COFFIELD—Sister Henrietta E. Coffield, wife of Mr. Robt. P. Coffield, died on the evening of March 20th, 1893, at the age of thirty-six years, nine months, and seven days, at her sister's, in Manly, N. C., where she had gone to spend a few weeks. She leaves a husband, three children, an aged father, and brothers and sisters to mourn their loss. Sister Coffield gave her heart to the Lord at an early age. She joined the Methodist church of her choice and remained a consistent member till her death. She was a loving mother, an affectionate wife, and a kind neighbor. Surely a good woman has fallen.

May we that are left behind press onward and upward until we meet her in the bright beyond, where no tears are ever shed nor parting ever comes. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." JOHN C. BURNS.

KIVETT—Sister Sarah Kivett departed this life on the night of March 6th, at her home near Liberty, N. C., of paralysis. She was a faithful member of the Baptist church for more than fifty years, and by her untiring efforts she raised a large family up in the fear and admonition of the Lord. Her ambition was to do her Master's will, and one of her greatest pleasures was entertaining ministers. She loved to meet with God's people, and her theme of conversation was religion. She will be sadly missed in the community, especially in the Mt. Pleasant Baptist church, where she was ever present at the meetings, and ready to take weak ones by the hand and lift them out of despondency. But none can miss her more than the bereft husband and family. May the grace of God be sufficient to sustain them. A FRIEND.

BOONE—On August 23d, 1892, Mrs. L. J. Boone fell asleep in Jesus at her home in Goldsboro, after a severe and long-protracted illness, which she bore with Christian fortitude and patience. She was in her fifty-fifth year. At the age of seventeen she was converted at Shiloh church under the preaching of the revered Elder Alfred Guy, and was married to J. S. Boone in September 1862.

She was a woman of fine intelligence and, what was better, of earnest and devoted piety. She was never happier than when she was in the house of God, and was an appreciative listener to the preaching of the gospel. She lived a saintly life, and strongly impressed upon those around her the beauty and value of the Christian religion. She was a great comfort to her pastor, and an example in the church of earnest and holy living.

Her husband and a number of children are left to mourn her loss, to whom we have commended the exceeding great and precious promises of God's Word, assured that they will receive comfort and blessing.

HER PASTOR.

Goldsboro, April 15, 1893.

BROWN—On April 11th, 1893, of paralysis, Sister Harriett M. Brown, in her seventy-seventh year. In early life Sister Brown professed faith in Christ and united, I think, with Ahoskie church. She was a member of Beulah church, Gates county, at the time of her death She was a staunch Baptist and a faithful Christian. While a member at Beulah her seat in church was rarely vacant at our meetings, either on Saturday or Sunday, until her affliction came.

Three and a half years ago she was stricken with paralysis so that she could not get to church any more, though often longing to be there. A few months ago she had another stroke, and on last Tuesday evening peacefully breathed her last. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

W. B. WAFF.

Reynoldson, N. C., April 18, 1893.

COUNCIL.—On the night of April 9th, the spirit of Deacon Addison Council took its flight, after a tedious illness of nearly twelve months. He was in his sixty-ninth year. He professed faith in Christ when eighteen years old and at once connected himself with Mt. Pisgah church (Mt. Zion Association) and remained a member there until the organization of Green Level church (Raleigh Association) in which he officiated, becoming a charter member, and remained in its fellowship unto his death.

He was not a perfect man, for none are such, but he led such a life and made such a character as we love to think upon and hold up to the world as worthy of exemplification. He had the highest regard for the rights of his fellowman, and was careful always to mete out courtesies to them according to the golden rule. His obligation to God received his first attention, and to know what it was he made a constant care.

Conversant with the polity of his church, his conservative spirit and a pious zeal for its virtue and purity, qualified him to render invaluable aid in the peaceable and yet stern management of church affairs. He was a faithful counsellor to the young, who learned to love his association and were free to unbosom their troubles and spiritual needs to him for counsel and sympathy.

The writer will never forget his first acquaintance with Bro. Council. The circumstance was something unusual in our experience. And whether "divine interposition" was transmitted through the touch of his hand we cannot tell, but when he laid it upon our head and began to tell us of the realities of this life and the soul's worth, and with it breathing a desire that he might yet live to hear us "tell the sweet story of the cross," there came a thrill of inspiration in our heart whose influence is still felt, though at that time preaching the gospel had not occurred to us as a personal duty. Would to God we had many fathers in Israel to-day whose exemplary character and love for Christ and our boys were such as to lead them to daily be such moulders of character. It is a great need in our society. Bro. Council's love for the Sunday-school work was unabating to his death. To the time of his sore affliction he was never wanting at his post in the Sunday-school at Green Level, whose beginning was largely due to his efforts. Liberal in dispensing his means, his time and influence for good, he was a pillar to the church and an Aaron to his pastor. We visited him often in his sickness and always found him cheerful, patient, and reconciled to the suffering he had to endure. Death seemed to be no terror to him, but he rather welcomed it as a messenger of relief. We believe that to-day he is reaping the reward of the faithful, and we offer the light of his life as a condolence to all who are bereaved in his death.

C. W. BLANCHARD.

Tributes of Respect.

It is with much sadness of heart and the feeling of a heavy loss that the members of the Ladies Missionary Society of the First Baptist church of Charlotte record the death of their beloved President, Mrs. Naomi Murphy, on March 30th. Our sister was one of those quiet, conscientious Christians who do so much work and whose place it is so difficult to fill. In cases of sickness or trouble, she was always there. Preachers and deacons consulted with her, the old found a friend, and the young a loving adviser.

She became a member of the Baptist church in Norfolk, Va., at the age of fourteen, and for forty-five years her Saviour has been her closest friend. After the war she with her husband and family removed to Charlotte. Here the Baptists were few and despised, but this did not daunt her. She joined with them and was one of the main instruments in raising the church to what it is to day. Any work that could further the interests of Christ's kingdom had her hearty co operation. She was especially interested in Foreign Missions and was working hard for the Centennial Fund. She has left an exceedingly precious memory behind, and we all feel holier for having labored with Mrs. Murphy.

May the consolation of a loving Father rest with the bereaved family.

H. J. Barker was born Dec. 24, 1838, and died March 25, 1893, aged fifty-five years and three months. He professed faith in Christ and united with Olive Chapel Baptist church, being baptized by Rev. Johnson Olive Oct. 3, 1853. He has been a consistent member for forty years, and during this time there was never a charge brought against him. He was a faithful worker in both church and Sunday-school. He removed from Wake county in 1891 and united with Randleman Baptist church of which he was a member until his death, and during that time has been superintendent of our Sunday-school. No one knew him but to love him. He leaves a wife, seven sons and one daughter, together with a host of friends to mourn his loss.

Randleman Baptist church adopted the following:

Resolved 1. That in Bro. Barker's death, the Randleman church has lost a most worthy and respected member.

2. That as a christian he was true, and as a companion congenial.

3. That his presence among us is sorely missed.

4. That we extend our most heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved family, and trust that the remembrance of his noble life may prove a constant comfort to his grief stricken family.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be inscribed upon a page of the minutes, and that a copy be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER with request to publish.

Dr. Boykin's Worm Killer.

"The best selling Vermifuge in the market." Recipe furnished to any regular physician when requested.

We have never asked for a certificate. We have some of the strongest ever given—all sent without solicitation. Read a few only of the many evidences of its great merit:

LA GRANGE, N. C., July 1887.

Mr. J. P. Joyner:—I gave my child one dose of Boykin's "Worm Killer," purchased of you. It brought 306 worms. I consider it the best worm medicine made. Respectfully, J. W. THOMAS.

Messrs. I. M. & B. F. Powell, prominent merchants in Columbus county, N. C., wrote us in July, 1887 that "Rev. T. C. Floyd gave his child one dose of Boykin's "Worm Killer," and the result was 367 worms."

Mr. W. J. Davis of Ridgeway, S. C., says: "I have quite a demand for your "Worm Killer." It is the best Vermifuge I get."

Dr. R. H. Edmunds, a well known physician and farmer, writes under date of Ridgeway, S. C., May 26th, 1884, "that a negro girl 10 years old, near him, took two or three doses of the 'Worm Killer,' and passed 366 worms."

Price: 25c. per Bottle. Take no other.

Take Time to Pray.

Have you been alone with Jesus
In communion sweet to-day?
Have you sought His blessed presence
Have you taken time to pray?

Have you gone into your closet,
Where by eyes of men unseen,
You by faith could draw Him to you,
Nothing coming in between?

He delights when thus we meet Him,
And His blessed Spirit given
Makes these seasons of communion
Little less than very heaven.

Do not then His heart be grieving
By not taking time to pray;
If you seek Him, He will meet you,
And go with you all the day.

The Neglect of the Aged.

It was a strange plan of nature, that of making the extreme ends of human life, infancy and old age, conditions of helplessness. But of these two stages, infancy has by far the greater natural advantages for its comfort and happiness. For when an old person is neglected and misused, in addition to the physical discomfort is the mental suffering occasioned by such treatment.

It is a shameful fact that many old people are treated with unfeeling neglect when left dependent on the mercy of their children or more distant relatives. In many a home where the old father or mother or grandparent is left a helpless charge on a younger generation, they are made to feel keenly their dependence; they are reminded by many hints how much expense they are; how much the room they occupy is needed; how much extra care they make in the family. There is but little charity shown the failing faculties; and the infirm body, that must have extra warmth and extra care to keep the feeble life blood going, is regarded as an unwelcome burden.

Will Carleton understood the treatment suffered by many old people, or he could never have written "Over the Hills to the Poor House." Such filial neglect described in that poem is not mere poetical fancy, but a more frequent reality in life than is generally supposed.

A painful instance of such recently came to my knowledge. An unusual subscription was taken up in a church of one of our cities. It was to raise money to send an old lady to one of the Old Folks' Homes. She had long been a widow; was left with two children, a boy and a girl. She learned the dressmaker's trade, and by much hard labor supported her family. At last the children were grown. The daughter married a well-to-do, selfish man and moved to a distant State. The son also married and moved a distance from his mother. The old mother supported herself as long as she could, but at last she had to succumb to the infirmities of age. She wrote to her daughter, saying she would have to make her home with one of her children, as she was unable to take care of herself. The daughter replied that she had married without any means, and she did not want her husband to have any of her family to support. She said it was the son's place to take care of her mother.

The son was written to and he replied that he was not as well off as his sister, and they had not a room they could spare.

The old woman, pierced to the heart at such replies, determined she would never make her home with either of her children. She told her troubles to a lady friend and a member of the church. The result was, an interest in her welfare was awakened, and the required sum for entering an Old Folks' Home was raised in the church. And she is to day cared for in that public Home, while her own son and daughter travel their own selfish roads in life.

There is no more pathetic object in life than an old, dependent person, whose life-work is finished; who lives from day to day with no special purpose or ambition to stimulate life, simply waiting for the grim messenger, whose certain call is constantly expected by them. Some people seem to think that the sensibilities of such old people become callous; that they are indifferent to slights and inattention; that they can put up with inferior accommodations and few comforts with much less inconvenience than the younger members of the family. But instead, I think the feelings of such ones become painfully sensitive. Their dependent condition is galling to the last degree. If they do not complain, it is not from indifference, but because they know complaining would be unavailing. The lessons of patience they have learned in the hard school of life stand them in good stead in this final trial.

Is it not enough that old persons must bear the painful consciousness that life is about over; that the once vigorous body has become feeble and inactive; the quick mental faculties darkened by a cloud, and the physical beauty that charmed the eye has withered at the touch of age? Is it not enough that all this should be borne without being made to feel that there is no welcome spot or willing care for them in life?

The protection of aged parents by their children is one of the beautiful and just claims of nature. And the son or daughter who, through greed and selfishness, refuses to bestow such care when needed, is an ungrateful and unnatural exception in the human family.—Nellie Burns, in Jenness Miller Monthly.

Advice to Young Men.

When first seeking commercial employment you must realize that a young man who can do nothing more important than address envelopes in a scrawly handwriting, and lick postage stamps and put them on slowly cannot command a very high salary. When you do obtain employment attach more value to the opportunity it affords you to learn and to make yourself more competent and indispensable than importance to the amount of salary you receive.

I would advise you as soon as you are earning enough to support a wife to marry; I do not think that a young man is of much value to himself or any one else until he does marry. When you have found a girl you would like to make your wife, be diligent in the pursuit of her. "Seest thou a man diligent in the pursuit of a wife, he shall stand before another young man not so diligent." In selecting her it would be well to be guided by Wordsworth, and secure one who appears to you to be,

"A violet by a mossy stone,
Half hidden from the eye;
Fair as a star, when only one
Is shining in the sky."

If you are not diligent in pursuit of her, you will not catch her, and you will feel as is described by Moore:

"I feel like one
Who treads alone
Some banquet hall deserted,
Whose lights are fled,
Whose garlands dead,
And all but he departed."

In conclusion let us see what successful men, or those whom the world classes as successful, have said about success in life.

Disraeli, the great orator and prime minister of England said: "Youth is a blunder; manhood a struggle; old age a regret." Also, "The disappointment of manhood succeeds to the delusion of youth."

Francis Bacon, the philosopher, said: "The world's a bubble, and the life of man less than a span."

Gray said:

"The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power,
And all that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave Await alike the inevitable hour.
The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

Such quotations could be multiplied almost endlessly, and go to show that life is to a great extent a disappointment even to successful men, for,

"With equal pace impartial fate
Knocks at the cottage or the palace gate."

And yet millions of those who have lived pure lives and have tried to do right have been full of happiness during their old age, and have fulfilled the immortal injunction of Bryant:

"So live, that when thy summons comes to join,
The innumerable caravan which moves
To that mysterious realm each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed,
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one that wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

Training in Needlework.

It sometimes appears as though the old art of needlework was in danger of being forgotten, or acquired only by those who seek it as a means of earning their bread. As a matter of fact, a vast majority of the girls who learn the trade of dressmaking have to be taught the rudiments of sewing before they can acquire their trade. This is a thing they should have learned in their earliest childhood, and the result of the lack of this early training is seen in the unsatisfactory needlework of so many dressmakers who understand fitting and draping to perfection. It is much more difficult to get a competent seamstress than it is a dressmaker who can put a dress together with that stylish air which makes such a fine appearance at first, but which betrays its poor sewing at once on inspection, and is not made for wear.

The poorest woman in England, Germany and France are taught the use of the needle, and the richest woman does not despise it. For, in the older countries, the training in needlework begins when the little one is at her mother's knee. At an age when she is little more than a baby she has become much more expert with her needle than many of our girls in their teens. This is no hardship to her, for, like Wordsworth's little maid "of seven," she sews in the open air, with the birds and blossoming flowers around her. Needlework becomes natural to her, and her leisure moments are spent in this way instead of in idle longings for something to do. There are numberless children throughout the land who are ennuied with idleness, who make the lives of their parents and those around them weary with pleadings for fresh means of amusement. The round of pleasures in children's lives is easily exhausted. Their active minds demand some employment, with a definite, useful end. The child who is taught sewing is far happier, bending her small energies toward making garments for her doll, or even for herself, than she is pouting in a corner for want of amusement.

The great obstacle in the way of children being taught sewing at home is indolence on the part of the mother or the lack of time to teach them. But nothing should be allowed to interfere with so important a matter as this. It is necessary to the physical as well as to the moral well-being of all individuals that their time should be employed. The girl who watches her mother do the housework, and sits about with idle hands, becomes palsied in energy and blighted in feelings. The injury to the mother is small, compared to the injury of the child. The girl has been hopelessly crippled by her education for any battle in life, and has been trained in selfishness as well as indolence. If she is taught to bear her share of the housework, and of the plain sewing which forms a part of the work of every household, there is no danger that time will hang heavy on her hands, or that she will have unwholesome longings for a sensational life. The women who fill the columns of our daily papers with stories of suicide, unhappy marriage and divorce are not those who delight in domestic pursuits. They are, rather, those whom fond and foolish parents have brought up to a life of idleness and have sacrificed their small means to dress in a style of showy luxury.

"Doing nothing is their curse,
Is there a sin that can vex us worse?"

ACTUAL EXPERIENCE NECESSARY BEFORE HE WOULD TRUST IT.

STATESVILLE, N. C., June 13, 1892.

Dear Sir—For the past two years I have been a great sufferer from asthma; my first attack lasted five months—second, eight months. Two of our best doctors did all they could for me, but to no effect. I had been confined to my room and bed for seven months when a friend brought me an Electropoise. I had no faith in it and would not use it until I saw my little boy cured of an acute attack of bronchitis by it. I then commenced its use, and in two months was cured of asthma. As I have often said to friends who ask me about it, "It is the wonder of wonders." To all who suffer from asthma, I can sincerely recommend the Electropoise from my own experience, and what I have observed makes me believe that it will do all you claim for it.

Very truly,

Don't be an Egoist.

An Egoist is a man who thinks, plans, works, lives for self. Like the earth, turns on his own axis, but unlike the earth fails to revolve around a central sun. Spins like a top on self. Coleridge tells of a man who never spoke his own name without lifting his hat, he had such profound self-respect. The Egoist is a self made man, and worships his maker, his own course of trouble springs from the fact that he finds no one to share his worship. Narcissus was an Egoist, he fell in love with his own face reflected in a fountain, became a plant and went to seed. Egoists usually do. You will be tempted to be an Egoist; but don't. You will be disappointed with the results in time and eternity.—O. P. G., An Young People's Union.

From China—The Missionary Call.

Dear Recorder:—In reply to your invitation given to missionaries and others to discuss those very practical questions relating to the missionary's call, I had begun a short communication which assumed that the preacher of the gospel is, or should be, called of God, with such a clear recognition of God's voice by way of authority that he could not doubt his being set apart personally, directly, of God's sovereign will by the Holy Ghost; so that whatever his disposition towards the work of the ministry may have been previously, his heart echoes the cry, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." And while with no miraculous appeal to the organs of sense, He does come, whether in the quiet hours of the night, or during the press of other duties of the day, with a voice which the man must hear in his inmost soul, and with a command he cannot disregard.

But Bro. White's letter in the RECORDER of Feb. 1 shows that this is hardly a safe premise to lay down, because there may be some who do not believe in a divine call to the ministry.

Not wishing to provoke a discussion of a question which is a trite one to most of our North Carolina Baptists, I feel it wiser to add a few lines by way of preface to what I would say as to the missionary's call, that what I write may be clearly understood.

This is a plea for the recognition of God's sovereign, electing grace manifested not only in man's salvation, but in setting apart whom he will to the sacred work of proclaiming his revealed will, as messengers sent of God who, like Elijah of old, feel themselves standing as they preached in the presence of Jehovah and responsible to him for every word they utter.

I venture to affirm that the Scriptures teach that God elects whom he will from among his people, and provides them with such qualifications as are needed to do the work of divinely appointed teachers of his word.

And further that the churches of God have a solemn warning to be very careful to lay hands on no man suddenly in setting him apart to this work, lest they be found to send a man whom God has not chosen. Is it not strange how distasteful Pauline doctrine is to some people when they once commit themselves to advocating lay preachers and women preachers, and "cyclone evangelists"—thank you, Bro. Editor, for this last term. If you find a man shaky on the sovereignty of God, whether displayed in man's salvation from sin, or in such unerring guidance and masterful control of man by his Spirit as to put whom he will into the ministry, and to save by such instruments as he himself chooses, then you can expect to find him trembling and uncertain about other teachings of God's word.

Does God call men without consulting their preferences? Yes, and by that supreme law of magnetic control, "The love of Christ constraineth us," he makes the work of service sweet, and sustains by his almighty power even to death. These truths are so manifestly taught in God's word, and verified in human experience, that the writer thinks it quite sufficient to pass on to the subject proper.

Is there a specific call of God to the foreign field? In reply, I would say there is. Let me define my position more clearly by saying that the foreign field is only a convenient term for designating a particular field of work. A parallel case found in early Christian church history was the preaching in Jewish and Gentile lands.

That one who has entertained a distinct call of God may be led to change his field of labor without the conviction that God is calling him to another field as surely as that he called him into the ministry, though perhaps through different means, and with different experiences, I admit may occur, but think it should not occur. So that the call transferring a preacher from the home field to the foreign, may not mark so important a transition in his religious experience, or be accompanied with such spiritual and mental exercises as he knew in his call to the ministry; still if the question is carefully weighed and decided cautiously, apart from romantic or poetic fancies, he must pass through a struggle, and should only be led to give himself to this work because he feels that the Spirit of God is striving with him, and that in heart experience, in providence, he hears the still small voice calling him from home to go to a heathen land. It may cost no long, bitter struggle, but if he can not say I am called of God to this work, then I see no reason why he should go.

As bad as the work needs missionaries, let us have no men who have not been sent of God. It is almost sure to be a sad sequel if one comes to the foreign field without decided convictions on this point. That one may be called to the foreign field without a previous call to the ministry is clearly taught in Paul's experience. God said to Ananias, "For he is a chosen vessel to bear my name before the Gentiles and kings, and the children of Israel." Notice here God's sovereign choice and the selected field of labor. When he would remain in Jerusalem to testify before those who had seen his previous persecution of the church, the Lord distinctly reminds him of his call to another field. For further proof of the divine nature of Paul's call to a specific field of God's sovereign will, see Acts, 13th chapter and first few verses. But I would call attention to Paul's experience related in Acts 22: 21. Paul, before the call of the Holy Ghost to the church at Antioch to set apart Paul and Barnabas to the Foreign Mission work, was pleading with God to be allowed to remain at home, and for what seemed weighty reasons; but notice again the two points of God's sovereign voice not in argument, but command, "Depart," and the specific field designated, "for I will send thee far hence unto the Gentiles." Other teachings of God's Word are quite confirmatory of this position. This does not exclude an occasional overlapping of fields of work, so that the missionary may preach anywhere and to anybody, only it fixes beyond question where the path of duty lies as ordained of God, and where his life-work should be.

As to whether the call is to work for life in the field chosen for him, this should be a matter decided by himself according to God's guidance. Providentially God decides this matter for most of his servants whom he sends to the foreign field by giving them such environments as to make it necessary that the worker should give his whole life to this one field. Philip's call to preach to the Eunuch, and Peter's to the centurion Cornelius, had the limit of time fixed, and really did not take them into the foreign field. Theirs was more like the work which some of our churches are doing at home, who have Chinese and other heathen brought by God's providence to their doors. In the very nature of the case, now and all through the history of the Christian churches, the two fields were so distinct as to require separate calls, and to one or the other for life. Cases to the contrary seem to be exceptions.

Personally I believe my call to the ministry was to the foreign field, and not to preach at home. But I conceive it embraced the duty to preach at home, until God opened up the way for me to leave for distant China, and even here I hail with delight any opportunity to preach to my fellow-countrymen or to men of any other nationality, when it does not conflict with the duties of my specific life-work.

Now, come in the disturbing elements. What about laymen preaching? Are they called to the foreign mission work? And are godly women called of God to preach to the heathen, or to teach the truths of God's Word? Nowhere is practical wisdom and common sense more needed than on the foreign field. I see nothing in God's Word about laymen being called of God to preach; but I do think it teaches there is work for all to do in God's vineyard. Layman preaching involves a contradiction of terms, and women's preaching as officially called of God to the pastorate or to public evangelistic services involves an absurdity, or worse, presents a sad example of the utter disregard of the inspired teachings of God's Word.

But that there is a grand work for godly women, and for men who do not feel called of God to the ministry in the foreign field, I think is clearly recognized. Only they should know what their work is, and should feel led of God's Spirit to conscientiously take up this work from a conviction of duty, with due reference to their wise co-operation with all other divisions of recognized church work. "There are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit." Great confusion is growing up in some circles of Christian work because of a disregard of these legitimate divisions of Christian labor, and their proper boundaries, and their relations to church work. Disregard the divine call to the ministry, and you find laymen preaching. This calls for women preachers. The current has set in strongly, and hundreds of men, unfitted for pastoral or evangelistic work, and women expecting to do indiscriminate evangelistic work, are coming into all Eastern countries. The reaction is inevitable, and is felt all over Christendom, even to the center of Baptist church life. The spirit of restlessness is in the minds of many of God's people. Great pressure of many artificial kinds are brought to bear on young men and women in all spheres of life. So that the question which once was, "Does God call me to go the foreign field?" has become "Why should I stay at home?"

Dear brethren and sisters, as bad as we need workers, and our cry goes up night and day, "Lord, send us more laborers into the harvest field," do not forget that God is never in a hurry. Let us not precede him, nor presume to direct where or how the Holy Ghost shall work. But let us be ready to answer when he does call us to do a given work, "Here, Lord, send me." And let us pray God to call many more into the foreign field as ministers of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

L. N. CHAPPELL.

Chinkiang, China, March 15, 1893.

The Kwong Tung Association.

This body recently held its annual meeting in Canton at the chapel adjoining our mission residence. It has been organized seven or eight years, and is composed of five churches in this province of China. It is hoped that soon a church will be organized in the adjacent province of Kwong Sai, and then it is proposed to change the name to the Association of the two Kwongs. Bro. Simmons was chosen Moderator, and two Clerks were Chinese brethren. About fifty delegates were present and several visitors. The exercises were very much like those of an Association in North Carolina, though there were some features which resembled a Union Meeting. The opening service was a prayer-meeting on Wednesday night. At the close of this service, the pastor of the Shiu Hing church baptized two men who had been received for membership by the Tsing Uen church. One of them was a young Buddhist priest. The close of the meeting on Sunday was also marked by a baptism, the candidate being the wife of one of the members of the Canton church.

On Thursday the Association was organized in a very brief time, the committees were appointed, and the body was ready for business. The discussions were introduced by one to three papers, some written by the missionaries, others by Chinese brethren and sisters. Mrs. Graves and a native Christian woman wrote on "How to carry the gospel to the women of the villages," and Miss McMinn wrote on "The opportunities for carrying the gospel to women." These papers were read by some of the brethren. The paper of Miss McMinn is to be printed in the minutes. The papers written by the brethren were on subjects similar to the above. Following the reading of the papers, there were discussions of the subjects by many brethren, sometimes extended, nearly always interesting and pointed. Some brethren spoke more frequently than others, but there was quite a large number of speakers, larger than could usually be found in a North Carolina Association composed of fifty delegates. One paper was read by a brother who speaks the Hak ka dialect. Very few in the audience understood the reading. But the strange thing was that one of the clerks, who does not understand nor speak Hak ka, took up the paper at once and read it in Cantonese, so that all could understand it. The characters are the same for all dialects, and they have the same meaning in all, but they are called by different names in the different sections.

The order and attention were worthy of all praise. There was seldom any moving about, never any interruption from talking in the house, and always close attention to the speakers.

The entertainment was on a plan which would seem somewhat novel to a North Carolina community. The homes of average Chinese afford but little room for the entertainment of visitors, and the customs of Americans and Chinese are so widely different as to make it impracticable for missionaries to do their part in the usual way. There are several rooms connected with the chapel premises, quite sufficient to afford sleeping room for this number of Chinamen. Every Chinaman, when he travels, takes his bed along with him. So there was need only to provide something to eat. In the church here a collection was taken for this purpose, with this the food was bought, cooked by a man employed for the purpose, and they all ate in common. The noon-day meal, however, was given by Bro. Simmons and Dr. Graves, not only to the delegates from a distance, but to all who attended the meetings. For this purpose they sent to a neighboring eating-house, bought the desired delicacies of Chinese diet and passed them around to all present in the chapel. The first day, the principal item of the bill of fare was said to be five hundred Chinese dumplings and a smaller number of shrimp patties. A poor dyspeptic must forego such dainties. I can join them in drinking tea if it does not come too frequently, and I can do something in the way of eating rice, but many of their delicacies are too much for my feeble appetite and digestion.

On Monday following the adjournment of the Association, a meeting of a very interesting character was held in the Tung Shek Kah chapel in the eastern part of the city. This chapel formerly belonged to Bro. Robards, once connected with this mission. In execution of the provisions of his will, the property was divided, and the residence fell to his heirs and was sold. The chapel with two vacant lots constituted the half given to the mission. In this chapel has lived for some years Bro. Chau Kam Shing, one of the most consecrated and efficient of our native preachers, who is supported by one of the churches in Brooklyn, N. Y. When not absent in the country, he opens the chapel every day and talks with any who come in about the way of salvation. When first built the chapel was on a main thoroughfare, and was a good place to get a good congregation. But recently a bund has been built along the river front, which makes this street little more than a back alley-way. However, one of the vacant lots extends to the bund, where crowds of people are passing all day. Concerning this lot the meeting was held. Some time ago this brother was quite sick, and for a time was not expected to live. As a thank-offering for recovery, he desires to have built a chapel on this vacant lot, fronting on the highway. At the meeting held in this chapel, remarks were made by Doctor Graves, the pastor of the Canton church, and by Bro. Chau Kam Shing, and then subscriptions were taken for this chapel. In a little while the sum of $380 was raised, more than half enough to build the chapel, and a committee was appointed to have charge of the work. Many of the subscriptions were quite liberal, men with salaries of less than one hundred dollars giving for this object five dollars, in addition to what they give for the support of their own churches. Bro. Chau Kam Shing, out of a salary of about one hundred and twenty dollars a year, gives twenty dollars. He has just finished building a large chapel at Sam Kong, far up the river, and to that he gave one hundred and seven dollars. The church at that place is composed of forty-four members, and they have had a hard struggle to finish their house of worship. One of the delegates briefly told of some of their struggles, a story which I have often heard when a collection was going on, and I wondered if he would close his speech, as they usually do, by saying they could not give anything, or by promising seventy-five cents. But he broke the record and said Sam Kong would give thirty dollars.

The statistics in the letters of the churches are almost the same as those in the Annual Report of the Mission. This report closed with the end of the year 1892, while the letters to the Association closed with the Chinese year, Feb. 16th. The Annual Report is in the hands of the printer, and I read the final proof of it yesterday. I hope soon to send the RECORDER a copy.

G. W. GREENE.

From Baltimore.

Dear Recorder:—As church letters often say to Associations, "Another year has rolled around." They who patronize several newspapers are apt to be vividly impressed by the rapid flight of time, so soon do renewed subscriptions seem to come due. To the publisher, perhaps, it seems quite otherwise. I cannot now well afford to do without the RECORDER. Please find enclosed payment for another year.

As to Baptist church news in this city, it gives me pleasure to report general progress. It is doubtful if the work of the churches was ever before so well and successfully done, or the Baptist outlook was ever before so hopeful and cheering. And my conviction is, that we are largely indebted to the young people's associations of various names in our churches for the better work and ever improving prospect. This scribe has been a member of the household of faith fifty-five years, and he cannot avoid contrasting things as they were a half century ago and are now. Well, he is not disposed to say, "The former days were better than these." In that time great changes have been wrought both in the world and in the churches, but I am not old fogy enough to say these changes have not been mainly for the better. Fifty years ago but few young people were members of the churches, and they were expected to keep in the background and to be quiet. Now the young people in the churches are a mighty host, and they are in the front rank of the Lord's army. An old christian said the other day, "When I was a young man, young men were of small account; now when I am old, old men are of small account." There is a good deal of truth in that statement.

But the indications are that the cause of Christ is continually gaining a better drilled and a more efficient army, and for that we should all be glad and give thanks.

Last night Dr. H. M. Wharton gave his annual church reception. This he gives year by year to promote a better social acquaintance among his church members. It was my pleasure to be there last night as an invited guest and to take some notes. The membership of the Brantly church is now about 600. The deacons say there are not a half dozen of the members that they cannot locate and put their hand on any day.

In a city like this where so many people are ever on the move, coming and going, a church of so large membership does well indeed to keep nearly all in sight. And Brantly church does even better than that, for she keeps them nearly all at work. In the large company present last night there were very few gray heads. Young men and women, middle-aged men and women, make the rank and file of this enterprising and prosperous church. I saw nothing in the reception and entertainment of last night to find fault with, and see how great good may result.

Dr. Wharton has just received a flattering call to the pastorate of a New York church, and is all the time receiving calls to work here and there, but none of these things move him. He loves the Brantly church as they love him.

I should say, before closing this letter, that the Perkins Square Baptist church, colored, dedicated on last Sunday an excellent and beautiful meeting house, costing from $18,000 to $20,000. They took down their old house, which had become too small, and at a good deal of self-sacrifice erected the new one. A few years ago this church and her pastor came bodily over from the M. E. denomination to the Baptist faith and order. The Lord has done great things for them.

Yours for Christ, A. J. HIRAM.

A Pastor who Sings.

It is something to his credit if the pastor sings. Among the duties required of him is that of director of public worship. Praise, prayer, and preaching are placed under his control. On Sunday the prayers and preaching are personal as well as representative acts, those of the man as well as of the minister. Is it not important that praise should be also? To make this the case the pastor should be a singer and a leader of singing. Knowledge of music as a science is valuable to him, ability to read notes at sight quite desirable, but surely some familiarity with the simple art of singing is almost indispensable to the highest success as director, under the Holy Spirit, of public worship.

Extremes meet in more senses than one when the pastor passes from the pulpit platform, at one end of the church, to the choir loft in the other. Choirs are not always consecrated Christians who make melody in the heart. All admit that they should be. The best way to bring them to a proper frame of mind is for the pastor to be ex officio one of their number, just as he is in the Sunday-school. He should not usurp the place of chorister or organist, nor make himself otherwise officious, but he should wisely control both by being in fullest sympathy with them. It is hardly well for him to think himself a gifted singer or to allow other singers to imagine he thinks so. Solos by the pastor are seldom in good taste. A singer he may be, but he is always something more. It is his duty to magnify, popularize, and spiritualize the service of song in the house of the Lord. This can be accomplished by keeping close touch with his chosen musical leaders, and by constantly reminding them that they and he are intimately associated in promoting proper expressions of praise to God.

Prayer meetings are turned into praise meetings by a singing pastor. Such meetings will be generally well-attended. Young people will like them; women will enjoy them, as singing is the only act of public worship permitted them. Hymns, wisely selected and well sung, take the place of applause for the enthusiastic. They are the "Amen," "the responsive service," which so stimulates the preacher. Prayer meetings, where singing is made prominent, and if necessary, led by the pastor, will not only be enjoyable, but effective. Hymns of fervency will drown petitions that are dull, wandering, or cold, and make more sweet to the listening worshippers those inspired by the Holy Spirit. Singing may promote revivals; revivals indirectly thrive upon singing. Many a conversion is due to a song baptized in the grace of Christ.

Pastoral visiting is more delightful to the preacher who sings. Elias Dodson, of blessed memory, divided the household attentions of a minister into three classes. If you stop five minutes it is a "vis"; if you remain fifteen or twenty minutes a "visit," but if you prolong your stay for an hour and a half it is a "visetation." How to visit satisfactorily to himself and to others is a problem few ministers out of heaven can solve. Some of us find it practicable to make singing do good in our twenty minutes interview. You can always become friends with the children by singing if it is proper. Once or twice a shy or skeptical girl has been brought to seriousness by a song the preacher manages to have her "play and sing" with him. And that dear old saint in the bed over there, whom you visit often, and to whom you have read the Bible time and time again, and with whom you have prayed frequently, she would like to hear you sing perhaps. Ask if she likes "Children of the Heavenly King," or "How Firm a Foundation." Sing a few stanzas in a sweet low voice and see the face light up or the tears flow, and hear her tell you at how those words were blessed to her heart when it was young and fresh long years ago. Yes, some of us have sung with the dying till they crossed the river and caught up the notes of the ransomed in glory.

Then the home funeral, a funeral among simple-hearted folk, especially country people or people reared in the country is much more sweet and consoling if the pastor can sing what is tender and appropriate. There will be less need of lengthy remarks. Scripture reading, prayer, and singing, often cover all the conditions of a modest and Christian tribute to the Christian dead. Yes, and at the grave, sometimes, sing a hymn and many a heart will grow lighter of its insupportable burden.

In all great religious assemblies—"associations," "conventions," and the like—singing is a very essential part of the exercises as every one knows. The more singing preachers present, as a rule, the more enthusiastic the proceedings. Heaven itself is all the more charming to some of us, as we contemplate it, because it is a place of jubilant song, where there is sounded forth an oratorio of one hundred and forty-four thousand and thousands of thousands around the throne of God. Better prepare for heaven by learning to sing here and now. Sing here and now and you will find heaven on earth.—W. W. Landrum, D. D., in Missionary Magazine.

Though the trifler does not chronicle his own vain words and wasted hours, the chronicle themselves. They find their indelible place in that book of remembrance with which human hands cannot tamper, and from which no being save God can erase them. They are noted in the presence of God.—Rev. G. Hamilton.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 3, 1893.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

"What Baptists Believe," by the late J. L. Burrows, will be given to every new subscriber to the BIBLICAL RECORDER who will pay $2.00 in advance for a years' subscription. We will also give the book to every old subscriber who will pay his subscription to date and a year in advance.

Think of it! Your denominational paper, the subscription price of which is $2.00, one year, and a neatly bound book of over a hundred pages, containing a clear and fair expression of what Baptists believe and practice, all for the price of the paper.

Remember, this offer is to new and old subscribers alike.

THINK ON THESE THINGS.

There are practical difficulties occurring in the experience of almost any pastor that he at times longs to speak of, but for prudential reasons does not mention them in the presence of those who are the cause of them. We may mention here a few of them with the hope of doing our pastors some service, and if possible to lessen the frequency of their occurrence.

For instance, no little trouble often comes to the pastor, and no little trouble often afflicts the local church, from the failure of the members to respect the wishes, and to acknowledge the scriptural authority, of the pastor. This state of things, when it exists, results largely from the fact that brethren are fond of claiming that the pastor is the servant of the church, in accordance with Christ's words, "And let him that is chief among you be your servant," and from the further fact that they do not notice other Scriptures that do invest the pastor with an authority which is necessary for him to have in order to serve the church successfully. The President of the United States is the servant of the people, but he would present a pitiable spectacle to the world if he was not invested with sufficient authority to execute the laws that are intended for the good of the people. Each local church may be regarded as the law-making power under the direction of the Great Head of the church, and the pastor is to a great extent the executive of such church. How can he discharge his functions if he be shorn of his strength and his hands tied by the members refusing to submit to proper pastoral authority. For instance, a special collection may be needed for a special object; a motion is made and carried that a "committee of two" be appointed to attend to the matter. The pastor appoints the committee, consisting perhaps of a brother and sister. No objection is made, (and as a rule ought not to be made), but before the pastor leaves the church, or a few days after, he learns that the brother or sister appointed says "that he (or she) will not serve on that committee." This places the pastor in an awkward position, and before the matter is adjusted he has perhaps lost influence with his church, all the result of crankiness on the part of a brother, or some pettish whim on the part of a silly sister. If you respect your pastor, never put him in such an awkward attitude before his church for any reason but a good one; and if you have such reason, let it be known at once, so that some one else may be appointed in your place. Pastors, of course, are not to "lord it over God's heritage;" but let us remember that there are passages in God's word that do invest them with an authority, and an influence, that we must recognize, if we have proper respect for them and for him who sends them. Let brethren and sisters who are so fond of thinking of the pastor as the servant of the church, and of reading those passages that teach his duty to them in that line, think a little oftener of those that teach their duty to him, such as Hebrews 13: 17, "Obey them that have the rule over you, (or that are your leaders), and submit to them; for they watch for your souls as they that have to give account." When a pert miss, or cranky brother, defies church or pastoral authority, he or she should be taught the power of church discipline, if nothing else will do.

Again, much trouble comes to the pastor as the result of parents constantly and lightly criticising him in the presence of their children, and perhaps, younger members of the church. Your boy may be wayward, and you may really desire his salvation, but you unmercifully criticise your pastor at the dinner table, and to-morrow when he meets your boy on the street fails to talk to him about his soul he does not receive his advances kindly, and when he again goes to church he takes, as you have taught him, the "seat of the scornful," and worries the good man all through his sermon by joining the "giggling band," and by making fun of the man he and they ought to respect. Good people sometimes attempt to justify themselves in pursuing this course by saying they are in "favor of a change of pastors," and they suppose others know it. Well, this may be so; but as long as a proper majority sustain a pastor, and he as a conscientious servant of Christ thinks he is doing right by remaining in charge of the church, it is your duty to treat him with courtesy and respect. Any other course on your part shows that you have a poor conception of the pastoral relation, and quite a dim idea of what Christ meant when he taught us to do unto others as we would have them in similar circumstances to do unto us. It is an undoubted fact that any pastor with clear cut ideas, and with the courage to express them clearly, will generally, at the end of a few years, (sometimes at the end of one), have one or more in the congregation who may reach the conclusion that they "prefer another pastor," and if all of the "aggrieved ones" adopt the policy above indicated, then pastoral troubles, already numerous enough, would multiply, and pastoral changes become more frequent. How short-sighted even some good people are! You should love your pastor more for having the courage to tell you of your faults. What if he uses the rod sometimes! Give him time to heal the wounds that he makes. Your father used to use the rod upon you when you were a boy or girl. Did you think of getting a new father because he did it? You have as little reason at times to demand a new pastor, because the old one has laid on a few stripes where they were needed.

Again, no little trouble comes to the pastor on the score of maintaining discipline in the church he may be serving. There are those who verily believe that one chief function of the pastoral office is to maintain discipline among the membership. If there are hard cases in the church, especially if they have family influence, it is often the case that the members are holding back and expecting the pastor to reclaim them, or else arraign them before the church for trial. They expect the pastor to do what they are afraid to do, and yet expect him to hold his place in the hearts and affections of all of the church. Then, again, there are those who think that when a case is fairly before the church that the pastor should take an active part in the trial, and by all means espouse one side or the other.

Now the truth of it is, the pastor should never take an active part in arraigning or prosecuting disorderly members before the church. This is distinctly the work of the church, and not of the pastor; for if he should do so he would at once make enemies among the members, and his resignation, (forced or voluntary), would follow. Even when a pastor presides in a church trial, with an earnest desire to deal fairly with both sides, he is often blamed by the defeated party, or parties, for not espousing their cause and using his personal influence to defeat or reverse the action of the church. Poor preachers! They are at times in the condition of an eccentric old lady whom we knew in Virginia who lived at a nice home, which was her home and that of some of her relatives during her life-time, but which reverted to another set of relatives at her death. The old sister one day was heard saying, "Ah, me, I don't know what is to become of me. Some of my kin are praying for me to live, and others I suppose are praying for me to die; and between the two I am having a hard time of it." Reader, if you see anything funny in this, you can laugh at it as much as you please; but when you are done, ask yourself the question whether you have ever been the means of placing your pastor between two fires, out of which he has come with crippled influence over the membership of your church. You do your duty in cases of church discipline, and have the charity to believe that he has sense enough to know how to do his duty to all concerned. In cases of church discipline, it is the duty of the pastor to preside, see that all parties are dealt with fairly, explain Scripture that may bear on the case, state denominational usage when there is difference of opinion, &c. Beyond this no reasonable church member should ask the pastor to go.

REV CHAS. A. G. THOMAS, Greensboro, May 1st, 1893, writes: "We can't seat the people on Sunday nights. Am preaching a series on the Ten Commandments. The work goes forward. The outlook is bright. We are hopeful."

THE Baptists of Warrenton are contemplating building a new church, the Gazette states.

DR. LANDRUM IN RALEIGH.

The special meetings in the First Baptist church closed last Friday night. During the week beginning April 9th, nightly meetings for song, prayer and exhortation were held in the Sunday-school room. On the 17th, Dr. W. W. Landrum, pastor of the Second Baptist church, Richmond, Va., came to aid in the work. He remained twelve days, preaching twice a day. His preaching was earnest, able, simple and scriptural. It was "the old, old story," well told. Congregations were large and attentive. The special presence of the Holy Spirit was felt from the beginning of the meetings. At the present time it is hard to estimate results. Thirty or more have professed conversion. Since the meetings began seventeen have been baptized; six more have been received for baptism, and others are awaiting reception.

Dr. Landrum is a princely preacher as well as a sweet-spirited Christian. Nature, culture and grace have combined to prepare him for the Lord's work. His fine intellectual gifts, his wide range of thought, his excellent command of vigorous English, his ringing, magnetic and sympathetic voice, his lovely and Christly spirit, and his consecration to the Master's service, all contribute to his power over audiences. His methods are judicious. All extravagance and sensationalism are avoided. The pastor and membership of our First church, and the Christian people of Raleigh, are delighted with the work of Bro. Landrum. He came among us a stranger, but when he went away he left hundreds of friends. When he comes again he will receive a rousing welcome.

DEATH OF BRO. W. H. PACE.

It is with deep sorrow that we announce the death of Bro. W. H. Pace. He died at his residence in this city last Thursday morning at 12:55 o'clock after a long and painful illness. He was a native of Wake county, and was the youngest son of Solomon and Eliza Pace, both of whom died a few years ago. He was born July 14th, 1844, and therefore was forty-eight years, nine months and thirteen days old.

Bro. Pace was reared in a Christian home, surrounded by the best influences in a well-to-do, industrious and pleasant farmer neighborhood, and his manner of bringing up was shown in his sturdy manhood. He was converted and joined the church at Wake Cross Roads in 1858.

At the age of seventeen he enlisted in the Confederate army and was with Gen. Lee at the surrender at Appomattox in 1865. After the war he entered Wake Forest College and graduated with distinction from that institution in 1869. In 1871 he obtained license to practice law and commenced business in Raleigh, and from the first he commanded success at a bar noted for its ability.

Bro. Pace was a man of good judgment, great business ability, indomitable energy, and rare common sense. He made money rapidly, which he was at all times ready to devote to the furtherance of Christian work and general beneficence. To these he not only gave his money but his time also.

He was generally an attendant of the associations, conventions and other public gatherings of the Baptists. A few years ago he was President of our Baptist State Convention, for a long time was President of the Board of Missions, and at the time of his death was a trustee and the attorney of Wake Forest College, and filled other positions of confidence in our denomination. All these he filled with great efficiency and acceptability to his brethren and honor to himself. No layman among our Baptist people has been more prominent in church work in all its departments in this State than Bro. Pace has during the last twenty years, and his death will be much deplored in our Zion. All our enterprises have been helped and stimulated by his friendly counsel and financial aid.

Brother Pace never sought office, or cared especially for the applause of men, but he always manifested a lively interest in public matters and wielded a large influence in his county and State in behalf of the best men and measures.

We mourn with our brethren in the loss they have sustained in the death of this efficient worker with them in the furtherance of the Master's kingdom, and to his family we extend our sincere sympathy in their great loss.

Bro. Pace was an earnest Sunday-school worker, and for many years was a member of the First Baptist Sunday-school of Raleigh. For two years (1878–'79) he was its superintendent, which office he filled with satisfaction to the school. The school at its session on Sunday last appointed a committee to report resolutions.

We extract the following from a communicated sketch of our deceased brother to the Raleigh News and Observer of April 28th:

"He obtained his early education at 'common schools' and at Buffalo Academy. In the year 1861, at the age of seventeen, he left school and entered the Confederate army as a member of Company I, First North Carolina troops, infantry, and served there until failing health caused him to be detailed for lighter duty in the enrolling office at Raleigh as an assistant to Dr. Porter, the chief thereof. He continued in this office until the spring of 1865, when he voluntarily went back to service in his regiment, which was then stationed at Petersburg, Va. He surrendered at Appomattox April 9th, 1865, returned home, and in the fall of that year entered Wake Forest College, the first session of its re opening after the war. He was graduated from that institution in June, 1869, and for two years taught school in Wake and Johnston counties, at the same time pursuing the study of law, his preceptor being Richard Battle, Esq., of this city. * * * For several years, just after he began his work at the bar, he was associated with Mr. J. H. Mills in the editing and management of the BIBLICAL RECORDER.

In October, 1878, he married Miss Loula Heck, the eldest daughter of Col. J. M. Heck, who, with their two children, a son and daughter, survives him.

In 1889, he was appointed by Governor Fowle a director of the North Carolina Railroad, in which capacity he had served during the past four years.

Immediately upon his appointment as director, he began to advocate the building of a new Union depot in this city, and it was largely through his efforts that the present handsome depot was erected. * * *

He was prominent in all church work, punctual in his attendance upon its associations and conventions, and his earnest work for the denomination was appreciated by his brethren, who elected him President of the Baptist S ate Convention two successive years—1887 and 1888. For a number of years before his death he had been a member of the Board of Trustees of Wake Forest College, and was its legal adviser. He was devoted to all the interests of his Alma Mater, and it is his wise counsel and judicious investment of its endowment fund that much of the present prosperity of the College is due. In no department of the denominational work will his loss be more keenly felt than that in connection with Wake Forest College."

The funeral took place on Friday afternoon last from the First Baptist church of this city, of which the deceased was a member. The exercises were conducted by Rev. Dr. T. H. Pritchard of Charlotte, aided by Rev. Drs. T. E. Skinner, C. Durham, W.W. Landrum and J. W. Carter. The members of the Raleigh bar attended in a body. A large concourse of citizens generally were present at the church, and a long retinue of carriages followed the remains to Oakwood cemetery, where all that was mortal of William Hartwell Pace was committed to the ground to await the resurrection.

WHAT JUDGE DILLARD SAYS OF THE KEELEY INSTITUTE AT GREENSBORO.

About a year ago a communication appeared in the RECORDER commending the Keeley treatment to those who had contracted the habit of using intoxicating liquor to excess. We thought then that this treatment would, if faithfully and honestly taken, prove a great blessing to many who had been, as it were, slaves to the habit of strong drink. Our own observation, together with the testimony of many who themselves have been freed from the shackles of drunkenness, have furnished abundant proof that we had not been mistaken in the merits of the treatment. The Keeley treatment we consider a triumph in the science of medicine, which has resulted at once in contributing to the relief of human suffering. The Institute is prospering under its present management. Capt. W. H. Osborne, the president, is a gentleman of high standing, whose fine business ability is known largely throughout the State. More than a thousand patients have been treated at the Institutes at Greensboro and Rocky Mount, and it is claimed that more than ninety per cent. of these have been cured of the whiskey and opium habit.

We take pleasure in publishing an interview which Col. J. R. Webster of Reidsville held with Judge Dillard of Greensboro, and published in the Richmond Times:—

Hon. John A. Dillard of Greensboro, N. C., is one of the most distinguished men in North Carolina. For a number of years he was one of the Justices of the Supreme Court, and resigned that position to resume his practice. He lives in Greensboro, almost in the shadow of the Keeley Institute, and knows from observation and his own knowledge all about the Keeley cure and the Institute located at that place.

Recently, Col. John R. Webster, editor of Webster's Weekly, a newspaper published at Reidsville, N. C., interviewed Judge Dillard about this matter, and below is given the interview as taken from that paper:

Q. Do you live in Greensboro?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is there a Keeley Institute there?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is it liberally patronized?
A. It has been very liberally patronized. The patronage fell off some about the time of the election, but it is increasing again.
Q. Have you seen much of the patients at the Institute?
A. I have. I may say a great deal.
Q. What do you think of the treatment?
A. Scientifically I know nothing about it, but from what I see and hear I feel assured that it takes away the appetite for liquor—acquired or inherited—and thus puts it in the power of a party to lead a sober life if he will, but with liability and power to cultivate a taste for it again and relapse into his former habits. If a man has any pride of race or ancestry there is no reason why he should not live sober the balance of his life.
Q. Would you advise your friends to patronize the Institute?
A. I would most assuredly. Anyone makes a most serious mistake to let any sense of false pride keep them away. In this estimate I include the users of both liquor and opium.
Q. What is the character and social standing of the majority of the patrons of the Institute?
A. Generally they are men well-raised and qualified to grace any social circle—in all other respects than by reason of their unfortunate habits.
Q. What percentage of its graduates, in your opinion, go back to their old habits?
A. I am unable to speak with any degree of certainty, but my observation and information would lead me to say that ninety per cent. of its graduates remain sober.
Q. Do you not think the churches and every one interested in real temperance ought to try to extend its patronage?
A. I do most assuredly, since in my opinion liquor is the greatest enemy of mankind.
Q. Is the Institute in safe hands?
A. I think so. Its president, Captain Osborne, strikes me as being a gentleman of real character and refinement. I should say that Dr. Durham, the physician in charge, is fully the equal of the occasion, and, so far as I know, meets all the requirements of the Institute.
Q. What do you think of its management, etc.?
A. So far as I know or have heard, it is clean and first class in every respect, and its reputation has never been touched by the breath of scandal. The various ministers of the town visit it and hold services, as I have been informed, by them.

The statements made by Judge Dillard confirm what we have said of the Institute many times. It is doing a grand work, and its patronage is growing. From what we have seen of it by means of visits to the Institute at Greensboro and by parties who have taken the treatment, we are convinced that the Keeley cure is a cure indeed, and that all good people ought to seek to induce those who have been so unfortunate as to acquire the habit of excessive drinking, or the use of opium, or other stimulants, to avail themselves of the cure which this Institute affords.

....The friends of Rev. Dr. F. H. Ivey, formerly pastor of the Baptist church, will be grieved to hear that he has had a stroke of paralysis and is in a critical condition; he is pastor of a church in Augusta, Ga., where he resides now.—Goldsboro cor. Messenger.

....Rev. J. A. Speight, editor of the Asheville Baptist, is suffering from overwork, and, as the doctors report, from heart trouble. He has dismissed his printers for the time being, and will not publish his paper next week. We hope that he will be fully himself again soon.

....Bro. J. T. Alderman closed a successful session of his school at Reidsville last week, and will spend a portion of his vacation at Wake Forest College for the purpose of getting up some facts in the history of the Baptists in North Carolina. Bro. Alderman has already done some valuable work on this line.

....About a month ago the trains were well represented by many well-dressed gentlemen with checks punched for Washington sticking under the bands of the latest style derby hat. They were bright and hopeful of the future. Once in a while I see one of these same men coming back; but how changed! The gloss off his hat, the new well-gone off the nice suit of a month ago, and a countenance that tells plainly that he is not exercising a very vigorous faith in the doctrine of a hereafter.—J. C. C.

....Rev. J. H. Hildreth of Bayboro, N. C., writes under date of April 27th: "I noticed in the BIBLICAL RECORDER that the manuscripts of the two sermons got mixed up. You published the text and introduction of one, and published the other. Please correct mistake."

....Rev. S. F. Conrad recently conducted a series of meetings at Ruffin. There were a number of conversions, and six additions to the church. Bro. C. writes: "The outlook on my field is very good at present. I have held two meetings this spring, and will hold two this fall."

....Rev. Mark Bennett, a few years before his death, published in The Baptist Preacher a sketch of the life and labors of Rev. Wm. P. Biddle. Can any one furnish us with that number of the Preacher, or give us information about said article? Please do so.—C. Durham.

....We are glad to note that Bro. Josiah Crudup, who graduated at Wake Forest a few years ago, and obtained license a year ago to practice law, is doing well in his profession at High Point. He is also a zealous worker in the church and Sunday-school, and promises to be of great service to the Liberty Association.

....Perhaps we have never had in the history of our church a more gracious season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. The good work goes on. Many have professed faith in Christ already, and perhaps fifty or more are now enquiring the way. Eleven have joined the church up to date.—C. W. Blanchard.

....I find a number of boys who hope to come to Wake Forest College in the fall. Let every friend of the College see to it that he does something to add to the number which shall be there next September. There are plenty of boys who ought to go, and who can go, to make the number three hundred next session.—J. C. C.

....The Baptist church of Wadesboro is having a chapel erected at the cotton mill in that place. Dr. E. A. Covington donated the lot on which the building will stand. It is expected that religious services will be held in the chapel every Sunday. A Sunday-school was recently organized at the mill, and there are now eighty pupils.

....Bro. J. B. Richardson has a nice church under way at Mathews Station, on the C. C. R. R. Already about $2,000 have been expended on the building, which is a very fine showing for the strength of the membership. Bro. Richardson never fails to develop his people, and it is only once in a while we have a man of his ability as a preacher, and his attainments in scholarship, who is content to spend his life among weak and comparatively obscure churches.

....If some good field of labor should ask for a first rate man for pastor, we would point to Bro. J. B. Boone of North Carolina. Bro. Boone has been for some time doing some special and most difficult work for the educational interests of the North Carolina brethren, but he is now free. He is a man of the highest worth in our judgment, and with no wish to despoil our sister across the line, we would not mind pulling him over on to the sacred soil. His address at present is Severn, N. C.—Baptist (Baltimore).

....Rev. C. C. Newton, returned missionary, lectured in the Baptist church Monday night on "Africa and its Needs." A large audience was present and heard with pleasure the many interesting things he told about "The Dark Continent." Mr. Newton went from this State to Lagos four years ago. Last winter he was forced to come home for the sake of his family's health. He hopes to return again. Mr. Newton believes that the leaven of civilization and Christianity will take hold of Central Africa and from there spread to the circumference.—Gastonia Gazette.

....A few years ago Rev. Thos. Carrick became the pastor of the Baptist church at Lexington, N. C. There were then seventy-five members in the church. Then there was hardly to be found a clerk in any of the stores who was a member of the Baptist church. Now some of the best stores in the town belong to members of Bro. Carrick's church; and there is hardly a store in which some of his members are not at work. Instead of seventy-five members, there are at present one hundred and seventy-five, and the church is constantly having additions. This came to pass because the pastor of this church was content to quietly and faithfully do his work.

....Judson College commencement will take place on the 7, 8, 9 and 10 of May instead of the 14, 15, 16 and 18 of May as before announced. This change is made in order to give those who are interested an opportunity to attend the Southern Baptist Convention. On Sunday the 7th, Rev. J. Q. Adams will preach the sermon, and on Wednesday the 10th, Rev. J. L. White delivers the address. All persons interested will make a note of this change.——The commencement at Mars Hill College will occur on the 3 and 4 of May, and large crowds are expected. Rev. J. Q. Adams of this city preaches the sermon, and Hon. Moody of Waynesville delivers the address. We never heard Mr. Moody, but the people will be pleased with Bro. Adams both as a man and preacher.—Asheville Baptist.

The World's Fair at Chicago, Ill., was formally opened by President Cleveland on Monday, May 1, 1893. An immense throng was present, and a large number of representatives of foreign nations were on the grand stand from which the President delivered his address. The crowd was suffocating by reason of the pressure, and many women fainted.

Let the Brethren Judge.

RALEIGH, N. C., April 14th, 1893.

Dear Bro. Mills:—In common fairness to the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools and its work, I ask that you will give the Board, per me, the name of the author of the article in editorial column of C. and C., April 14th, and signed "A Friend to the Missionaries," and also, the names of the three prominent members of the Board to whom you applied in Raleigh for information, and who said they did not attend its meetings because they did not approve its management.

I think you have always held to the position about Orphanage matters, that when brethren make such charges, their names ought to be given, and in this, so far as I know, we have ever agreed. Now, in justice to the mission work, and in behalf of the Board, I ask you to give us these names, and hope you will not deny us this information. Hoping to hear from you soon, I am as ever very truly yours,

C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec.

On April 18th, a postal card was received as follows:

Have advised "A Friend of Missions" to send you his name. The other names you can easily get by inquiring among those who have been continuously absent from the meetings of the Board. They will not deny their statements. Hope you will not persecute "A Friend," &c: He fears that.

J. H. MILLS.

RALEIGH, N. C., April 18th, 1893.

Dear Bro. Mills:—On April 14th, 1893, I wrote you asking for the name of the brother whose letter to you about the Board of Missions and Sunday-schools, making serious charges and reflections and signed "A Friend to the Missionaries," and which you made a part of your leading editorial in Charity and Children of April 14th, 1893. In the same letter I asked for the names of the "three prominent members of the Board" to whom you say you applied for information and all of whom you say, "said they did not attend the meetings because they did not approve the management."

I enclosed a stamped envelope addressed to me for your reply, and this a. m. I am in receipt of your postal card of April 17th, 1893. In this, as I understand it, you refuse to give the names requested. This is not satisfactory. I again, therefore, in behalf of the Board and its work, ask for the names asked for before.

If I, as Corresponding Secretary, published for our Board (as I once did) a Mission journal, and had gone beyond the scope of my work and design of the Board in the establishment of said Mission journal, in the use of its columns, even editorial column, to publish such an editorial about our Orphanage, its work, its Board of Trustees, and you as the General Manager, I think it would have been your right and your duty to have asked me for the names of the brethren making such statements. I certainly could not, under such circumstances, refuse you the information. Can you now refuse me? Again, I ask, in behalf of the Board and its work, the names.

Hoping to hear from you very soon, I am, as ever, very truly yours,

C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec.

ORPHANAGE, Thomasville, Ap. 19, 1893.

Dr. Durham:—You call on me to deal fairly with you in giving names. I think you have, or will soon have, the names wanted.

Let me tell you how you are treating me.

1. You fire your whole gun at me instead of "A Friend of the Missionaries," who said some things which I did not approve.

2. You display a "correction" of what had not occurred to me until I saw your "correction." I did not say, nor mean, that the Treasurer had "uninvested funds." I had no information on the subject. My meaning would have been plainer if the words "in the banks" had been inserted. But I was suffering severely from a sty, writing was painful, and I suppose I tried to use the fewest possible words.

3. You display your "correction" (jumping with evident delight on a misapprehension) in two papers, to reply to an article in one.

4. Are you going to have my "remarks" copied into the other paper? Fairness requires it.

5. You speak of my figures as "more badly mixed." I cannot understand this, as I am not aware that I made any figures.

6. "A farmer came to a neighboring lawyer," &c. With best wishes,

J. H. MILLS.

RALEIGH, N. C., April 20th, 1893.
9:30 A. M.

Dear Bro. Mills:—Your letter of April 19th just received this morning at 9 o'clock. As I understand it, you again refuse to give the names asked for in former letters. Am I correct? I haven't the names, and have no knowledge of them in any way whatever.

I now again, for the third time, in behalf of the Board and its work, ask you to give at once the names asked for in my two former letters. Hoping you will now give these names, and that I will hear from you very soon, I am very truly yours,

C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec.

RALEIGH, N. C., April 24th, 1893.

Dear Bro. Mills:—The Cor. Sec. has written you three times asking, in behalf of our Board and its work, for the name of "A Friend of the Missionaries" and for the names of the three members of our Board in Raleigh who told you they did not attend its meetings because they did not approve the management, and thus far you have refused to give these names.

Now, as a matter of common right and fairness to the Board, and in the interest of State Missions, we, as the representatives of the Mission Board, ask you to give the names as requested by the Cor. Sec. before.

JOHN C. SCARBOROUGH,
Chairman Board of Missions.
C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec.

On April 26th, a postal card was received by Bro. J. C. Scarborough as follows:

Am waiting to see if Dr. D. will do me the justice to have my three remarks (in reply to his attack) inserted in BIBLICAL RECORDER. With best wishes,

J. H. MILLS.

We give below the "three remarks" taken from Charity and Children, April 21st:

1. We did not misunderstand Treasurer Briggs. He said "there is plenty of money in the banks ready to be lent when borrowers can make it perfectly safe." We so understood him, and so intended to be understood. But in our effort to be brief, we omitted the words "in the banks," which, it now seems were really needed to make the meaning plain. We had no information about "invested funds," and of course did not intend to allude to them. We try to follow the rule of the father who advised his son, "If you know nothing, say nothing."

2. We printed the article of "A Friend of the Missionaries," because justice seemed to require it. Many of the missionaries are known to be in urgent want of what is due them. They have earned their money. The denomination has money to lend. The Foreign Mission Board borrows money. The Home Mission Board does the same. The State Board ought to meet its engagements. These missionaries are the friends and helpers of the orphans. The organ of the Orphanage is bound in common gratitude to help them whenever it may have the opportunity. The writer of that article does not stand alone. He represents many others who have said the same that he has written. He ought not to be persecuted, but we advise him to send his name to the Secretary of the Board and to stand firmly on his platform till public opinion shall induce the Board to change some of its methods. The Board is not infallible. Mistakes are not impossible. When made, let them be considered and corrected. It is honorable, it is noble to correct a mistake and to repair an injury. Let us hush about consistency. If we have done wrong in the past, let us do right in the future. Let all boasting be excluded. Let not an unkind word be spoken or written. We have no spite to gratify, and do not intend to be provoked to anger. But we do say that faithful missionaries are entitled to their money, and it ought to be paid.

3 Dr. Durham thinks the discussion is out of our scope. So it is. We were reluctant to say a word on the subject*. But many of our friends were in distress, and said other papers were closed against them. So we tried to help them. Other papers sometimes depart from their usual limits when circumstances require it. One of the ablest articles ever written by the present editor of the BIBLICAL RECORDER was against the stock law. Nearly all the religious papers turn aside from their regular work on supreme occasions. But a representative man on each side has now been heard, and we dismiss the subject from our columns.

J. H. MILLS.

RALEIGH, N. C., April 29th, 1893.

Dear Bro. Mills:—Your postal to Brother Scarborough was, on my return to the city yesterday, handed to me, and I will gladly have the "three remarks" published in the RECORDER next week.

Will you now please send the names asked for before?

*In your "third remark" you say: "Many of our friends were in distress, and said other papers were closed against them." Please give us the names of the missionaries of our Board who said that to you, and the names of the papers thus closed against them.

Hoping to hear from you at once, I am very truly yours,

C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec.

Respectfully,
JOHN C. SCARBOROUGH,
Ch'm Board of Missions

Commencement.

Commencement, like Christmas, comes but once a year, and, like Christmas, again, it is a very interesting occasion, especially to a large number of young people. There is something unique about a Wake Forest Commencement. It is a great popular gathering, and long may it continue to be so. Hundreds of "the owners of the College" come to inspect their property. People who have never been to any College as students feel at home in the halls and under the oaks. Co-education comes mightily into fashion for a few days. The voice of the orator is heard in the land. Thoughtful men plan for the future of the College, and scores of alumni develop fresh enthusiasm for carrying out their wisely devised purposes.

And its only one month off. Just four weeks from the day on which this paper is published, Dr. Hiden of Richmond will speak and Mr. Dixon of Brooklyn will preach. The Alumni address will have been delivered the night before by Mr. Daniel. For reasons which seemed almost imperative to them, the Faculty have decided to hold the exercises one week earlier than usual. They will begin May 29th and close June 1st.

The prospect now is for an unusually large attendance and an unusually brilliant occasion. Those who have ever heard Mr. Daniel speak need not be reminded of the feast that awaits them. Mr. Dixon is considered by many to be more nearly Spurgeon's successor as a preacher than any living man. Mr. Hiden has much of the peculiar power that characterized his near kinsman, Johnson Barbour, whose name is, in Virginia, a synonym for eloquence. The Alumni Banquet is likely to be in all respects the best that has ever been given at the College. The Committee in charge can be trusted for the material part of it as well as for the programme. The latter is very appetizing. D. W. Herring, Spainhour, Skinner, Dixon, Carlyle, and others will reply to the several toasts.

I was very much touched by a letter which came last week from Miss Johnson of Bahia, Brazil. She was one of Dr. Royall's pupils in Texas. She had just heard of his death. She says:

"Only two months ago, I received a letter and a gift of books and a reading chart for my school, thereby proving the great interest he felt in the heathen women and children of a foreign land, and his care for his Father's work in this wicked city. How my heart is pained to know that he is no more. In my far away home on my mission field, his kind letter full of cheering comfort, of solid Christian advice, made me feel that I had a father friend in my own land, who would always be glad to aid me, in whom I could trust, to whom I could look for strength and encouragement. When he lived in Texas I was one of his pupils. With one exception, the gifted pulpit orator, and brilliant scholar, Dr. W. C. Crane, Dr. Royall, in all those six years in my State, stood alone as a teacher, a preacher, as a scholar, as a true Christian gentleman, gentle indeed, pure in spirit. In nobility, in generosity, earth holds no greater. Many women and men all over the South call him blessed. His memory will ever be enshrined in their hearts."

I venture to send to the RECORDER a copy of a very celebrated sermon by the late Dr. Francis Wayland on "The Apostolic Ministry." It was delivered forty years ago. It expresses the views which I have held for years on the subject. I hope that it can be reproduced in the RECORDER, believing, as I do, that it will be a valuable contribution to a discussion which has recently interested some of the brethren. I hope that it is not necessary for me to say that I do not believe that all Christians are called to be Bishops and Elders, and that I believe that those who are, are moved thereto by the Holy Spirit.

CHARLES E. TAYLOR.

To the Pastors and Churches of Mt. Zion Association, Once More.

Dear Brethren:—I congratulate you upon the fact that our Association will raise its $1,000 for Centennial Fund, and perhaps go beyond it. Twenty churches have reported $888. Surely the eighteen churches yet to be heard from will raise the balance, $112, and more.

Will not the churches which have not reported the amount of their collections to me, do so on a postal card by next mail, that I may close our report to the State Committee? How gratifying is the thought that if the State shall fall short of its quota, it will not be our fault. Hurrah for the old Mt. Zion forever! J. L. CARROLL.

Chapel Hill, May 1, 1893.

Meeting in Ashboro—Liberty Union.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Our meeting at Ashboro was not a failure. The good seed was sown. Bro. Stringfield certainly did good preaching and the people enjoyed it. As a strong evidence of the good that was done, several prominent citizens asked me when he was coming back. They want to hear him again. My wife was sick, and I was not present at the close of the meeting.

I think if we had a house, there would be a good chance for Baptists in Ashboro.

My wife is better.

The Liberty Union meets here to-morrow. We are looking for fifteen or twenty delegates.

The meeting will continue next week. Bro. Conrad will assist me.

All quiet along the lines. I baptized eight here last Thursday night in the presence of a packed house. G. M. WEBB.

Randleman, April 27, 1893.

Chowan Association—Change of Hour.

On account of the arrival of the steamers from Edenton to Plymouth and for the convenience of those coming that way, the hour for convening the next session of the Chowan Association will be Tuesday after the third Sunday in May (23d) at 4 o'clock p. m. instead of 11 o'clock a. m. (same day).

JOE A. SPRUILL, Mod.
T. J. RIDDICK, Clerk.

Broughton C. E. Taylor, F. H. Martin, W. T. Love, M. D. Phillips, T. H. Pritchard, C. C. Newton, J. E. White, Thomas Hume, D. W. Thomasson, G. L. Finch, M. M. Landrum, H. A. Brown, J. F. McDuffie, H. C. Dockery, C. A. Jenkens.

ASSOCIATIONAL DELEGATES.

These should take a copy of their minutes with them to the Convention:

W. F. Watson, W. J. Fulford, R. K. Proctor, Jr., J. J. Hall, W. E. White, D. C. Jarvis, I. W. Thomas, F. W. Wooten, E. A. Poe, J. A. Rector, N. B. Cobb, H. D. Harrell, T. D. Lattimore, J. M. Bennett, J. L. Carroll, S. F. Conrad, W. C. Douglass, T. Bright, J. M. Long, M. P. Matheny, R. F. Thomas, J. H. Edwards, J. S. Hare [illegible].

The following named Associations, so far as we can learn from the minutes, appointed no delegates:

Anson, Ashe and Alleghany, Beulah, Brushy Mountain, Cedar Creek, Chowan, Eastern, Flat River, Little River, Mecklenburg and Cabarrus, Montgomery, Richmond, South Yadkin, Stanly, Stony Fork, Tar River, Three Forks, Union, Yadkin.

In order that all delegates and their friends en route to Nashville may travel in a body, arrangements have been made with the Richmond & Danville railroad to run special Pullman sleeper from Raleigh or Greensboro to Atlanta, for their accommodation. We will only be en route one night and have no change of cars between Atlanta and Nashville, affording us daylight ride between later points.

Rates given by all Southern lines is fare and one-third for the round trip.

Tickets will be sold May 9th, 10th and 11th, good to return until May 25th.

Leave Raleigh, May 9, via R. & D. R. R., 4:40 p. m.; leave Greensboro, May 9, via R. & D. R. R., 8:10 p. m.; leave Salisbury, May 9, via R. & D. R. R., 9:55 p. m.; leave Charlotte, May 9, via R. & D. R. R., 11:20 p. m.; arrive Atlanta, May 10, via R. & D. R. R., 8:15 a. m.; arrive Chattanooga, May 10, via W. & A. R. R., 1:30 p. m.; arrive Nashville, May 10, via N. C. & St. L. R. R., 7:30 p. m.

All who expect to attend the Convention will please advise me at once, stating at what point they will join the delegation and what sleeping car space is desired, in order that same may be reserved.

For information as to round trip rates from any point, schedule, etc., not named above, write Mr. Charles L. Hopkins, Traveling Passenger Agent Richmond & Danville Railroad, Charlotte, N. C.

Return tickets to Chicago, to such delegates, from Nashville, $20. Should there be ten or more, all on same ticket, the rates will be about $18.75 each.

The round-trip rate to Nashville, on account of Southern Baptist Convention, will be $23 35 from Goldsboro, Selma, Raleigh, Cary, Durham, Henderson, Oxford, Fayetteville and Wilmington; $21.00 from Greensboro, Winston, Reidsville and Danville; $20.90 from Salisbury and Charlotte; $16.45 from Asheville; $17.85 from Hendersonville.

C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec.

The train via Seaboard Air Line leaves Raleigh at 8.20 p. m., arriving at Rolesville next evening at 7:20. Through Pullman service, with only one change of cars.

Southern Baptist Convention.

The thirty-eighth session (48th year) of the Southern Baptist Convention will be held with the Baptist churches in the city of Nashville, Tenn., beginning Friday, May 12th, 1893, at 10 a. m. Preacher of annual sermon, Rev. W. E. Hatcher, D. D., of Virginia; alternate, Rev. J. Morgan Wells, D. D., of Texas.

LANSING BURROWS,
OLIVER F. GREGORY,
Secretaries S. B. C.

RAILROAD RATES.

I am advised by the L. & N. that a rate of one fare for the round trip is in effect to Nashville, account Southern Baptist Convention, from all points on that line; and also by the N. C. and St. L. that a rate of one fair is in effect from all points on their line west of Chattanooga, inclusive; south of Chattanooga and from other points not on the line of the L. & N. or N. C. & St. L. the rate is one and one-third fare to L. & N. or N. C. & St. L. junction points, plus one fare to Nashville.

A rate of one fare has been granted by all railroads in Texas.

All other lines, so far as heard from, grant a rate of a fare and one third, on the certificate plan. The Southern Passenger Association has not announced any special rates yet. As it will be too late to publish another card, delegates are requested to inquire at railroad station, and if special rates have not been made, to write me at once.

O. F. GREGORY,
Sec'y in charge Transportation.

In arranging for the coming session of the Southern Baptist Convention in this city, the committee desires to have as soon as possible the names of all persons knowing themselves to be delegates, either of the Convention or the Woman's Missionary Union or the Education Society. We wish in sending out this notice to call special attention to the following points:

1. We will make ample provision for entertaining only accredited delegates. This rule will be rigidly adhered to.

2. As we expect to furnish homes to all delegates, we will not be responsible for any bills made for entertainment at hotels.

3. All delegates who may prefer hotel accommodations at their own expense and will write to the committee to that effect, will have the very best possible arrangements made for them.

4. The committee will be glad to furnish any information or to make any arrangements at boarding houses and hotels for all visitors who may request it.

5. A special committee on reception will meet all trains and furnish information and assistance to both delegates and visitors.

The careful observance of these rules will greatly facilitate the work of the committee and add to the comfort of the great crowd which we are expecting.

A Few Thoughts.

BY SCATTERHEAD.

"They rest not day and night." Rev. 4, 8.

A heap of folks in this world don't have much appetite for work, and they seem right anxious to get to heaven, as it has been told them no work is carried on in that country, but everybody is having a powerful nice time resting under the "shade of the trees." If a fellow's main motive for getting to heaven is just to have a good easy time of it, and to get rid of work, I am thinking that he is fixing mighty fast for a powerful long and hard job of work in the regions where the pleasant breezes never reach. Ask that old veteran of the cross why he is so anxious to get to heaven and his reply will be, "that I may be entirely freed from sin, be beyond the power of temptation, and so be enabled to glorify my God to divine perfection." Heaven is mighty close to such an one, in whose heart the moving principle is love, and his chief object God's glory. "They rest not day and night." This sounds somewhat strangely, when we read, "There remaineth a rest to the people of God." Well, in heaven in that glorified state the inhabitants never get exhausted, therefore they need no sleep; they know not weariness, and need no rest, so there is no suspension of work up there, and no fellows lying around unemployed. Heaven is one of the busiest places in God's universe. I trust none of the believers will get any distaste against the place on account of hearing that there is no end to work in that blessed place. There will be an eternity of rest too—rest from sin and its fruits. The saints will be employed, as happiness cannot come to the idle. The happy christian here is the one busy at work for the Lord. In heaven the saints will never cease work for God. No sin there to hinder, temptations can't creep in to exert their power, but the motive principles of the heart and the ruling passion of the soul is love, a love so strong that "all the energies are enlisted, and drinks up the very being of its possessor." The highest and only motive of the saints will be God's glory. Occupations in heaven there will be, an eternity of work for God, and the kind for which each saint is adapted. Just a little of the employment of the King's servants is revealed to us. The occupations of the grand and glorious creatures we are to be could not be understood clothed in our present form. A heaven which we could now conceive would not be the heaven worthy of the creation of our blessed God. "The saints shall serve the Lamb and see his face," and the saints will be like him, and we know the service to be rendered will be prompted by the same motives that actuated the son of God while here. Yes, heaven will be a happy continuation of love and kindness. Christ will be the grand and glorious centre of attraction, and the redeemed will be completely absorbed in him, but being transplanted to that blessed place they will not lose their identity, but self will be forgotten, and the eternal joys of heaven will be the complete and full self-denial of each inhabitant of that glorious country. Our joy here comes in proportion as we practice self-denial, because by this means we get nearer our blessed Saviour and grow more like him. Heaven is not a place of indolence. Heaven will be a state of endless progression, mounting higher and higher, and new discoveries made as we go up, and new revelations come from God's inexhaustible fountain of wisdom.

"Then let us midst pleasure and woe,
Still for that sphere our spirits prepare;
And shortly we also shall know
And feel what it is to be there."

From Rockingham, N. C.

Dear Recorder:—The sickness and death of Bro. A. W. Jones, the oldest member of our church, prevented me from giving a report of our meeting, as I promised to do. Bro. Jones was one of the most earnest, faithful Christian workers I ever knew. He attended upon every service of his church unless providentially hindered. We greatly missed him during our last meeting. A few days after the close of the meeting God took him. The high regard in which he was held was shown by the fact that at the funeral service the church was packed to its utmost capacity, and numbers were turned from the door for want of room.

Our meeting was a gracious one. Not so many conversions as we had hoped, but the Christian people have been greatly benefited. The pastors of the other churches, on the last night of the meeting, testified that they and their people had been greatly benefited, and that the meeting was a blessing to the whole town.

Bro. Wildman preached from Monday till Friday the first week, and after his departure the meeting continued for ten days.

Bro. Wildman's short stay among us was greatly enjoyed. He was at one time pastor of this church and is dearly beloved by all the people. The simple, earnest, tender way in which he told the "old, old story," completely captured all who heard him.

It may not be immodest to say that one result of our meeting is, that the tie between pastor and people, which has been strengthening with the years, is stronger to-day than ever before.

I baptized three promising young men last night. Others, who were prevented by sickness, will follow soon. Still others who had been excluded from other Baptist churches will be restored and will unite with us. Some have joined the Presbyterian church, and so the work goes on. We cannot thank God as we should for his blessings upon us as a church during the last few years. To his Great Name be all the glory.

I go to Whiteville to day to aid Bro. Smith in a meeting.

From Plymouth—One Thing, then Another.

Dear Recorder:—As has already been announced, the next session of the

is to be held here. Already plans for entertaining it are formed, and we are confidently expecting to give the brethren a hearty welcome to such as we have. To be sure, we may not expect to dispense such royal entertainment as is sometimes provided, but we do hope to compromise within the range of a happy mien, and so meet the real wants of the occasion. Come, brethren, for we sadly need the inspiration of your presence, and may the Spirit of the Lord come with you.

A WORD ABOUT WASHINGTON.

It may seem a needless gratuity, but I feel an abiding interest in our cause there, and so am willing to incur the risk of censure at the hands of such as may be indifferent. The fact that this field has been so much neglected in the past is a mystery to many not of us; and that golden opportunities for occupying and developing it have past unimproved, may lay grave responsibilities at some one's door. However, God only knows about that, so we may well afford to commit it to him for adjustment, and ourselves to the new situation. The better day seems to have come. Brother McLeod is on the field and speaks for himself, and having given notice of a "call to the building boom," let it not be said that the work fails from lack of support. I do not know what new resources have been laid tribute to the cause there, but upon general principles am persuaded that if a house at all commensurate with the present need is built, it must be largely provided for from without. Why not? Upon the same principle that we build the Lord a house in Cuba, Mexico, or even China, we should build one also in Washington. And now, begging Bro. McLeod's pardon for invading his territory, I turn to another matter. I am simply amazed at the so conspicuously manifest in many quarters. To my mind we are not altogether free from this infection. It seems a great pity that grave interests should be sacrificed to greed for a seeming success. Energy well applied and "zeal according to knowledge" are admirable adjuncts to real success; but a reckless rush that knows no law, a zeal that conforms to no reason, can but be subversive of every principle that underlies permanent achievement. This is as true in spiritual as in temporal things. No more can we by wrong methods attain to normal, legitimate results, than that we may "do evil that good may come of it." Paul's injunction to Titus respecting young men might be given a broader application now—older, as well as young, men need to be "sober-minded."

Glorious Meeting in Goldsboro.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—We have just closed one of the most gracious and blessed meetings that it has ever been my privilege to enjoy. Rev. C. A. Jenkens of Oxford was with us and preached for nearly two weeks with great power and tenderness, directly to the church. The aim of the meeting was to arouse Christians to a more earnest and consecrated life, and this effort has been crowned with glorious success. Very many members who never took any part in the public service before, have done so with joy to their own hearts and edification to others.

Quite a number have undertaken to establish a family altar in their homes, and there has been a general movement towards greater faithfulness in the performance of all religious duties.

The pastor and many of the members felt the need of such a meeting, and in the providence of God were directed to Bro. Jenkens, who had felt and been enabled to meet such a need upon his own field.

The blessing which attended his efforts at home followed him here. Every sermon was addressed to the church, and a responsive chord was touched, as was proven by the large and increasing attendance of Christian people to the close. At the same time the hearts of the unconverted have been touched, though so few direct appeals have been made to them; several have been joyfully converted, and others are enquiring the way of life. The general evangelistic movements which have swept over the town, had impressed with varying results almost all the impressible elements of the community. A meeting conducted in the ordinary way making appeals to sinners over the heads of a cold and unawakened membership, would have inevitably resulted in failure. But the Lord had reserved better things for us, and the church is now ready to go forward in its heaven-given work of reaching the lost.

I should advise other pastors who realize a similar need, to secure Bro. Jenkens, if possible, to aid them in such work. I should be glad to see from him in the RECORDER some statement of his convictions as to the best plan of conducting special meetings in the churches.

Rev. G. L. Finch of the Second church has been quite sick, but I am glad to report him up again and steadily improving in health. His work is opening up finely under his wise and energetic management.

It will be my privilege to baptize to-night one of the most promising young merchants of Goldsboro. There are evidences that the baptismal waters may be moved from time to time in the near future.

The Sin of Yesterday.

"It is past," we say, "the sin of yesterday. Nothing can undo it now. Let us put it out of our thoughts. Let us forget it, and leave it behind us, and be free from it forever."

Ah! but is it past, that sin of yesterday? Is it dead and to be forgotten? Alas! no. The impress of it is upon our souls, the tendency of it is in our lives. We can never do wrong and then cut ourselves off from the penalty and effect of wrong. That were a pernicious and delusive fallacy indeed. The sin of yesterday is not confined to yesterday; it is to day's sin and to-morrow's sin, and the sin of all the future until sin shall be no more. You cannot let fall a drop of nitric acid into one of those pure white water lilies which dot the surface of our New England ponds, and expect that, when the lily shall have closed for its night sleep, and shall wake again in the morning and unfold its waxen petals to the sun, that sad stain of the poison will have been washed away. Ah! how could it be? Sleep is only a hiding and forgetting, not a removing and obliterating. Yesterday's stain clings to the flower; yesterday's sin clings to the soul. If it were possible to sin and yet be quit of sin, what argument would there be for virtue, what basis for remorse? "The sin of yesterday," says Drummond, "as part of its penalty has the sin of to day. All follow us in silent retribution on our past and go with us to the grave."

Yet there is a consolation, a hope, even in view of the terrible persistence of sin. It lies in the resolve to sin no more. When to day shall have become yesterday and to-morrow to day, it is possible for us to look back and say: "By God's grace I have escaped the curse of my besetting sin." Let that be the one redeeming possibility of every wrong thought and act—that it impels us in the determination to sin no more. Most of us, probably, have still many yesterdays to account for in the record of our lives—yesterdays that are to morrows now, but will speedily be numbered among the days of the past. Let us resolve, while their history is still unwritten, to dedicate them to God and to Good. Then shall yesterday's sin indeed be "naught....silence, implying sound." For the soul shall have risen above it, as the freed bird rises above the net which once fettered its wings.—Zion's Herald.

"Artists," I say, not artisans. "The difference!" This: the artist is he who strives to perfect his work—the artisan strives to get through it. The artist would fain finish, too; but with him is to "finish the work God has given me to do!" It is not how great a thing we do, but how well we do the thing we have to, that puts us in the noble brotherhood of artists. My Real is not my Ideal—is that my complaint? One thing at least is in my power: if I cannot realize my Ideal, I can at least idealize my Real. How? By trying to be perfect in it. If I am but a raindrop in a shower, I will be at least a perfect drop; if but a leaf in a whole June, I will be at least a perfect leaf. This poor "one thing I do"—instead of repining at its lowness or its hardness, I will make it glorious by my supreme loyalty to its demand.—W. C. Gannett.

The Visit of the Pastor.

Every faithful pastor makes his calls as frequently as his other duties will permit, and as the best interests of each parishioner, in his judgment, require, and it is very disheartening to be greeted on entering any door with the words, "What a stranger; we were beginning to think we should not see you again." How much better to say, "We are very glad to see you, for we were longing for the time when you would have an opportunity of calling." Such a welcome opens the heart's door for any gospel message the pastor may see fit to utter.—Pulpit Treasury.

A Forward Look.

BY REV. J. B. GAMBRELL, D. D.

[The following admirable article from the facile pen of Dr. Gambrell came too late for our April number, but we are glad to give it to our readers now, and beg that they will give it their careful perusal and serious consideration.—Editor Home Field.]

Signs multiply that the South is entering upon an era of vast expansion. From being almost an entirely agricultural people, we are about to become far more—a commercial and manufacturing people. The progress already made in many lines of manufacturing and the success over all competition settles it in the minds of thinking people everywhere that the South is to fulfil the remarkable prophecy of Wendell Phillips, just before his death, given out about in these words: "The South is to become the greatest empire of manufacturing, of wealth, of religion and culture the sun ever shone upon." The dawn of the bright day foretold is now upon us. But it is only the dawn; the full day is to come on with time. The dormant resources of the South will not remain dormant. From the northern limit of Virginia all down the great mountain ranges to their southern extremities, furnaces will blaze and factories send up their smoke to heaven.

It is conceded that more and more the cotton crop will be manufactured here by the fields where it grows. This one fact will change the commerce of the continent. With inestimable supplies of coal, iron, lime, timber of nearly every variety, with the greatest rivers in the world, the finest climate and the richest soil, the South will become the seat of untold wealth at no distant day. People now living will see a greater population in these Southern States than now inhabit the whole of the American Union.

In looking forward there is one city which must fill the first place on the whole Southern field. That city is, of course, New Orleans. It is not now the largest Southern city, but it will be. For a long time controlled by European ideas, and dominated by the criminal classes, it has but recently shown signs of a new life. With no sewerage, it can easily have and will soon have the most complete system of sewerage known. With 20,000 miles of navigable waterway emptying into the Gulf near by, New Orleans has the finest situation of any city on the continent. The completion of the Nicaragua canal will put the city on the great highway of international and national commerce with all the Pacific slope, Japan, China, etc. A scheme will soon be completed by which the waters of the great Northern lakes will flow up Chicago river, through a canal into the Illinois river and down the Mississippi river by New Orleans. This will turn the commerce of the lakes into New Orleans and thus still further enrich that great city.

The negroes will gradually scatter over the entire Union, and many of them migrate to Mexico. Multitudes of people speaking strange tongues will flow into this Southland. At first the Northern man with American ideas will come, but he will be followed by men from every nation under heaven. To prepare for, meet and christianize these millions is the work of the Home Board. Along the mountain fastnesses of the Virginias, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Arkansas, Alabama, and the great coming cities of the South, the battles are to be fought within a generation which will decide the spiritual destiny of this country one thousand years, as human affairs run. Nor is this the whole of it. The great numbers and strength of the Baptists of the South, through our Home Board, must be turned on the millions of lost souls in the North who are overbearing our Northern brethren. This is a defensive measure, since these people are to greatly affect our common country.

There never was a time when we needed broader, deeper, more far-reaching plans for our Home Board than now.

Six points, out of many, where Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are better than any other pills:

1. They're the smallest, and easiest to take—little sugar-coated granules that every child takes readily.
2. They're perfectly easy in their action—no griping, no disturbance.
3. Their effects lasts. There's no reaction afterward. They regulate or cleanse the system, according to size of dose.
4. They're the cheapest, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for the good you get.
5. Put up in glass—are always fresh.
6. They cure constipation, indigestion, bilious attacks, sick or bilious headaches, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels.

Train the Girls' Hands.

It is highly important, in educating a girl to be an efficient, self-reliant woman, that her hand should be trained to be useful. Of course the details of her education should be arranged with regard to the social position which she will probably eventually occupy. In ordinary cases the hand should be as carefully trained as the brain; for, to fulfil the ordinary duties which fall to the lot of average women, a useful hand is absolutely necessary. Girls who have the advantage of studying at our female colleges and high schools, do not, as a rule, belong to the wealthy and aristocratic circles, in which every domestic duty is performed by servants. The generality of such girls will not, when they are married, have a staff of servants and a housekeeper to look after them; they will have to be their own housekeepers, for the most part, with probably only one or two servants under them. In such a household as this the wife must assist if all is to go well, and her head and hands must be the chart and helm of the domestic ship.—New York Ledger.

To the Preachers of the Raleigh Association.

Brethren:—The time for our Centennial work is very short, and probably it is not possible to make a personal canvass of the churches. But the opportunity of making an offering must not go unimproved. We have decided, therefore, to ask each preacher in the Raleigh Association to bring this matter up at once, and to take a collection in each church he serves. Do not worry yourself nor your churches about the several different objects to which it can be appropriated. Take it for "the Centennial of Missions." Let it be the offering of each church towards celebrating the great Centennial year. Do not delegate it to the sisters, nor to the Sunday-schools (unless between your appointments they can see and solicit something from every member). But the time is so short that unless something is done at once, some churches will fail to have a part in this work.

Brethren, make the appeal yourselves. Give all necessary explanations. Let this offering be entirely separate from the regular work of the church. And by or before the third Sunday in April, see that each church is reported with its Centennial collection to Bro. J. D. Boushall, Treasurer, Raleigh, N. C. Now, brethren, to the work, and do not fail to have each church included.

A wonderful stomach corrector—Beecham's pills.

There is uncommon power in the commonplace. Nothing is more commonplace than the infinite blue of the sky, yet one never tires of turning to its quiet and abiding majesty from the vain pomps and changing spectacles of men. Truth, virtue, faithfulness—these are the sky of the soul, and all brilliant wickedness and all worldly wisdom pass away as vain shadows before the everlasting glory of these simple goodnesses. —*S. There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, Centennial Chapel Cards and Certificates.

For use of Sunday-schools the Centennial Chapel Cards and Certificates may be obtained free, in any number required, by sending to Maryland Baptist Mission Rooms, No. ten East Fayette Street, Baltimore. A circular to Sunday-schools from the Home and Foreign Boards, and the leaflet "Annie's Bricks," will be sent with each order. Should a larger distribution of the leaflet be desired, it can be purchased at two cents per copy.

Woman's Mission Societies or individuals in North Carolina may obtain the Chapel Cards and Certificates free by applying to the Central Committee, Miss Fannie E. Heck, Raleigh, N. C.

China's Home Missionaries.

Although the invasion of the Pacific coast of the United States by the so-called 'vicious Chinee' is a topic of discussion, it is not sufficiently known that the work of evangelizing them here has its re-echoes among their fellow-countrymen in the Celestial Empire. No emigrants to American shores return to their own land in larger numbers than the Chinese.

Of the 125,000 Chinamen in America, it is estimated that 11,000 more sailed for their own country than arrived during 1888 and 1889.

By some of these the truth will be magnified, and so they themselves become the nuclei of future schools and churches. Direct evidence confirms the benefit of ministering in the things of the gospel to the Chinese in the United States.

A promising mission at Hong Kong, which the American Board has established, is the visible out-growth of a mission for Chinamen in California, and more notable is the formation of a society by the Chinese in that State to operate in South China.

Through the sojourn of Chinese 'passengers' in the American republic, a holy harvest is being garnered. Who shall deny the presence of the divine hand directing the coming of Chinamen to America!

The Results Already Attained.

The efforts put forth for China's conversion have not been thrown away. Some men speak as if the money spent on China were wasted and the lives devoted to that land were uselessly sacrificed. This is not the case. The Chinese move slowly, it is true, but they do move. You cannot expect an elephant to hop about like a canary bird, nor a great conservative people to change their religion and their habits of thought in a day. Those who understand the Chinese character best, are the most hopeful for her conversion. Christ is getting to himself a people from among the millions of China. Much of the effort hitherto put forth in China has of necessity been preliminary work. Where old civilizations and organized systems of religious belief prevail, the primeval forest must be cleared away before the harvest can be garnered. God's providence and his grace go hand in hand. For centuries China's ports were closed, her people were isolated, their language was not understood. Now, many of the ports have been opened, the prejudices of her people are being removed, and their language has been mastered. We are beginning to see the results of the preaching of Christ. The yearly ratio of additions to the churches is increasing, as well as the yearly numbers. There are now about 35,000 communicants connected with the various Protestant bodies in China.

ANOTHER VIEW OF RESULTS.

At the great Missionary Conference at London in the summer of 1888, the Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, of the China Inland Mission, spoke these burning words: "The success of the work has been remarkably cheering; but when we look back to eighty years of missionary labor and compare it with the results of eighty years of commercial labor, I am afraid that our brow must be covered with shame and our hearts filled with sorrow. After eighty years of missionary labor, we are thankful for thirty-two thousand communicants; after eighty years of commercial labor there are more than one hundred and fifty millions of opium smokers in China. You may go through China and you will find thousands, I can safely say tens of thousands, of towns and villages in which there are but small traces of the Bible or of Christian influence. You will scarcely find a hamlet where the opium pipe does not reign. What a contrast! What an appeal!"

Finally, Christian reader and friend, we appeal to you for your sympathy, for your prayers, and for your personal help. We beseech some of you to give your lives to this work, and all of you to give a generous, constant, systematic support to the cause of missions.

China is Moving.

It would be far from the facts to speak of China as stationary, and to the life of her people as stagnant. Those who live in the empire and are conversant with the facts, are aware that this great empire is in motion; that against her will, almost without her knowledge, the currents of progress which sweep so powerfully through all western life are lifting her up and bearing her away from all familiar moorings, toward the goal of a New Age and a New World. The thickening net of telegraph wires upon her provinces is one sign. The railway from Tientsin to the sea, with the plans for a system which shall cover the empire, is another sign. The imperial proclamation of recent date defining the character and aims of Christian missionaries, declaring them to be teachers of virtue, and commanding the people to receive and treat them as their guests and friends, is a further proof. These tokens prove to us that China is moving.

"Out of the shadow of night
The world moves into light:
It is daybreak everywhere."

—Gospel in All Lands.

Thoughts on Giving.

Money, in its line, is a means to the world's evangelization, as well as preaching or prayer. As in the case of Cornelius, the Christian's alms are to go up before God with his prayers. The collection is as much a part of the worship of the Lord in the service of his day and house as the reading of the Scriptures or the singing of hymns.—Selected.

A missionary in China affirms that during January more money was spent in propitiating evil spirits that have no existence, than all the churches in the United States give in one year to Foreign Missions. Forty-five missionaries devote themselves to the Chinese upon the Pacific coast; and as one result, we find this much sinned-against class contributing $6,290 to the treasuries of the local missions.

Some Figures in Reference to China.

In density of population China leads, with from 200 to 400 to the square mile. The last census put the population of this country at 382,000,000. The world cannot be said to be won for Christ until the gospel has been preached to this vast multitude.

There are now over one hundred medical missionaries in China, and fifty-six of them are women. They reach those who are beyond the reach of male missionaries, even though physicians, and touch the home life as no others can.

There are 1,500 native born Chinese children in San Francisco, with their number rapidly increasing.

There are now two Chinese girls studying in the University of Michigan, who mean to return to their country as missionaries. They have exchanged their Chinese names for those of Mary Stone and Ada Kahn. There are three young Chinese men also studying in the same institute.

The St. Louis Trade Review and Export Journal in its issue of February 7th, 1893, has this to say:
EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.
One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B. Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

Reunion of the Former Students of Oxford Female Seminary.

At a meeting on April 11th, 1893, of the Alumnæ Association of Oxford Female Seminary, it was unanimously resolved to invite the former students and teachers of the Seminary to attend the approaching commencement the last of May. The purpose is to have a large reunion, and the invitation is extended to the former students and teachers of Oxford Female Seminary from its organization in 1850 to the present, and to the students and teachers of Raleigh Baptist Female Seminary, which for ten years was conducted by our President.

The programme for commencement is unusually attractive. The speakers are eminent for ability; the graduating class is large; the music talent is beyond the average; and the art exhibit will be full and handsome; and the reunion of old friends will be delightful.

Entertainment will be provided for all those who will notify President Hobgood of their purpose to attend the Reunion. All such are requested to send in their names as soon as possible—certainly before May 15th. The railroads will give the usual reduced rates.

We cordially invite our sisters to re-visit their alma mater. She, with the whole town of Oxford, will give them a hearty welcome.

MRS. ANNA HUNTER HARDAWAY,
President of Alumnæ Association.

Long Looked For.
The STORY OF DIAZ.
May 10th will appear a fresh, bright, authentic account of the Wonderful Work of God in Cuba, as seen in the DIAZ MISSION. This thrilling historical sketch is fascinating as a romance. The work is just from the pen of the Rev. George W. Lasher, D. D., of Cincinnati, after personal inspection of the work during his recent visit to Havana. It will be a notable contribution to the missionary literature of America. A handsome brochure, in attractive covers, illustrated. Price, 25 cents, postage paid, or 5 copies $1.00.
Address, GEO. E. STEVENS,
Publisher, Cincinnati, Ohio.
☞ Some person interested in Missions wanted to circulate this new and inspiring work in every church. The Diaz Mission may be counted a nineteenth century miracle.

The Leaksville Woolen Mills, Leaksville, N. C., need no introduction to the public in North Carolina and adjoining States. This is simply to remind you that they are still "in touch" with the people, working up their wool into various forms of finished product at satisfactory prices. A handsome catalogue containing samples of their new and attractive styles of Fancy Cassimeres and All-Wool Flannels, together with all other goods made by them, is sent to any address on application. Besides an interesting article on "Wool on How to Handle It," the catalogue contains full particulars in regard to shipping wool. If these details are carefully followed, we guarantee prompt return of goods.
Write to Hiram Foard, Sec'y, Leaksville, N. C., for catalogue, before disposing of your wool.

New Spring
Dress Goods.
Among the new Dress Goods for the Spring, will be noticed some distinct changes, both as to colors and styles, from those of the past season.
Our advance lines of Dress Fabrics for this season are already on sale, and embraces the newest shades and textures in Plain Materials, as well as the latest ideas in the handsomer French Novelties.
This year, Cotton Dress Fabrics will be shown in many dainty effects, and our present exhibit of these is the most extensive we have ever made.
We suggest to our patrons to buy early, as most of these goods are our own importations, consequently many styles once sold cannot be duplicated.
Requests for samples should indicate something as to colors, and about what price goods are desired.
Cash with the order, of $5.00 and over, goods will be delivered free (except furniture and crockery) to the nearest Express Office or Railroad station.

Meeting with the Whiteville Church.

Dear Recorder:—Last Friday night our meeting closed in the Whiteville church. It was a grand meeting, resulting in six professions of faith. Our beloved brother, Rev. L. Johnson, the grand old bishop of Rockingham, did the most of the preaching. His sermons were excellent, and all of them completely captivated the people of Whiteville.

Rev. W. W. Willis, our genial brother from Fair Bluff, was also present, and preached for my people three excellent sermons.

Our Methodist brethren, Forbes and Smith, also attended our meeting and aided us by their prayers and encouragement.

I think this meeting will result in great good, not only to the church, but the community at large.

Two years ago that accursed thing known as the saloon was driven out of Whiteville by a vote of the people. The whiskey element has succeeded in ordering another election in June, but the prayers of God's own people are ascending day and night asking God to overthrow king alcohol and his hosts in the approaching election. It is wonderful how lamb-like and religious the devil is getting in these latter days. He thinks it is anti-Christian for the preachers to declare that drunkards and drunkard-makers shall not inherit the kingdom of God. About Whiteville and Vineland he is now using a negro newspaper to tell ministers of the gospel what and how to preach. It is time for all these who love the Lord, and are contending earnestly for that form of faith once delivered to the saints, to put the gospel armor on and fight the battles of the Lord.

I have read with a great deal of interest Tom Dixon's sermon on the materialism and sensuality of the age in which we live. We, as Baptists, profess to believe in a converted and consecrated church membership. Let us therefore put ourselves in battle array against everybody and everything which antagonizes the principles for which the dear Redeemer bled and died upon the accursed tree. J. A. S.

Fair Bluff, N. C., April 27.

A Baptism.

Dear Recorder:—I rode ten miles (round trip) on last Sunday morning (23d) to baptize one person. The little church at Wilson's Mills sent me to "Swift Creek," a stream of running water, clear and clean with pebbled bottom. What muddy holes we are sometimes compelled to baptize in! The brother seemed very anxious to set forth his personal faith in his crucified and arisen Lord. No act but immersion can express the faith that Jesus died for our sins, was buried and rose again, according to the Scriptures.

The dear old RECORDER improves with age. May the Lord continue to give it favor with the people, and bless its readers, and all connected with its work.

Yours fraternally,
O. C. HORTON.

A Help for Superintendents.

The Baptist Superintendent, published by the American Baptist Publication Society, will be of invaluable service to all superintendents who require aid and instruction in the responsible and delicate duties of that office. Perhaps no position in any department of Christian activity is more difficult to fill and subjects the holder to more criticism than that of the Sunday school superintendent. The Baptist Superintendent, edited by Dr. C. R. Blackall, and published by the Society, at the low price of only 25 cents per year, is unequaled as a help for superintendents. If it were five times that price no superintendent ought to be without it.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

Guilford has organized a county fair association.

Mr. Chas. A. Carlton, a prominent citizen of Statesville, died on the 16th ult.

A beer-bottling establishment was recently burned in Newbern. Loss several thousand dollars.

Hon. Hannis Taylor of Alabama, recently appointed Minister to Spain, is a native of Newbern, this State.

White Miller, a negro, while toying with a pistol, shot and killed himself in Lexington Saturday night week.

A $15,000 fire occurred in Kinston on the 21st ult. A church for colored people, and ten residences were destroyed.

Jack Brady, colored, was hanged at Hendersonville on April 22d for the murder of L. D. Toy, Jr., a white man, last August.

A Mr. Lawrence Eagle of Cabarrus county, recently drank a quantity of laudanum. After several days of intense suffering he died.

Mr. Isaac Hutchins, a prominent farmer and merchant of Forbush, Yadkin county, recently committed suicide by hanging himself with a rope.

A Young Men's Christian Institute, erected by the colored people of Asheville, assisted by Millionaire George Vanderbuilt, has been opened in that city.

The Winston Sentinel says the insurance money on Hotel Zinzendorf has not been paid yet and it seems that the courts will be called upon to settle the matter.

The James City affair has been amicably settled. The negroes have leased the property for three years and have signed contracts to that effect. The First Regiment of the State Guard remained at James City until all the contracts were properly signed.

The wife and son of Mr. William Cook, who lives near Pioneer Mills, Cabarrus county, both dropped dead within a week. Neither had previously complained of any illness.

The handsome residence of Mr. J. L. Scales, Statesville, was burned last Sunday week. Estimated value of house and contents $7,850, on which there was insurance to the amount of $5,500.

Gastonia people are working for a new cotton mill on the co-operative plan. Those interested desire to start with $50,000 stock. After five days work $45,000 of this amount was reported in sight.

The well known Davis hotel at Kittrell was entirely destroyed by fire early Saturday morning the 29th ult. The guests narrowly escaped. Loss, including furniture, over $30,000; insurance $16,000. The work of rebuilding will begin at once.

Mr. John Hill, a farmer, committed suicide at his home near Madison, Friday night week, by hanging himself with plow-lines attached to the joists of the house. It is stated that his mind had become unbalanced by dissipation and other causes.

The postoffice at Clairmont, Catawba county, was burned recently and Elmore Cloninger, the deputy postmaster, has been arrested and bound over to the Federal Court at Statesville, charged with embezzling the money and stamps.—Exchange.

Mr. Larkin Thornburg, an industrious farmer living near Dallas, Gaston county, recently suffered a great loss by fire. His dwelling house, meat house and barn, were all destroyed together with almost their entire contents. The hard earned accumulations of a life-time were swept away in a few hours.

According to an exchange, Henry and Joe Dickens, brothers, while attending a shooting match recently at Kernersville, got into a dispute with Adrian Walker, and the former put a load of shot into the latter's breast, inflicting serious if not fatal injuries. The brothers were arrested, but, strange to say, the wounded man was not found.

A warrant has been issued at Fayetteville for the arrest of Edinbro Scurlock, a negro, on the charge of burning his own daughter. It is said that on Sunday the 23d ult., at his home near Fayetteville, Scurlock saturated the clothing of the girl and the bed on which she was sleeping with kerosene oil, and then stuck fire to it. The girl was fatally burned. Her inhuman father has disappeared.

The desk which Mrs. Cotten and Mrs. Kidder had constructed as a memorial to Virginia Dare, the first white child born in America, was made of white holly from Roanoke Island, Virginia Dare's birth place, was designed by Mr. Silas McBee, of Sewanee, Tenn., and carved by Miss Kate Cheshire of Tarboro, sister of Rev. J. B. Cheshire of this city. This desk is a tribute to the memory of Virginia Dare, from the women of this State, and will be sent to the World's Fair.—Charlotte Observer.

The caterpillar plague which has been reported for the past ten years from the Big Swamp and points on the Carolina Central Railroad near Clarkton, is again exciting the anxiety of the people of that section. The worms have not only stripped the leaves from the trees in the swamps, but have attacked the oak trees in the forest for ten miles around Clarkton, and are even getting into the houses of the farmers. The trees and the ground are literally covered with thousands of caterpillars, and the farmers are alarmed lest they attack and destroy the fruit trees and growing crops.—Wilmington Messenger.

It is announced that an institution to be known as the Boys' Farm School will be established on the Swannanoa river, nine miles east of Asheville, under the auspices of the Northern Presbyterian church. The buildings will be located on a four hundred acre tract which cost $14,000. The school will offer a thorough English education in connection with instruction in agricultural and mechanical pursuits, and will be under the direction of Prof. Samuel Jaffray, lately of Cornell University. The capacity of the school will be two hundred and fifty students and work on the buildings is to begin at once, so that the school may open by the first of October.

All the suits against the Richmond and Danville Railroad, growing out of the wreck at Bostian's bridge, near Statesville, on the 27th of August, 1891, in which twenty-two persons were killed and thirty wounded, have been compromised. There were thirteen of these cases in Iredell Superior Court and the following amounts have been allowed in each case: Death claims—J. C. Brodie, $5,000; W. M. Houston, $5,000; Chas. G. Weber, $5,000; Miss Ophelia Polk Moore, $2,000; Mrs. Susan Pool, $2,000; Hugh K. Linster, $2,500; A. Davis, $1,200; Rev. J. M. Sikes, $3,500. Claims for injuries—J. F. Holler, $2,000; Mrs. Naomi Hayes Moore, $1,500; Miss Louallie Pool, $1,500; O. W. Lawson, $1,000; G. W. Bowley, $1,000. There were a number of suits entered at Asheville, Salisbury and other places. We understand that all of these have been compromised. We have not learned what amounts were allowed in the other cases, but it is safe to say that the wreck, first and last, cost the Richmond and Danville Railroad at least $100,000.—Statesville Landmark.

General News.

A colored woman of Richmond, Va., has been granted license to practice medicine.

Fire in a church at Naples, precipitated a panic in which fifteen persons were killed.

Mr. Horace Waters, the well known pianoforte manufacturer is dead. The Waters Normal Institute at Winton, N. C., was a large beneficiary of his charity.

The ages of the different men in Cleveland's Cabinet are as follows: Smith, 38; Lamont, 41; Bissell, 46; Herbert, 50; Stevenson, 58; Olney, 58; Carlisle, 58; Morton, 60, and Gresham, 61.

Chicago parties want to buy the Jeff Davis mansion at Richmond and remove it to Chicago for exhibition purposes. It is not at all likely that the building will be sold, but it will be used as a museum in which relics of the Confederacy will be displayed.

On Tuesday night of last week, a series of terrible wind storms passed over Oklahoma Territory. The greatest damage was done near Norman in the Southern part of the Territory and near Perkins and Stillwater in the Northeastern part. Ninety persons are reported killed and about two hundred injured, about five per cent. of them being fatally injured.

On April 17th, while one of the great guns of the Krupp exhibit was being placed in position at the World's Fair grounds, the tackle broke and the gun fell on two soldiers, Sergeant J. W. Warwick and Corporal Kenles, crushing the body of the former into a pulp and fatally wounding the latter. The gun weighed 28,000 pounds. Sergeant Warwick was a native of Union county, N. C.

DIED.

SCOGGINS—We were saddened in the death of one of our faithful members, Sister J. P. Scoggins, on Thursday night, April 20th, 1893. Our sympathy runs out to her faithful companion in his bereavement.

C. W. BLANCHARD.

East Durham, April 27, 1893.

NEWTON—Died, at his home near Durham, N. C., March 7th, 1893, Bro. Wm. P. Newton, aged seventy-four years. Bro. Newton was a deacon in Rose of Sharon church. He was a faithful and consistent member, and will be missed by his widow, his children, and by his PASTOR.

ALLEN—On Sunday, April 9, 1893, at Forestville, N. C., death laid sudden hand on Mrs. Mary E. Allen, wife of D. W. Allen, senior deacon of Forestville church. She was in her 61st year. The event was a great shock to the entire community and well-nigh overwhelming to her husband and son, as also to her step-children, all of whom honored and loved her. She had just returned from church, where she had taken part in the singing of "Precious Name," the closing hymn, whose sweet words were almost the last that were on her lips. For several months she had suffered from some trouble in the region of the heart, but she was so active and full of energy that it was hard to think of her as one likely to die soon or suddenly.

She had cherished a hope of salvation through Christ for more than thirty years, but from a morbid dread of being deceived she was not baptized until a few years ago, when a quickened sense of gratitude brought her to confess the Saviour before the world and take her place among his people. Although previously she had shown interest in spiritual things, yet from this time her love for the church, the Sunday-school, and all the Lord's work began to be conspicuous.

A faithful wife, a devoted mother, a wise and helpful neighbor and friend, one of the best of the little flock at Forestville has been translated from earth to heaven. May God give grace and comfort to his servants so deeply and sorely bereaved. W. B. R.

Chickens and Eggs,
AND HOW TO GET 'EM.

Use Polk Miller's 'Victory' Poultry Food.

IT ADDS GREATLY TO THE FOWLS' LAYING, and I have never seen a case of Gapes in young chickens when it was used. Now, I would as soon do without salt in my food as to undertake to raise fowls without Polk Miller's Chicken Food.
WILLIS W. HOBSON,
Powhatan county, Va.

We buy it by the dozen boxes, and when my wife has a sick fowl of any kind "we make for these Powders, and that's the last of it." It is an infallible remedy with us.
WM. A. WILLROY,
King William county, Va.

I have used one box, and found it very beneficial to young fowls. Have not lost any with Gapes since I commenced its use.
MISS NELLIE DIGGS,
Mathews Courthouse, Va.

It is a sure preventive of Gapes, and we consider it indispensable in our future efforts at "poultry raising."
MRS. L. H. GRAYBILL,

It stopped Cholera entirely among my fowls.

Dr. Boykin's Worm Killer.

"The best selling Vermifuge in the market." Recipe furnished to any regular physician when requested.

We have never asked for a certificate. We have some of the strongest ever given—all sent without solicitation. Read a few only of the many evidences of its great merit:

LA GRANGE, N. C., July 1887.

Mr. J. P. Joyner:—I gave my child one dose of Boykin's "Worm Killer," purchased of you. It brought 366 worms. I consider it the best worm medicine made. Respectfully, J. W. THOMAS.

Messrs. I. M. & B. E. Powell, prominent merchants in Columbus county, N. C., wrote us in July, 1887, that "Rev. T. C. Floyd gave his child one dose of Boykin's "Worm Killer," and the result was 367 worms."

Mr. W. J. Davis of Ridgeway, S. C., says: "I have quite a demand for your "Worm Killer." It is the best Vermifuge I get."

Dr. R. H. Edmunds, a well known physician and farmer, writes under date of Ridgeway, S. C., May 26th, 1884, "that a negro girl 10 years old, near him, took two or three doses of the 'Worm Killer,' and passed 366 worms."

Price: 25c. per Bottle. Take no other.

The End of Life.

BY THE REV. D. K. BENNETT.

O restless mortal stop and think,
As to'ard the grave your way you wend;
In life prepare for certain death,
For soon this mortal life must end.

Though cumbered with a load of care,
Stop and consult a Christian friend;
Ask him to aid you with a prayer,
For soon this mortal life must end.

Amid the busy round of life,
This prayer to God each hour send;
O bless and save me by thy grace,
For soon this mortal life must end.

Invoke each day the Holy Ghost,
In love divine to condescend;
To help you live as you would die,
For soon this mortal life must end.

Ye thoughtless soul this hour resolve
By grace divine I do intend;
To cease from sin and live for God,
For soon this mortal life must end.

To bless thine erring creatures Lord,
On each thy Holy Spirit send;
Apply to each thy faultless word,
For soon this mortal life must end.

The Hot Potato.

It all happened in Paul's pocket—the trousers pocket of Paul's new summer suit. Paul's father was a minister, a very good man—as good as "an apostle," Paul believed but so wise and grave that Paul never dreamed of climbing upon his knee and chattering to him of the crow's nest in the ragged pine or the woodchuck in the old stone wall. Paul would stand quite still beside the study table—for he was not allowed to sit down in the presence of either of his parents—and watch with round blue eyes everything this wonderful father did.

He never did much, that Paul could make out, but read great, heavy books and write with a sputtery quill. For this was over fifty years ago, when it was the fashion that children should be seen and not heard; and Paul's father, who was president of a college up among the Vermont hills, and the greatest man in all the town—Paul supposed he was the greatest in all the world—took but slight notice of his six-year old boy. One winter day, for instance, Paul was running along an icy sidewalk, with both hands deep in his pockets, and, turning a corner, suddenly came full upon his father. Too much abashed to remember to pull off his little knit cap and bow, Paul stood like a small statue, gazing up at the tall figure in silent dismay. His father looked down upon him with a twinkle in his own blue eyes—a twinkle which the spectacles kept Paul from seeing—and said, in a solemn tone, like the one in which he gave out the hymns on Sunday:

"If your foot should trip, my son, what would become of your nose?"

Paul always kept his hands out of his pockets after that. It would have been well for him if he had kept out hot potatoes, too.

It was Commencement Day at the college, and there was to be a great dinner at the president's house. But Paul was sent out of the kitchen; he was not allowed in the pantry; he was told that he must not come to the dining room until the guests had all eaten and all gone back to the parlor. Poor little man! At that last command he hid himself behind his father's long cloak, hanging in the front hall, and cried like a girl.

Then it was that Tabitha Eliza, the "help," opened the dining room door and walked toward the parlor door, at the further end of the hall, to announce dinner. It was surprising how readily that grave, high-minded company responded to the call. The president, bowing low, offered his arm to the learned lady from Boston who had written a book. The president's wife placed her hand, trembling a little, on the coat sleeve of the Governor of Vermont, and other guests filed through the long hall after them in slow and stately procession.

And then out of the dining room door, just as the foremost couple neared it, darted a small boy, with very red cheeks and terrified blue eyes, who put down his curly head and dashed full into the arms of the Governor himself. This awful personage caught Paul up merrily, being fond of children, and held the struggling urchin firmly pressed against his shoulder.

"What a fine little fellow, president!" cried his Excellency, squeezing the wriggling captive tighter yet. "Ah, but he's a rogue, I see. He has stolen his father's chin."

Before the president could reply, Paul, whose face was like fire, gave one ringing scream, and, to the boundless horror of his father and mother and all the goodly company, lifted a sturdy little fist and struck the Chief Executive of the Green Mountain State full on the nose.

"I didn't steal father's chin, either," he gasped. "'Twas only a potato. Let me down! It's burning me up! Take it away! mother!"

And when his mother snatched her boy and searched, she found out—and his father found out, and the Governor found out, and all the learned men and women found out—that Paul Timothy Clayton, the president's only son, had slipped across the forbidden threshold, seized a hot baked potato off the Commencement dinner table, and stuffed it into the pocket of his little linen trousers, where, under the Governor's hug, it had burst open and made a great red burn on his tender skin.

And as it came to pass—for discipline was [illegible] Vermont minister's household [illegible] years ago—that until Paul was almost grown, ready to enter college, [illegible] anything on Commencement [illegible] large baked potato.

[illegible] you remember, I said his father every year, adjusting the gold-bowed spectacles so carefully that Paul could never be sure whether there was a twinkle behind them or not, "to keep your pockets clear of stolen goods; for one never knows when one may meet the Governor."—Classmate.

Worry.

Is there not a lingering belief in the minds of conscientious people that it is an occasional duty to worry? If brought to the bar of confession, most of us would probably have to own that, under certain circumstances, we feel anxiety to be incumbent on us. It is a sign that we are not bad hearted, but sympathetic, if the woes of others cause us to lie awake at night; moreover, it shows great sensibility, if we are gloomy over possible misfortunes to ourselves.

A little girl whose aunt had died, and who was herself too young to estimate the calamity, said, in after years, that she was greatly mortified at seeing others crying while she had no desire to shed a tear.

"Finally," she confessed. "I was so much ashamed at being so hardhearted, that I got an onion and rubbed it on my eyes. Then I cried with the rest, and was quite happy."

"Why don't you go to sleep?" asked a school girl of an excitable room mate at midnight.

"Oh, I can't," was the answer, "I am so worried for fear my mother is ill."

"But she is fifty miles away, and it won't do her any good for you to lie awake."

"I can't help it; I should be ashamed to try to sleep while she may be awake suffering," was the natural reply.

Like the people who instinctively imitate an invalid who is coughing, under the impression that they are "helping him along," like the old lady who mercifully makes herself as light as she can in an overloaded carriage, we foolishly imagining that we can, in some mysterious way, help the suffering by refusing to be happy ourselves. Never was there a greater mistake.

When we can actually do something no sacrifice is too great to be made for the good of others; duty may justly demand of us both peace of mind and health of body. On the other hand, there are periods of inactivity through which we must live, seeing the struggles of those dear to us, and finding no chance to strike a blow in their defense. Then it is that duty demands: "Be cheerful, resolute and calm. Your turn will come, and until it does you have to keep yourself in good condition for action."—Youth's Companion.

Apples as Medicine.

Chemically, the apple is composed of vegetable fiber, albumen, sugar, gum, chlorophyl, malic acid, gallic acid, lime, and much water. Furthermore, the German analysts say that the apple contains a larger percentage of phosphorous than any other fruit or vegetable. The phosphorous is admirably adapted for renewing the essential nervous matter, lecithin, of the brain and spinal cord. It is, perhaps, for same reason, rudely understood, that old Scandinavian traditions represent the apple as the food of the gods, who, when they felt themselves to be growing feeble and infirm, resorted to this fruit for renewing their powers of mind and body.

Also, the acids of the apple are of signal use for men of sedentary habits, whose livers are sluggish in action, those acids serving to eliminate from the body noxious matters, which, if retained would make the brain heavy and dull, or bring about jaundice or skin eruptions and other allied troubles. Some such an experience must have led to our custom of taking apple sauce with roast pork, rich goose, and like dishes.

The malic acid of ripe apples, either raw or cooked, will neutralize any excess of chalky matter engendered by eating too much meat. It is also the fact that such fresh fruits as the apple, the pear and the plum, when taken ripe and without sugar, diminish acidity in the stomach rather than provoke it. Their vegetable sauces and juices are converted into alkaline carbonates, which tend to counteract acidity.—Medical Age.

Papyrus and Paper.

In ancient Egypt the papyrus plant grew in enormous quantities. The roots of it were used for food, the bark for ropes, baskets, mats, and even for river boats; the fine skin of the inner bark was glued together in strips and employed as writing paper. The word "paper" is, indeed our modern form of the word "papyrus."

Now this fine skin or rind was imported into Rome and by the Romans was called "liber," and when the papyrus was made up into a book it, too, was known as a "liber." The case in which such a collection of books was kept was termed (in Low Latin) a "libraria," whence, through the French "librairie," we have our English "library."

The Greeks called the plant itself "byblos;" and when among them the papyrus became a book, the latter was termed a "byblos." The earliest Christian writers, using the Greek language, spoke of the Holy Scriptures as "biblia," the books, and later, when the Scriptures were regarded as a single work and not as a collection, the plural form "biblia," the books, was adopted as a Latin singular, "biblia," the book. With slight modification, "biblia" spread into all modern European languages, and appeared in English as "the Bible" some time after the Norman Conquest.

So the very word "Bible" takes us back to those dark days of the Oppression, when as yet the great Lawgiver was but a weeping babe in the water-flags, and the annals of the Jewish people had not got beyond the second chapter of Exodus.—Good Words.

The Dog Did Not Wince.

Animals, as a rule, understand who their friends are. The Washington Post tells the story of a dog whose eyes had been treated by an oculist, to his great relief. The trouble returned, and the dog's master determined to take him to the oculist's a second time. Flim Flam seemed to know where he was going, for on entering the square where the oculist had his office, he raced ahead of his master and up the steps, where he had been but once before, and on the door being opened, bolted straight for the treatment-room, instead of waiting his turn down-stairs, as two-legged patients learn to do to their sorrow and impatience. This time the treatment was a zinc solution that was very severe and brought the water in streams from the patient's eyes, but he took it with his nose in the air, never wincing, and the only sign of feeling he made was to hold out one paw pathetically for his master's hand.

Tiresome Talkers.

These interminable talkers have some curious devices whereby they hold the floor when strategy becomes necessary. One of the most amusing methods is what may be termed the staying conjunction. The talker may be easy and graceful, or bombastic and tiresome, but the flood of words sweeps right on. If forced to pause for want of breath, the field ahead is pre empted by an aggressive and compelling "and". Well-bred listeners can do no less than to await the completion of the sentence, which, by the by, will end, if it ever ends, with an outlying conjunction.—Selected.

IT'S A SECRET—that many women owe their beauty to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The reason—beauty of form and face, as well as grace, radiate from the common center—health. The best bodily condition results from good food, fresh air, and exercise, coupled with the judicious use of the "Prescription." In maidenhood, womanhood, and motherhood, it's a supporting tonic that's peculiarly adapted to her needs, regulating, strengthening, and curing, the derangements of the sex.

If there be headache, pain in the back, bearing-down sensations, or general debility, or if there be nervous disturbances, nervous prostration, and sleeplessness, the "Prescription" reaches the origin of the trouble and corrects it. It dispels aches and pains, corrects displacements and cures catarrhal inflammation of the lining membranes. It's guaranteed to benefit or cure, or the money paid for it is refunded.

A Discourse on the Apostolic Ministry.

BY REV. DR. FRANCIS WAYLAND.

Delivered in Rochester, N. Y., before the New York Baptist Union for Ministerial Education on July 12th, 1853.

Text, Mark 16: 15—"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

These words, uttered by the Son of God, a few moments before his ascension, contain the last precept which he ever delivered to his disciples. They constitute the commission under which we labor to extend the reign of the Messiah; and they furnish the assurance on which we rely, that the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our God and of his Christ. A proper understanding of the text must therefore convey important instruction on the nature and duties of the Christian ministry.

The precept in the text is, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

I. What is this gospel which we are here commanded to preach? The gospel is good news. What good news are we then commanded to proclaim?

In order to answer this question, let us glance at the moral condition of those to whom the gospel is sent.

In the beginning, God created man in his own image, with a moral constitution perfectly adapted to a holy life, and placed before him every motive which should impel a moral agent to a course of spotless virtue. The law under which we were created was holy and just and good. The probation assigned to us was, however, wholly subjected to the principle of law. Its conditions were two: first, the man that doeth these things shall live by them; and secondly, cursed is every man that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them. Through the abounding grace of God, eternal life was promised as the reward of obedience, and on the other hand, disobedience to the law, or, rebellion against the moral government of the universe, was punishable with eternal death, banishment from the presence of God, misery everlasting. Under our first probation no provision was made for pardon, and therefore no hope was offered to the guilty. Everything was to be gained by perfect obedience, everything was to be lost by a single transgression.

Such were the moral conditions under which we were originally created. But our first parents sinned, and "by one man's disobedience the many were made sinners." Without inquiring here into the manner in which his posterity are affected by the fall of Adam, it is sufficient to state the fact, that, from the date of the first transgression there has not been "a just man on earth who has not sinned." The moral blight fell upon all born of woman. The whole race became rebels against God. "They did not like to retain him in their knowledge," and preferred to live in open defiance of his authority. "The thoughts of their heart became evil, only evil continually." Sin became the irrevocable habit of man. Though impelled by the constitution of his nature to worship something, he chose to worship birds and four-footed beasts and creeping things, nay the work of his own hands, rather than "God over all who is blessed forevermore." "The earth was filled with violence" and steeped in pollution. In every single individual of our race, unrenewed by the Spirit of God, evil tendency assumed the form of fixed and unalterable habit, and thus every man was making himself meet for eternal banishment from all that is holy; while at the same time, he was "treasuring up unto himself wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God."

The conditions of the probation under which we were created having thus been universally violated, nothing remained but for the law to take its course. By the deeds of the law could no man be justified, for we had broken the law during our whole existence. We were thus all under condemnation. The law contained no provision for pardon. Sentence had been passed upon us, and we were awaiting the day of its execution. Earth had become a mere suburb of hell, into which death was commissioned to sweep the myriads of our race, from the first sinner, Adam, to the last of his sin-smitten posterity.

But though all was lost, the compassions of God were not exhausted, and he did not leave us to perish without hope. The terms of our first probation having been violated, eternal life on the principles under which we were originally created, was impossible. It pleased our Father in heaven to offer us a second probation on infinitely more favorable conditions, so that although we had "sinned and come short of the glory of God," we might be "freely justified by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus." But before this new probation could be offered to us, it was necessary that the law which we had broken should be magnified and made honorable. It must be perfectly and triumphantly obeyed by a being in our nature, and yet one who by his own nature was not under the law of humanity. No other being than the Son of God himself was competent to assume the work of our redemption, and our "help was laid upon one that was mighty." "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." "In the fulness of time God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." The Messiah fulfilled every requirement of the law in our stead, and, "as by the disobedience of one the many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one the many were made righteous." He suffered whatever was necessary to redeem us from the curse of the law. He died for our offences, and offered himself without spot to God in our stead. His offering was accepted, and, to assure us of its acceptance, he was raised from the dead. Having finished the work that had been given him to do, he ascended to "the glory which he had with the Father before the world was." Having "humbled himself, and became obedient to death, the death of the cross, God hath highly exalted him and given him a name above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven and of things on earth, that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father."

By this interposition of the Son of God on our behalf, the destiny of man was changed. A new probation on more favorable conditions was granted us. By the conditions of the former probation we were doomed to despair in consequence of a single transgression. Now, through the righteousness of Christ, though guilty of innumerable sins, we may be accepted through the beloved. "God is well pleased for his righteousness' sake, for he hath magnified the law and made it honorable." On the most merciful conditions, repentance for sin and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, every child of Adam may be pardoned, justified, sanctified and raised to a higher glory than that which he had lost by his own transgression. Henceforth the gate of heaven stands as wide open for all born of woman as the gate of hell. The change in our condition is such as the imagination of man could never have conceived. It is a change from darkness to light, from death to life, from pollution to purity, from a dwelling forever in hell with the spirits of the damned, to "an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for those who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation."

Every one must at once perceive that this is the great event in the history of our world. Compared with it, what are the revolutions of nations, what the deliverance of peoples from bondage, what the progress of man from ignorance to knowledge, and from barbarism to civilization! Nay, could we combine in one event all the most stupendous social changes which the world has ever seen, they would all be lighter than the dust of the balance, in comparison with the mystery of Christ and him crucified. This is the good news spoken of in the text.

II. Let us in the next place inquire what is meant by preaching the gospel.

The word preach in the New Testament has a meaning different from that which at present commonly attaches to it. We understand by it the delivery of an oration, or discourse, on a particular theme, connected more or less closely with religion. It may be the discussion of a doctrine, an exegetical essay, a dissertation on social virtues or vices, as well as a persuasive unfolding of the teaching of the Holy Ghost. No such general idea was intended by the word as it is used by the writers of the New Testament. The words translated preach in our version are two. The one signifies simply to herald, to announce, to proclaim, to publish; the other, with this general idea, combines the notion of good tidings; and means, to publish, or be the messenger of good news. From what I have already said of the nature of the gospel message, it is evident that no other idea would so well have corresponded with the facts of the case. A great and unexpected change had been wrought in the condition of humanity. Our whole race had been, by a most astonishing act of grace, redeemed from inconceivable misery. They, however, remained ignorant both of their danger and of their deliverance. The knowledge of this act of infinite love had been communicated to a few men who had availed themselves of the gracious conditions of the new covenant, and had consecrated their whole being henceforth to their Redeemer. The rest of the world was wrapt in Egyptian darkness. Mankind still continued under the curse of the law, and were passing by millions to receive in everlasting despair the just demerit of their transgressions. The command was, go abroad everywhere, proclaim to every creature the news of redemption; tell them of the love of God in Christ Jesus. All things are now ready, bid them come and welcome to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

When the Israelites were bitten by the fiery flying serpents, and the bite was inevitably fatal, Moses was directed to sit up a brazen serpent, with the assurance that whosoever that had been bitten, looked upon it, should be healed. You can imagine how the first man who had felt its saving efficacy flew to communicate the news to his brethren, and urged them to avail themselves of the remedy which had delivered him from death. Every man who was healed became immediately a herald of the glad tidings to others. Every one who was saved became a publisher of the salvation, or, in other words, a preacher, until in a few minutes the news spread throughout the encampment, and in this sense every tribe was evangelized.

Allow me to illustrate the meaning of this term, as used by our Lord, by an occurrence of which I was an eye-witness. It so chanced that at the close of the last war with Great Britain, I was temporarily a resident of the city of New York. The prospects of the nation were shrouded in gloom. We had been for two or three years at war with the mightiest nation on earth, and, as she had now concluded a peace with the continent of Europe, we were obliged to cope with her single-handed. Our harbors were blockaded. Communication, coast-wise, between our ports was cut off. Our ships were rotting in every creek and cove where they could find a place of security. Our immense annual products were moulding in our warehouses. The sources of profitable labor were dried up. Our currency was reduced to irredeemable paper. The extreme portions of our country were becoming hostile to each other, and differences of political opinion were embittering the peace of every household. The credit of the government was exhausted. No one could predict when the contest would terminate, or discover the means by which it could much longer be protracted.

It happened that on a Saturday afternoon in February a ship was discovered in the offing, which was supposed to be a cartel, bringing home our commissioners at Ghent from their unsuccessful mission. The sun had set gloomily before any intelligence from the vessel had reached the city. Expectation became painfully intense as the hours of darkness drew on. At length a boat reached the wharf, announcing the fact that a treaty of peace had been signed, and was waiting for nothing but the action of our government to become a law. The men on whose ears these words first fell, rushed in breathless haste into the city, to repeat them to their friends, shouting as they ran through the streets, peace! peace! peace! Every one who heard the sound repeated it. From house to house, from street to street, the news spread with electric rapidity. The whole city was in commotion. Men bearing lighted torches were flying to and fro, shouting like madmen, peace! peace! peace! When the rapture had partially subsided, one idea occupied every mind. But few men slept that night. In groups they were gathered in the streets and by the fireside, beguiling the hours of midnight by reminding each other that the agony of war was over, and that a worn-out and distracted country was about to enter again upon its wonted career of prosperity. Thus, every one becoming a herald, the news soon reached every man, woman and child in the city, and in this sense, the city was evangelized. All this you see was reasonable and proper. But when Jehovah has offered to our world a treaty of peace, when men doomed to hell may be raised to seats at the right hand of God, why is not a similar zeal displayed in proclaiming the good news! Why are men perishing around us, and no one has ever personally offered to them salvation through a crucified Redeemer.

This then is, I think, the generic idea of preaching conveyed in the New Testament. It is the proclamation to every creature, of the love of God to men through Christ Jesus. This is the main idea. To this our Lord adds, according to the other evangelist, "teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." The duty then enjoined in our Lord's last command is two-fold: First, to invite men to avail themselves of the offer of salvation; and, secondly, to teach them to obey the commands of Christ, so that they may become meet for the kingdom of heaven. In so far as we do these, we preach the gospel. When we do anything else, it may, or it may not, be very good; but in the sense here considered, it is not preaching the gospel.

Hence we see that we may deliver discourses on subjects associated with religion, without preaching the gospel. A discourse is not preaching because it is delivered by a minister, or spoken from the pulpit, or appended to a text. Nothing is, I think, properly preaching, except the explaining the teachings, or enforcing the commands of Christ and his apostles. To hold forth our own inferences, or the inferences of other men, drawn from the gospel; to construct intellectual discourses which affect not the conscience; to show the importance of religion to the temporal well-being of men, or the tendency of the religion of Christ to uphold republican institutions, and a hundred topics of a similar character, may or may not be well; but to do either or all of them certainly falls short of the idea of the apostle, when he "determined to know nothing among men but Jesus Christ and him crucified."

And moreover, the command of Christ supposes our appeal to be made directly to the consciences of men; relying for success wholly on the promised aid of the Holy Ghost. Our Saviour gives no directions concerning any indirect or preparatory labor. The preparation of the heart is a work which the Lord has reserved for himself. We are not to go about making men think well of religion in general, with the intention of afterwards directing them to Christ, and urging them to obey God. The Son of God has left us no directions for civilizing the heathen, and then Christianizing them. We are not commanded to teach schools in order to undermine paganism, and then on its ruins to build up Christianity. If this is our duty, the command must be found in another gospel; it is not found in the gospel of Jesus Christ. We are, at once and always, to set before all men their sin and danger, and point them to "the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world." And here I would ask, are we not liable to err in these respects? For instance, when we profess to preach the gospel, is it right to take as a text the words of inspiration, and then discourse on something which inspiration never taught? Is it not enough that what we say is true; so is geometry, or chemistry, or metaphysics; but is it the truth which Christ came from heaven to reveal? Again, is not our object frequently far too low in preaching? Do we not sometimes preach with the direct design merely of creating in men a respect for religion; and of inducing them to aid us in promoting the objects of religious benevolence, instead of striving to make them, by means of this very sermon, new creatures in Christ Jesus? Do we not labor, as it is called, to build up a good society; that is, to collect around us the rich and the well-conditioned, instead of laboring to save their souls from perdition? The Almighty God sends us to make known his offer of salvation to sinful men; and we, instead of delivering his message, content ourselves with teaching them to pay a decent respect to us and to our services. In the mean time, we allow their immortal souls to go unwarned to eternal perdition. On whose conscience will the blood of these souls rest?

Such, then, is the preaching of the gospel; it is the proclamation of the love of God to men in Christ Jesus. It may be in public or in private, to one or to many from the pulpit or at the fire-side. Whenever we set before men the message of mercy, and urge them to obey the commands of Christ, then we preach the gospel in obedience to the precept in the text.

A Few Thoughts.

BY BEATTIEHEAD.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." Matt. 5: 8. The heart is the seat of happiness or misery, and the heart is not dependent upon things external and visible for its true and solid joy. Some one has fitly said "that the openings of the streets of heaven are on earth." We must first see God here if we would wish to enjoy his presence up yonder. Heaven must come to us before we can go to it. Heaven is a grand, glorious and beautiful place; but with all these its eternal bliss is not based upon its blessed locality, surrounded by its unfading beauty, but is dependent upon the character of the one who is allowed to enter there. Our heart can make "a hell of heaven, or a heaven of hell."

Without this heart-cleansing or purifying the sinner cannot see God; that is, have his blessed and consoling presence here. Neither can he hereafter see the King in his beauty and enter upon the enjoyment of the glories beyond mortal vision. The sinner who has a deep consciousness of his filthy heart surrenders himself to God, and is enabled by the Spirit through faith to receive a pure and holy nature whereby he can see his Lord and his God. Psalms 1: 10; Acts 15: 9. Every child of God has in a measure this purity of heart. But no Christian has received the full measure of holiness after which his soul continually thirsts, and which he expects to receive and to be fully satisfied when he bears in body as well as in soul the complete likeness of the Lord Jesus. Heaven here and hereafter is a full surrender of self to our Lord. Our greatest happiness comes when we are walking near our God. Our souls surrendered at his feet, self-forgotten, the eye rests upon Jesus and his glory with an aim undivided. On account of the sinful body we carry we cannot get as near our Lord as we desire. Some brethren say they are bothered a powerful sight with impure thoughts, and seem to think that one with a pure heart would have mighty good thoughts. Satan suggests bad thoughts, and we are not responsible for them, unless we encourage a desire to put them into action. The old saying has it, "Birds may light on our heads, but we must not let them build their nests there."

The best plan to keep out evil thoughts is to keep the mind filled with good thoughts. Satan is not apt to tarry when he finds our hearts and minds engaged about our Lord and his work. The happy thought is that soon all will be in blessed harmony with the will of our God. Our entire being will be completely filled with his holiness, and all of our powers will be fully consecrated to his service without a rival. Christians endeavor to get the thought deep down in your souls that heaven here and beyond consists in beholding our Lord. What deep and heart-rending sorrow when we lose sight of our Master. Glorious attractions in heaven there will be, but the one which will absorb all others is "God himself shall be with them and be their God; they shall see his face."

"Nor earth, nor all the sky,
Can one delight afford,
Nay, not a drop of real joy,
Without thy presence, Lord.
Thou art the sea of love,
Where all my pleasures roll,
The circle where my passions move,
And centre of my soul."

Tales of Travel.

Many are the disappointments of life—our expectations of hearing the great Sam Jones lecture were blasted. The night was so dark, so rainy, and so cold that it was too imprudent to take a drive of three miles. From what we could learn, the audience was small, but the lecture was good.

Rev. C. W. Matthews is preaching regularly at Mulberry church in Norfolk, Va.

A blind man, by the name of Haynes of the Second Adventist church, is selling a pamphlet of his own composition, in which he tries to prove that the world will come to an end about the year 1900. He calls himself the "Blind Evangelist." If his arguments be true, he is the wisest blind man we have ever heard or read of. He has visited Eastern North Carolina, and the last we heard of him, he was in Virginia.

The resignation of Bro. Jones of Edenton, N. C., took effect on the second Sunday in this month. A young brother, M. C. Garris, will be his successor. He takes charge of the church in June.

The Whiteville Grove church, Perquimans county, N. C., is growing under the pastoral care of Bro. Josiah Elliott.

It is seldom we hear of a brother being called to the pastorate of a church from which he started out as a preacher. Josiah Elliott was ordained to the full work of the gospel ministry by the church at Hertford, Perquimans county, N. C., in 1844, and in the year 1859 was called to the pastoral care of said church. He took charge in 1859. Since he has been pastor of the church, the congregation, Sunday-school and prayer-meetings are well attended, the largest number we've ever had to have.

The Biblical Recorder

WEDNESDAY, MAY 10, 1893.

Rev. C. T. BAILEY, Editor and Proprietor.
J. C. CADDELL, Agent and Correspondent.

"What Baptists Believe," by the late J. L. Burrows, will be given to every new subscriber to the Biblical Recorder who will pay $2.00 in advance for a years' subscription. We will also give the book to every old subscriber who will pay his subscription to date and a year in advance.

Think of it! Your denominational paper, the subscription price of which is $2.00, one year, and a neatly bound book of over a hundred pages, containing a clear and fair expression of what Baptists believe and practice, all for the price of the paper.

Remember, this offer is to new and old subscribers alike.

THE SABBATH QUESTION.

Active efforts are now being made in certain quarters to persuade the Christian world that they have gone awry on the Sabbath question by adopting the first day of the week instead of the seventh as the Christian Sabbath. The continual, or rather periodic revival of this question, and the hot discussions that are indulged in by newspaper and magazine writers, reminds us of the fact that each generation of people are fond of reviving, discussing, and settling again, questions often discussed and virtually settled before. Often some young and ambitious men imagine that they have struck a heavy and rich vein of theology that by all means ought to be worked, and they are astonished at the stupidity of their predecessors who permitted to pass unnoticed that which they imagine they have found. So they rush into print, and have a stirring time in discussing things discussed, and perhaps settled, long before they were born.

Then, again, there are sects of Christians that have hardly more than one prominent peculiarity that may distinguish them from other Christians, and they persistently emphasize the main point of difference in order that some good reason may be given for separate organization. From causes such as the above, we have a constant recurrence of questions, the continual discussion of which becomes rather monotonous. The Sabbath question ought to be considered as settled; but as it is now again a mooted one, it is necessary for those who hold to what is now called the Christian Sabbath should from time to time give a reason for the "faith that is in them." There are reasons, then, why we, with the large majority of the Christian world, contend for the observance of the first day of the week, instead of the seventh, as the Christian Sabbath. Some of these we proceed to give, reminding our readers that we do not presume to exhaust the list, and that we do not attempt a full discussion of the subject. Let these suffice for the present:—

1. Christ was Lord of the Sabbath day, and had a perfect right to change it from the seventh to the first day of the week. We are aware of the fact that the seventh day of the week was the Jewish Sabbath; that the moral law, and hence the ten commandments, are still binding; but as the word sabbath in Hebrew means rest, and as the Lord seems simply to enjoin one day in seven as a day of rest, who shall say that Christ was not simply "fulfilling the law" when he so ordered things in his providence that the first day has taken the place of the seventh? Some one may say that he nowhere gave express command to that effect. Admitting this to be true, we must remember that Christ taught both by precept and by example. The command to observe the Sabbath had already been given, and surely he who gave it had a right to change the exact day of its observance; otherwise he would not be Lord of the Sabbath day.

2. Closely allied with the above reason, we may again state that the change in question is clearly justifiable from apostolic teaching and example. It is an undoubted fact that the apostles and early Christians did meet together habitually on the first day of the week for prayer, for the preaching of the word, for the observance of the ordinances, for the contribution of their means to build up the Lord's kingdom—in short, for religious work and worship. See Acts [illegible] and other passages like it. It is also a fact that Paul taught Christians [illegible] commanded the observance of the Sabbath in the manner taught by example, and those of other [illegible] under obligation to [illegible] the old Jewish Sabbath [illegible] upon the apostles [illegible] about they assembled ed among the early churches has the undoubted stamp of divine authority upon it. It is utterly unreasonable to suppose that the early Christians, including Christ's apostles, adopted the first day as the Christian Sabbath, and that even the converts from among the Jews, later on, abandoned the Jewish Sabbath for the Christian Sabbath if the change had not been according to the mind and the will of the Lord.

3. Another reason may be found in the fact that the great mass of reliable historians bear testimony to the change contended for in the earliest history of the church. Up to A. D. 70, when Jerusalem was destroyed, many of the Jews had kept both the Jewish and Christian Sabbath; but from that time on nearly all Christians, even those among the Jews, abandoned the observance of the seventh day. John, in Rev. 1: 10, says, "I was in the spirit on the Lord's day," and as John wrote about A. D. 95 or 96, it is evident that the "Lord's day" here means the Christian Sabbath; for five or six years later Ignatius wrote to the Magnesians, and speaks of the Christians as "no longer observing the Sabbath (Jewish), but living in the observance of the 'Lord's day,' on which also our life has sprung up again, (referring to Christ's resurrection), by him and by his death." It follows "beyond all question," as has been remarked by an able writer, "the change from the seventh to the first day of the week was pointed out by Christ, and grew up under apostolic teaching and example, and the inspiration of the Holy Spirit."

We are aware of the fact that the testimony of secular historians has not the same force as Scripture language or Scripture precedent; but such testimony is not to be ignored, especially when it is backed by incidental Scripture passages that clearly sustain it. The truth of it is, that when men have a hobby to ride, or a doctrine to sustain, they make a great outcry over the scantiest Scripture encouragement they can find to sustain their views, and the testimony of partisan, obscure, and prejudiced historians, becomes to them very valuable. The reason for this is so obvious that it needs no explanation. And it will not do for those who contend for the observance of the seventh day as the Sabbath to beg the question by contending that the observance of the Christian Sabbath was not fixed in the early days of Christianity, but is the result of the decrees of subservient councils, at the dictation of a despotic master, in the days when primitive Christianity had become corrupted. The observance of the Christian Sabbath was settled long before the Roman metropolitan had any special control over his confreres of other cities or provinces. This fact is as well established as any fact can be in both sacred and profane history. The question, then, may be safely left where it is, especially in this age when Sabbath desecration is becoming too common.

REV. F. H. IVEY, D. D., DEAD.

It is with sadness and regret that we record the death of Dr. F. H. Ivey of Augusta, Ga. He died on last Friday morning, May 5th, at his home in Augusta, and was buried at Fayetteville, N. C., on Sunday. Dr. T. E. Skinner of Raleigh, N. C., conducted the funeral services.

Dr. Ivey was born in Fayetteville, N. C., in 1831, and graduated from Wake Forest in 1860. He was pastor of the Baptist church in Athens, Ga., nine years, and was pastor of the Goldsboro Baptist church in North Carolina for several years, after which he again went to Georgia, in which State he labored till his death, at which time he was pastor of a church in Augusta, Ga. Dr. Ivey was a strong preacher, and delighted in bringing out the richness of the truths of the gospel, the force of which he always seemed to feel himself, and hence easily imparted it to his hearers. As a pastor he was sympathetic, and always interested in his flock, and never failed to draw his people to him. He was a vigorous writer, which is partly attributed to his early training in the old Fayetteville Observer office under E. J. Hale. A true and faithful minister of the gospel and an earnest servant of God has been called from his labors among us to his rest and reward in heaven. May God's blessing rest upon his bereaved wife and daughter.

Rev. Lansing Burrows, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist church, Augusta, Ga., writes us the following, under date May 5th, 1893, in reference to Bro. Ivey's death:—

"Just past the midnight the spirit of my co-pastor and friend, Fitz Henry Ivey, D. D., entered into the reward of the righteous. He was a friend in the early part of my life while a student at Wake Forest, and it was my privilege to have him as a friend and co-laborer in these last days. He had been stricken with paralysis three weeks since, just after he had engaged in his usual Sabbath work in the Curtis church, and his life slowly ebbed away, until he fell peacefully on sleep. From the paralytic stroke there followed a softening of the brain, so that his last week of life was spent in unconsciousness. From the first it was with difficulty that he could make known the few wishes that he expressed. The attempts to do this ceased, and he lay free from pain until the light faded more and more into the deep slumber from which his Master shall awaken him on the glad morn of his coming. His wife and daughter, after a simple service in his church, and amid his own people who revered and loved him, will bear his body to his old home at Fayetteville, to be laid to rest amid the scenes of his youth."

QUERY.

Ought a brother to be ordained to the office of pastor or deacon by a Baptist church, who does not take and read a religious paper of his denomination? ENQUIRER.

ANSWER.—No. If he is too poor to take a paper, the church ought to give him the paper.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

REIDSVILLE.

There is no place in the State where I do my work easier than in Reidsville. I was on my way to the Sunday-school Association at Leaksville, and so was permitted to spend Sunday with the Reidsville brethren. I always deem it a real privilege to attend the Reidsville Sunday-school when an opportunity offers. I see there a practical demonstration of the work which the brethren talk so nicely about at our Sunday-school associations and conventions. Dr. Rominger, who for years has been the superintendent of the school, seems to grow in his methods of doing his work as well as in zeal for the Sunday-school work generally. It was not without significance to me that there were almost as many people at Sunday-school as there were at the sermon at eleven o'clock.

Bro. Howard, the pastor, preached two splendid sermons, which I enjoyed very much. His sermons were well conceived, and from first to last the evidences of careful preparation and honest work on the part of the preacher were seen.

The time I spent in the town only enabled me to avail myself of a part of the kind invitations to visit the homes of the brethren. I always make headquarters at the excellent boarding-house of Mrs. M. A. Allen, "Bachelor's Retreat," but spent my time with the brethren generally. The ideals which these bachelors have of domestic felicity, while at a great discount, show some appreciation of what is excellent, even by remaining where they are, and making a sort of modern Sanhedrim where the law, the political forum, journalism, pedagogics, &c., are represented. I found Bro. Fant keeping house all alone, or at least he felt so, Mrs. Fant having been summoned by telegram to visit her sister who was quite sick in South Carolina, and who has since died. I always feel some special interest in the church here, it being the one with which I first united. We are slow to forget the old mother church and the place of our baptism.

HIGH POINT

is one of the growing towns of the State. The manufacturing, which is now extensive, is more varied here than almost any town I know. The population has increased greatly in the last few years. The Baptist interest here was never so prosperous before. The church highly appreciate the pastor for his earnest preaching as well as for his faithful work as their pastor. They hope to soon have a meeting of days, at which they expect to have Bro. Thomas of Greensboro.

SALISBURY.

Here Bro. N. S. Jones is supremely happy and has been for the past two months. At the meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention last year, he found an Alabama girl whose golden curls were a little too much for him. She pleased him well. Since that time he has induced her to come as far as Salisbury, N. C., toward her ancestral home on the "sacred soil." Bro. Jones says she helps him greatly in all his work and for the life of him he cannot see how he got on at all without her.

It goes without saying that this is a hard field, but to me it is obvious that great progress has been made within the past few years. Dr. Pritchard preached to the church on Sunday before I was there, and I learned was greatly pleased at what he saw.

Bro. Austin held a splendid meeting there a few weeks ago, which Bro. Jones thinks greatly benefited his people. Bro. Austin's methods of conducting a meeting are not calculated to bring in great crowds, yet they are just such as some of our brethren might study with great profit to the churches.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

The Sunday-school Association for the Pilot Mountain Association met with the church at Leaksville on Friday before the fifth Sunday in April. From the organization of this body three years ago, enough of the churches have shown interest in the work to make its meetings interesting and profitable to the different Sunday-schools represented. Last year when we met at Mt. Airy, the exercises were good and did much to stimulate the brethren to do what they have the past year.

More churches and Sunday-schools were represented at our last meeting than at any previous one. The Association had on hand about three hundred dollars, which, at the close of the last meeting, the Executive Committee disposed of by appropriating fifty dollars to the State Mission work in their own Association, and with the balance employ a colporter to distribute literature among the Sunday schools, and do such other work as the Executive Committee may direct. These brethren are anxious to secure the services of a good man to do this work. The right man can get work, and at the same time will have a splendid opportunity to make himself useful.

The program was appropriate and suggestive of the design of the meeting.

"The Church and Sunday-school" was discussed by Rev. L. R. Pruett and T. S. Sprinkle. Brother Pruett made a clear and forcible speech, as he usually does, on the church as it is related to the Sunday school. Bro. Sprinkle, taking the side that related to the Sunday-school, at once impressed his hearers that he was a well equipped and zealous Sunday-school worker.

Rev. H. A. Brown preached the introductory sermon on Friday night from the text, "Whom having not seen ye love, in whom though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory." No better account can ever be given of Brother Brown's sermons than to say he preached the gospel in its purity and simplicity. On this occasion he was very tender as he told of the love, faith and joy which ought to characterize those who follow the Master.

Dr. L. G. Broughton led the discussion on "Teaching the Lesson." He has an earnest and aggressive style of speaking, which tends to bring out brethren on the other side sometimes. Bro. Broughton has developed greatly as a speaker within the last year. Dr. W. J. Conrad, being absent, Bro. D. F. King acted in his place, and spoke with the conservatism born of good business ability and in a spirit which has enabled him to be a great power in his church and association.

"The Primary Department" was discussed by Rev. W. H. Wilson and Bro. W. A. Cooper. Bro. Wilson seems just now to be thoroughly at home on this subject, and was listened to with interest by the Association. Bro. Cooper is the teacher for this department in Broad Street church, Winston, and while he disclaims any gifts at speech-making, yet in his own way he gave out some very practical and valuable hints as to how he does his work.

The program was closed by some exercises conducted by Rev. J. B. Richardson in reference to the extension of the Sunday-school work by forming institutes, &c.

Sunday morning, after the Sunday-school exercises were over, Rev. S. W. Hall was asked to make some remarks about the Orphanage. After Brother Hall closed his address, a collection amounting to something over twenty five dollars was taken for this work.

Bro. C. Haymore preached in the Baptist church at eleven o'clock. The sermon was one of great power. I heard a number of the brethren remark that they had seldom seen a congregation so wrought upon. It was the starting of what seemed to be a great revival. At the close of the sermon, some forty persons arose for prayer. This seems to me to be a fitting way to close all of our meetings of this sort. Let our representative men, who attend our associations, talk more about God and less about men; have more of his Spirit in our plans, and then we shall be directed in our methods, and we shall give more, and do it not as a duty but as a privilege and a blessing.

I want to thank the Leaksville people, through the Recorder—for every one who attended this delightful gathering—for the kind and hospitable treatment we received at their hands. Everything was done that could be to make us comfortable and pleasant throughout the entire session.

The Green River Sunday-school Association at Mountain Creek last Friday, Saturday and Sunday was a good one, as hundreds can testify. —Claude E. Gower.

....Rev. A. W. Crabtree, one of the missionaries of our Board, says: "I have just bought the lumber for our house of worship at Oak Grove. We expect to build this summer. I lost my horse, worth $125, in March, and have since been walking to my appointments part of the time. I am not able to purchase another horse now. I have ten weeks in special meetings engaged or promised. These meetings will be held in July, August and September."

....Rev. J. A. Summey is a noble man, and as far from selfishness as the east is from the west. He was until recently the beloved pastor of Rich Fork church, but often spoke of men who could do better than he could, and proposed to resign that some other man might be called. At the last church meeting day he proposed to several members to resign. Instead of following the usual course, and insisting on his continuance, they concurred with him, and so he resigned and another man was elected. There was a general surprise. We were not present, and had no part in it. But we advise pastors to talk as little as possible about resigning. Like Daniel, stand on your lot till the end of the days.—Charity and Children.

Nine persons received the ordinance of baptism in the First Baptist church, Raleigh, on Sunday last—four in the morning and five at night. Just preceding the administration of the Lord's supper, the right hand of fellowship was extended to thirty-seven new members—seven of whom had been received by letter, and the remainder by baptism.

Littleton Items.

Bro. R. VanDeventer was here with the pastor, Dr. John Mitchell, during the past week assisting in a series of meetings. He remained with us eight days, preaching twice a day. His manner of conducting these services seemed to be beyond criticism. The Spirit worked with him from the beginning, and souls were converted at nearly every meeting. There was no excitement, but when everything was quiet, one after another would come forward and give him his hand, thus asking for prayer, or in this way confessing Christ. His audiences, good at first, increased till the house could not contain them. His preaching was heart-searching and sympathetic, showing so much love for the sinner that they were drawn to the minister, and so much of Christ in his sermons, that eighteen or twenty souls were brought to Jesus.

On Sunday night ten of these were received by the pastor for baptism. The whole church seems to be revived, and we feel that the effects of this meeting will remain for years to come.

Bro. VanDeventer leaves a host of friends who look forward to meeting him again in July. On Thursday before the fifth Sunday in July there will be a Union of Unions held with the church at this place. We are anticipating a good time. Come to the meeting, brethren.

There are some improvements being added to our church. Heretofore we have had to go some distance to find a suitable place for baptism. Now we are adding a baptistery and dressing rooms in the rear of the building. The pulpit will be over the baptistery, thus giving space in the body of the church for two or three more pews. We need all the space we can get. The house is generally crowded when we have preaching.

We have a live Sunday-school with an attendance of sixty or eighty.

Hon. J. C. Scarborough will address the students of Littleton High School on the evening of May 24. The closing exercises of this institution will occur on the evening of May 25. This has been a very prosperous year for the school. B.

Wake Forest Commencement Banquet.

The Wake Forest Local Alumni Association will give a banquet on Wednesday evening, May 31, of Commencement to the general Alumni Association of Wake Forest College. All old students are considered members of this Association and are cordially invited, whether graduates or not.

We desire a reunion of all Wake Forest men. A very attractive program has been arranged for the occasion, and a large attendance is expected.

Mr. A. Dughi, the well-known caterer of Raleigh, will be in charge of the banquet.

It is important that all those who expect to attend will send their names to the Committee that proper arrangements may be made. E. W. Sikes, for Committee.

Resolutions.

At the Baptist Union Meeting at Eagle's church, Edgecombe county, last week, the following resolutions were adopted relative to the appropriation by the State to the University at Chapel Hill:

We, the Baptists of the Roanoke Union, do earnestly resolve—

1. That we protest against being taxed for the support of the State University, so long as it is in hurtful competition with denominational colleges.

2. That we protest against being taxed for the education either of ministers or the sons of ministers.

3. That we protest against being taxed for the support of an orphanage, so long as it is under the control of any secret society or any christian denomination.

Owing to the pressure on our columns this week, we are compelled to omit the insertion of some obituaries and other matter. We will print these next week.

From Dr. O. E. Taylor.

A VISIT TO BETHEL HILL,

last week, was the fulfillment of a hope which had long been entertained. Never did the sun shine more brightly, or the fresh foliage of the trees and the wild flowers of the fields appear more beautiful than on the lonely April morning on which I rode over the fertile hills of Person from Woodsdale to Bro. Beam's diocese. And yet my heart was heavy in the midst of brightness and bloom, for again and again my thoughts reverted, with a sense of personal bereavement, to our irreparable loss in the death of Bro. W. H. Pace. Of this I cannot write now; but I hope to do so in the near future.

Several hours in Bethel Hill Academy, during which I had the pleasure of hearing several classes recite, convinced me more than ever before of the thoroughness of the instruction given by Bro. Beam and his assistants. We have a number of excellent Baptist academies in North Carolina, and there is no one of them to which a parent can more safely entrust a boy or girl while preparing for college or seminary than to Bro. Beam's. Eight young ministers are in the Academy—men of piety and exceptional promise. The atmosphere of the school is that of a sweet Christian home. The school itself is an object lesson from which the people of Person county can learn what "Christian education" is. The Academy needs better equipment, and I shall be greatly disappointed if the people of the neighborhood do not, within a few months, erect and furnish such a building as the Academy needs.

The occasion of my visit was a meeting of the Local Alumni Association of Wake Forest College. The gentlemen of this organization have gotten hold of the right idea. They wish to help every educational interest in Person county and to stimulate the people to pay more attention to the education of their children. Last Saturday was a field day. Bright and forcible addresses were delivered by Rev. M. Shields, the Presbyterian minister of Roxboro, Rev. Frank Watson, Rev. G. T. Watkins, and Mr. W. W. Kitchen. The day's work cannot but be fertilizing for years to come. On Sunday, Bro. Watson, Bro. Beam, and several of the young men spoke on the education of the ministry and on doctrinal training of the young. There was also a sermon at eleven o'clock. The next meeting is to be at Clement's church on the fifth Lord's day in July. Why should not other Local Associations hold public meetings whose aim should be, not merely, or even primarily, the helping of Wake Forest, but a revival of local enthusiasm in all educational work?

DURHAM,

despite the financial disasters of a few years ago, is still the magic city of North Carolina. Evidences of thrift and prosperity abound on every side, and one is told by those who have the right to know that the outlook for healthful expansion was never so hopeful as now.

It was a great pleasure to worship with the First church on Sunday night, to see the great congregation, to hear the admirable sermon of Brother Tyree, and to grasp the hands of many of the sisters and brethren.

HENDERSON.

Only a couple of hours between trains, but long enough to share the ever bountiful hospitality of Bro. Lassiter, to talk over the Regulator War with Bro. Pittman, the embryo historian, to exchange greetings with Bro. VanDeventer, and to hear from several brethren appreciative expressions about the sermons of Bro. Mitchell and Bro. Spence.

WAKE FOREST.

How cool and restful the campus looks to a hot and weary traveller! The last winter was a trying ordeal to our shrubbery. A few evergreens were killed and must be replaced, but the rest have felt and responded to the breath of spring. Cordial greetings with my honored colleagues. A busy morning with a big pile of correspondence. A meeting with the Wake Forest Scientific Society at which a tired man tried to popularize a difficult subject and pitied his audience. Then off to

HERTFORD AND BERTIE.

Fortunate indeed we are to have in Eastern North Carolina such female Colleges as the Oxford Seminary and the Chowan Institute and such men at their head as Brethren Hobgood and Brewer. I could only see the latter on this trip, and it was no small pleasure to be his companion in a forty mile buggy ride to Aulander and back. The Institute is prospering, as it deserves to be. The next class of "sweet girl graduates" will be one of the largest in the long history of the institution.

AULANDER,

where only ten years ago there was scarcely a village, is now one of the most attractive towns in Eastern Carolina. And I have seldom seen anywhere a more intelligent audience than that which gathered to greet the Teachers' Association of Northampton, Hertford, and Bertie on yesterday. The large and well-appointed building of the Female Academy was a delightful surprise to me. The school, under the wise administration of Miss Chetta Darden, is already beyond the experimental stage and is a pronounced success. And the same may be said of Prof. Reese's excellent Academy for boys. The Association was presided over by Prof. Boggs of Windsor, and stirring addresses were made by him and Messrs. Mitchell, Scarboro, Shaw, Brewer, and others. It was not a Baptist meeting, of course, but it would be hard to attend any sort of a meeting in Bertie without meeting the brethren. And it is a bright day when one can look into the faces of such co-workers as Early and Curtis and Kennedy and the Mitchells and a score of others. The memory of the night spent in the home of our venerable Bro. Mitchell between Murfreesboro and Aulander will abide as a pleasing possession. Educational interest is at high tide at Aulander, as it is, I rejoice to believe in many localities in the State. It is specially gratifying to discern the increased interest of many of our Baptist people in the education of their sons and daughters. Almost everywhere I meet young men and boys who expect within a few years to attend Wake Forest College.

GOOD NEWS.

Just as I was on the eve of leaving home, I received a telegram from New York containing the offer of five thousand dollars for the "Royal Chair" on condition that we raise $20,000. And already a few unsolicited subscriptions have begun to come in. Concerning which there may be more to be said hereafter. C. E. Taylor.

Oxford Seminary Commencement.

CHANGE OF DATE AND AMENDED PROGRAM.

Dear Editor:—Will you please publish the following which is made necessary by recent action of the Faculty of Wake Forest College.

On account of the conflict of dates of the commencement exercises of Wake Forest College and those of Oxford Seminary, made by a recent decision of the Faculty of Wake Forest to change the date from the second Thursday in June, as published in their catalogue, to the first Thursday in June, we have found it necessary to make a change in our dates. Our exercises will begin as heretofore advertised on Sunday night, May 28, and will close on Tuesday night, May 30, instead of on Wednesday night, as heretofore advertised. [See amended program below.] This arrangement will make it possible for visitors to Oxford to leave on Wednesday morning in time to attend the evening exercises at Wake Forest.

From the number of names already sent in, we are expecting a large number of former students. We are prepared to entertain all who will come.

AMENDED PROGRAM.

The following is an amended program of the Commencement exercises of Oxford Female Seminary:

Sunday 8 p. m.—Baccalaureate sermon by Rev. T. G. Jones, D. D., Norfolk, Va.
Monday 10 a. m.—Concert.
Monday 5 to 7 p. m.—Art exhibit.
Monday 8:30 p. m.—Physical Culture and Calliopean Society: Address before the Society by Rev. W. E. Hatcher, D. D., Richmond, Va.
Tuesday 10 a. m.—Class day.
Tuesday 3 to 5 p. m.—Reunion of former students.
Tuesday 9 to 12 p. m.—Social gathering complimentary to graduating class.

F. P. Hobgood.

Oxford, May 1, 1893.

Those Pledges.

Will all who made pledges to the Board of Education at the Convention in December please forward the amounts to Bro. J. D. Boushall, Treasurer, Raleigh, N. C. These pledges were to be paid by the first of June. Without these amounts and more besides, it will be exceedingly difficult for us to get through the remaining weeks till the commencement.

Brethren, please send relief as promptly as you can; for our creditors are calling on us to pay them. W. R. Gwaltney.

Wake Forest, N. C.

Preparing to Build at New Prospect.

The people at New Prospect are preparing for a new church. Any one who feels like helping, we will be glad to have it.

Rev. J. Gwaltney is doing good work there. The Sunday school is very promising. Young people, attend Sunday-school: it will do you good. H. L. S.

A Card.

In calling attention to our celebrated Roller Tray, which is the most convenient and strongest trunk made and which is made in every way superior to the ordinary trunk, we beg to say that we warrant it the best, and that we will do any necessary repairs to them free of charge.

Very respectfully,
H. W. Rountree & Bro.

Children's Day.

The annual return of Children's Day, or "Floral Sunday," as some call it, gives opportunity for a much needed education about denominational work, as well as a pleasant gathering for music and song and worship. The program prepared for this year will be found attractive and instructive. If your school is not already supplied, send to C. C. Bitting, D. D., 1420 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., for programs that are furnished free on the condition that, when used, a contribution be made for the Sunday-school work of the American Baptist Publication Society.

Acknowledgments.

[The Treasurer requests that when money is sent, that the name of the contributing church, society, or individual, and the object for which the money is intended, be clearly stated. This will serve to prevent mistakes in the acknowledgment, and save the time, correspondence and printing to correct them.]

The following named Associations, so far as we can learn from the minutes, appointed no delegates:

Anson, Ashe and Alleghany, Beulah, Brushy Mountain, Cedar Creek, Chowan, Eastern, Flat River, Little River, Mecklenburg and Cabarrus, Montgomery, Richmond, South Yadkin, Stanly, Stony Fork, Tar River, Three Forks, Union, Yadkin.

In order that all delegates and their friends en route to Nashville may travel in a body, arrangements have been made with the Richmond & Danville railroad to run special Pullman sleeper from Raleigh or Greensboro to Atlanta, for their accommodation. We will only be en route one night and have no change of cars between Atlanta and Nashville, affording us daylight ride between later points.

Rates given by all Southern lines is fare and one-third for the round trip.

Tickets will be sold May 9th, 10th and 11th, good to return until May 25th.

Leave Raleigh, May 9, via R. & D. R. R., 4:40 p. m.; leave Greensboro, May 9, via R. & D. R. R., 8:10 p. m.; leave Salisbury, May 9, via R. & D. R. R., 9:55 p. m.; leave Charlotte, May 9, via R. & D. R. R., 11:30 p. m.; arrive Atlanta, May 10, via R. & D. R. R., 8:15 a. m.; arrive Chattanooga, May 10, via W. & A. R. R., 1:30 p. m.; arrive Nashville, May 10, via N. C. & St. L. R. R., 7:30 p. m.

All who expect to attend the Convention will please advise me at once, stating at what point they will join the delegation and what sleeping car space is desired, in order that same may be reserved.

For information as to round trip rates from any point, schedule, etc., not named above, write Mr. Charles L. Hopkins, Traveling Passenger Agent Richmond & Danville Railroad, Charlotte, N. C.

Return tickets to Chicago, to such delegates, from Nashville, $20. Should there be ten or more, all on same ticket, the rates will be about $18.75 each.

The round-trip rate to Nashville, on account of Southern Baptist Convention, will be $23.35 from Goldsboro, Selma, Raleigh, Cary, Durham, Henderson, Oxford, Fayetteville and Wilmington; $21.00 from Greensboro, Winston, Reidsville and Danville; $20.90 from Salisbury and Charlotte; $16.45 from Asheville; $17.85 from Hendersonville.

C. Durham, Cor. Sec.

The train via Seaboard Air Line leaves Raleigh at 8.30 p. m., arriving at Nashville next evening at 7:30. Through Pullman service, with only one change of cars.

Southern Baptist Convention.

The thirty-eighth session (38th year) of the Southern Baptist Convention will be held with the Baptist churches in the city of Nashville, Tenn., beginning Friday, May 12th, 1893, at 10 a. m. Preacher of annual sermon, Rev. W. E. Hatcher, D. D., of Virginia; alternate, Rev. J. Morgan Wells, D. D., of Texas.

Lansing Burrows,
Oliver F. Gregory,
Secretaries S. B. C.

RAILROAD RATES

I am advised by the L. & N. that a rate of one fare for the round trip is in effect to Nashville, account Southern Baptist Convention, from all points on that line; and also by the N. C. and St. L. that a rate of one fair is in effect from all points on their line west of Chattanooga, inclusive; south of Chattanooga and from other points not on the line of the L. & N. or N. C. & St. L. the rate is one and one-third fare to L. & N. or N. C. & St. L. junction points, plus one fare to Nashville.

A rate of one fare has been granted by all railroads in Texas.

All other lines, so far as heard from, grant a rate of a fare and one-third, on the certificate plan. The Southern Passenger Association has not announced any special rates yet. As it will be too late to publish another card, delegates are requested to inquire at railroad station, and if special rates have not been made, to write me at once.

O. F. Gregory,
Sec'y in charge Transportation.

In arranging for the coming session of the Southern Baptist Convention in this city, the committee desires to have as soon as possible the names of all persons knowing themselves to be delegates, either of the Convention or the Woman's Missionary Union or the Education Society. We wish in sending out this notice to call special attention to the following points:

1. We will make ample provision for entertaining only accredited delegates. This rule will be rigidly adhered to.

2. As we expect to furnish homes to all delegates, we will not be responsible for any bills made for entertainment at hotels.

3. All delegates who may prefer hotel accommodations at their own expense and will write to the committee to that effect, will have the very best possible arrangements made for them.

4. The committee will be glad to furnish any information or to make any arrangements at boarding houses and hotels for all visitors who may request it.

5. A special committee on reception will meet all trains and furnish information and assistance to both delegates and visitors.

The careful observance of these rules will greatly facilitate the work of the committee and add to the comfort of the great crowd which we are expecting.

BOARDING HOUSE RATES.

Maxwell House (headquarters) $3.00; Duncan Hotel, $2.00; Commercial [illegible] Hotel, $1.00; boarding generally from $1.00 to $1.[illegible] names, please address [illegible] man. W. [illegible]

Among our Friends in North Carolina.

A kind invitation from Wake Forest College that we repeat before the professors and students of that institution a talk made some time ago to William and Mary College led us, a few days ago, into the dear old North State. The first point at which we stopped was where we had to "lie over" for the night. We found Bro. Vandeventer holding a protracted meeting, aided by pastor Taylor, of Warrenton. It was pleasant to sit back and hear the latter preach a good gospel sermon and to see a great congregation listen with unflagging attention to the word spoken.

What a work pastor Vandeventer has done in Henderson, and how well he is honored and loved by the good people of the town! Such a man is sure to be in demand, but he would hesitate to encourage churches to call him, simply and solely because he is so much needed in Henderson. The useful years spent by him there fit him for even greater things in the coming years, if the town should continue to grow as it has done during its brief history. An hour's ride brought us to an institution which has troops of good friends within and without its State. What a shining history it has, and yet it seems only to have entered upon its great mission. Its past is secure and its future is bright. Little did the Rev. William Hooper know what a great thing he was doing when in 1833 he presented to the North Carolina Baptist Convention a report recommending "the establishment of a Baptist literary institution in this State." In 1835 the College opened, with Rev. Samuel Waitt, D. D., as president. He was succeeded by Dr. William Hooper in 1846, and he by Rev. J. B. White, D. D. In 1849 Rev. W. M. Wingate, D. D., followed Prof. W. H. Owen, who had been president pro tem. for two years. After that came Rev. T. H. Pritchard, D. D. Rev. C. E. Taylor, D. D., followed Rev. W. B. Royall, D. D., the chairman of the faculty from June, 1883, to November, 1883.

In 1865 the endowment was $11,700; now it is about $300,000, besides the large amounts spent in valuable buildings and in other improvements. Wake Forest has a large and enthusiastic faculty, and every man of them is eager to do all in his power to enlarge the influence of the College. They are not waiting for other people to work up a patronage for them. They are doing it for themselves.

We had the pleasure of hearing a very entertaining lecture from Prof. W. L. Poteat, on "Movement in Plants." His original investigations in biology and in kindred studies have made him favorably known among the prominent scientists of the country. And other Wake Forest professors are winning for themselves a good name.

OXFORD.

We had to "lie over" a night here, too, and talk with pastor J. S. Hardaway and some of his good people about sundry matters. Bro. Hardaway drove us to the Oxford Orphan Asylum, where there are two hundred and thirty orphans, one-fourth of whom are of Baptist parentage. The Grand Lodge of Masons in this State own and control this institution, and the State pays them $10,000 a year to help pay expenses. The principal, Dr. Black, is an ex-presiding elder of the Methodist Episcopal church.

We made the Oxford Female Seminary our home, and a more delightful home it would be difficult to find. Prof. F. P. Hobgood we have known "since the war"—that's far enough back to go—and, in common with multitudes who know him, we have counted it an honor to number him in our list of friends. He is a man of noble and generous impulses, and is a superb teacher. His school this session gives a good illustration of what Prof. Hobgood can do. His great building is well nigh filled, and there is no telling how many he will have next session. The Oxford Seminary will be fifty years old at the close of this session, when there is to be a great celebration, with addresses from Drs. T. G. Jones and W. E. Hatcher and others. It will be an inspiring occasion surely.

WHAT DR. MARSH THINKS ABOUT SEVERAL THINGS.

In reply to our request that he lay before the readers of the Religious Herald his views as to several matters of public interest, Rev. R. H. Marsh, D. D., president of the North Carolina Baptist State Convention, said: "I do not expect to meet you at Nashville, and yet possibly I may do so. I feel a deep interest in the questions which will face the Convention at its approaching meeting. You may say that, in my judgment, the Convention should respond to the demand for the most rigid economy in the conduct of its work. I am the pastor of four country churches, and I know how our country brethren feel. Anything the Convention may wisely do looking to a reduction of working expenses will be gratefully received by them, and give the boards of the Convention additional influence with the churches. Mark you, I am not prepared to say that I advocate abolishing the assistant secretaryship. I would like to know more of the facts in regard to that before deciding for or against. But I do not hesitate to say that, if we can do as well without such an expense, we ought to make the change. You brethren who live in the cities little know how hard the times are with country pastors and country churches, nor do you know how little these is to cheer them in the outlook. The reasons for all this I might give here, but it is not necessary to do so."

[illegible] tell us about the movement championed by brethren Boring and Purkiss. [illegible] materially the receipts of our Mission Board?"

Ans.: "It may for a time. You [illegible] it is to deter people from [illegible] any cause will answer. [illegible] thing must or to be feared in the discussions now going on in my State. In my opinion, the thing for every Baptist to do is to stand by the Board. There ought to be no secession, but if changes ought to be made let them be made, and if the Board stands in the way of making them we can make the Board stand aside and elect other brethren to represent us. We have an opportunity of doing that at every meeting of the Convention. But, from all I can learn on the subject, we have no better men than those who now compose the Board. I wish my brethren here and in every State would take this view of the matter and stand firmly by the Foreign Mission Board. Mark you, I have not a word to say against brethren Herring and Bostick. They are good men, but I think as to this particular thing they are making a mistake, and are weakening the very agency on which we must rely for carrying out our Lord's command to preach the gospel to every creature. They will probably find when they organize their new agency the same kind of difficulties which now confront our boards, and it will be so as long as people are quick to promise and slow to perform. I wish these two brethren every blessing, but I think they are working at a very risky experiment."

Rev. J. S. Hardaway, when asked for a word, replied: "We have in this town four Baptist ministers, not counting myself, and three of them preceded me in the pastoral care of this church, and all three of these are as warm and helpful friends as I have. While they have churches of their own (and a good many of them), they let no opportunity pass unimproved for helping their own pastor. Two of these old pastors (brethren R. I. Deven and R. H. Marsh) and their families give $1,000 to our new church venture, and to Rev. C. A. Jenkins and Rev. J. A. Stradley I am under obligation for countless favors." What good news that is from the dear Virginia boy whose mother died praying that he might be a preacher of the blessed gospel of God!

Rev. R. H. Marsh, D. D., in telling us about the struggle that is being make by the Baptists of Oxford to complete their new church, added: "I reminded my pastor (Rev. J. S. Hardaway) when he began of the saying that the next thing to do after building a new house is to resign and leave others to preach in it; but I feel very sure that he will be an exception to the rule. It is the imprudent things that a pastor often does under the stress of building, and not the new house, which makes his resignation a thing to be desired, and Bro. Hardaway has not yet learned how to do an imprudent thing."

This new Oxford Baptist church when completed will cost, lot and all, about $16,000; but it will be a gem.—Religious Herald.

Put to Flight

—all the peculiar troubles that beset a woman. The only guaranteed remedy for them is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. For women suffering from any chronic "female complaint" or weakness; for women who are run down and overworked; for women expecting to become mothers, and for mothers who are nursing and exhausted; at the change from girlhood to womanhood; and later, at the critical "change of life"—it is a medicine that safely and certainly builds up, strengthens, regulates and cures.

If it doesn't, if it even fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

What you are sure of, if you use Doctor Sage's Catarrh Remedy, is either a perfect and permanent cure for Catarrh, no matter how bad your case may be, or $500 in cash. The proprietors of the medicine promise to pay you the money, if they can't cure you.

The Late Rev. J. R. Maynard.

Rev. J. R. Maynard departed this life at Morrisville, N. C., on the 24th day of March, 1893; and

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove the soul of our beloved brother and former pastor from earth to heaven; be it

Resolved, first, by New Bethel church, that Rev. J. R. Maynard was an able and faithful preacher, just in all his dealings, true to his obligations, easy and pleasant in his manners, a great lover of charitable work, performing his duties to his God in a fearless and honest manner, and was sincere, just and upright with his fellowmen. Bro. Maynard leaves a large circle of relatives and friends who will always hold in sweet remembrance the beauties of his Christian life. He certainly was a man of God, for from his face there could clearly be seen the glowing radiance of a noble heart full of love for his Maker, and Christian affection for all mankind. Though Bro. Maynard has been called away from us, yet he leaves behind him a glorious influence that will always live to bless those who weep for him. We extend to his wife and children our sympathies, praying that the Most High may guard and protect them.

Resolved, second, That these resolutions be spread upon our church book, and a copy be sent to the family; also one to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

Done by order of the church in conference April 1st, 1893. P. W. DOWD, Com.

Our village and community were shocked, as never before, by a death, on the evening of March 23rd, when it was announced that our much beloved friend and brother, Rev. J. R. Maynard, had died suddenly while laboring in his workshop.

Bro. Maynard was in many respects a remarkable man. Like his Saviour he was always going around doing somebody good. He was fully consecrated, and was untiring in his efforts to elevate fallen humanity and persuade men to accept Christ. He was never happier than when presenting "the way of life" in his plain and simple way to some lost soul. Although deprived of an education and could not in consequence present "the old, old story" as fluently and elegantly as others who had been more fortunate in life, yet it was very evident to those who listened to him that he was full of the Holy Ghost. During his fifteen years of preaching, many were brought to the feet of the Saviour. Many lives have been shaped for good through his influence, and hundreds who knew him no doubt feel the world is better by his having lived in it. "Though he be dead he yet speaketh." He has gone to his Father, and his soul will doubtless vibrate with the sweetest joys of heaven when his enraptured ears hear the "well done" pronounced upon him.

May we all strive to imitate his example, and manifest that zeal and energy in our Master's work that characterized his life. Then shou'd we be called hence even as unexpectedly as he—we will be ready.

A. T. COTTEN.

Morrisville, April 27, 1893.

Habitual Thanksgiving.

I believe that few things would more completely modify our lives than habitual thanksgiving. Continue in prayer, and watch in the same with thanksgiving. Suppose that, instead of confining our grace to one meal in the day, we were each to say in our hearts a little grace after each successive occupation. The business of the field or the office, honestly and punctually performed to the best of our abilities; a kind act which we have been permitted to accomplish, whether with or without self-denial; a study which we have pursued to the enlargement of our minds; a conversation which has aided our own or another's good thoughts, or warmed our kindly sympathies with friendly intercourse; a walk or ride in the fresh air, invigorating brain and limbs—are not all these worth a "grace" as well as the best of good dinners? If we were thus to accustom ourselves to thank God for the innocent pleasures of life, how sharp a line would it force us to draw between them and the guilty ones, for which we could not dare to bless him! After spending hours of idleness when labor was done; after self-indulgence when we might have benefited our brother; after reading bad books; quarreling, slanderous, or unclean talk; meals at which we sunk our souls in gluttony or excess—could we offer thanks after these things to him whose gifts we have polluted? Surely not the most impious among us all.

Thanksgiving, then, would divide as chemical test the evil pleasures from the good. And it would hallow and endear these good ones beyond our conception. To a loving heart even the merest trifle becomes precious when accepted as a token of care for our welfare; and so every pleasure of mortal life may be taken as proving the tender mercy of him whom we may reverence and love beyond the noblest and nearest of all earthly friends. These feelings come to us at all times. There are days (perhaps most commonly when the heart is softened by penitence), blessed days, when we trace everything to God's hand, and are ready to weep in very tenderness for the primrose which has bloomed in our favorite nook or the caresses of the poor dog, which its Maker and ours has made to sympathize so wonderously with our joy and sorrow. O, that we could keep forever fresh such feelings as these! It is not these which are false and exaggerated. It is our ordinary coldness which is a mockery of the great reality of goodness and man's obligations.—Earnest Thoughts for Every Day.

Report on Duty of Churches to Pastors.

READ BEFORE UNION MEETING AT CHERRY GROVE, COLUMBUS COUNTY, APRIL 29, '93.

The duties of churches to pastors are many, and we propose to mention only a few.

1. The duty of a church to support the pastor is clearly taught in both Old and New Testaments. The Lord gave no inheritance to the priests as he did to the tribes, because he intended they should be supported by their brethren. To them belonged the skin or fleece of every animal sacrificed, which was no small revenue. Of peace offerings he kept also the shoulder and breast; and of sin offerings the carcass, except the called fat, which was burnt. They also had the tenth of everything, besides the first fruits. When any man killed an animal for his own use, he was required to give the priest the shoulder. Under the gospel dispensation, God has called men and qualified them by his Holy Spirit to preach his own everlasting gospel, and has definitely taught his churches their duty on this point. The workman is worthy of his meat. How, then, shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent? Who goeth a warfare any time at his own charges? who planteth a vineyard and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock and eateth not of the milk of the flock? If we have sown you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things? Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel.

2. It is clearly taught in the Scriptures that it is the duty of the church and people to hear and respect their pastors. God speaks to Israel to hear. Hear ye the word of the Lord, O house of Jacob, and all the families of the house of Israel. Joshua said unto the children, come hither and hear the words of the Lord your God. God also calls upon individuals to hear his word and obey its teachings. Isaiah said unto Hezekiah, hear the word of the Lord. Therefore, ye shepherds, hear the word of the Lord. He also speaks to all the world to hear his word: Hear this, all ye people, give ear all ye inhabitants of the world. He that hath ears to hear let him hear.

The Saviour was very careful in his parable of the sower, when he said, Take heed how ye hear, and also, Take heed what ye hear. He also speaks concerning those who refuse to hear, when he says: And the Lord hath sent unto you all his servants, the prophets, rising early and sending them, but ye have not hearkened nor inclined your ear to hear; and whosoever shall not receive you nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city shake off the dust of your feet.

3. God has made it the duty for the church to pray often for their pastors: Now I beseech you, brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, and for the love of the Spirit, that ye strive together with me in your prayers to God for me.

Withal praying also for us, that God would open unto us a door of utterance to speak the mystery of Christ, for which I am also in bonds; that I may make it manifest, as I ought to speak.

Respectfully submitted,

A. H. PORTER, Com.

What are the Duties of Pastors to their Churches?

READ BEFORE COLUMBUS UNION MEETING AT CHERRY GROVE ON APRIL 29TH, 1893.

To the correct understanding of this subject, two important facts claim attention. First, what is a church of the New Testament? Second, the pastor's relation to that organization?

First. The word church is used to signify a society of men and women called of God by the gospel out of the world that lieth in wickedness, into the faith, fellowship, obedience and worship of the Lord Christ, and of God in him. In every age Jesus Christ is the church's foundation and head; his oracles are her binding rules of direction; his glory, and the glory of God in him, and the spiritual and eternal salvation of mankind through him, are the ends of her establishment. All persons who are by faith united to his person, sanctified by his indwelling Spirit, and who believe and profess his revealed truths, and are subject to his written ordinances are, in every age, her only true members.

Secondly. Jesus Christ asserts that he is the good shepherd who gave his life for the sheep, and constituted his chosen ministers to minister to his lambs, to feed the flock, watch over them, and in every way endeavor to promote the spiritual life, safety, growth, health and comfort of his covenanted people. This pastoral office and work is described in Scripture as inexpressibly important and solemn. It is at men's infinite hazard if they rush into it without being regenerated in the whole man, after the image of God, the old things having passed away, and all things become new in Christ,—a divine call to preach the word of the Lord, as was the case with Aaron, not seeking the glory of men, but the honor of Christ and his Father in the eternal salvation of souls. Pastors are also denominated bishops who are divinely ordained ambassadors for Christ to beseech men to become reconciled to God, that they become partakers of his holiness and love in this life; that they may become fellow-laborers with the Son of God in preparing a devoted and obedient people for the Lord, in building up his kingdom in the earth; that his stewards of the mysteries and manifold grace of God may be faithful in all things given them in charge; that the covenanted children of God serve the Lord with their spirit, and with much humility in the gospel of his Son; to testify repentance towards God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, keeping back no part of the counsel of God, no profitable instruction, reproof, encouragement in Christian duty to pastors, to the church, to the spread of the gospel to earth's remotest bounds: but to search the Scriptures and glorify God in the soul, body and spirit,—looking for that blessed hope promised to the faithful at the coming of their Lord and Master.

The Charm of Good Manners.

No one who has any appreciation of grace and beauty in nature or in any art can fail to recognize the charm of fine manners in an individual. We rejoice in them as we do in a lovely sunset view, or a beautiful piece of architecture, or a fascinating poem, for their own sake and for what they express; but even beyond this they have another attraction in the magnetic power they exert upon all beholders in setting them at ease, in sweeping away shyness, awkwardness, and restraint, and in stimulating them to the expression of whatever is best worth cherishing within them. It is undoubtedly true that the presence of fine manners, whether it be in the home or the social circle, in the workshop or the counting-room, in the visit of charity or the halls of legislation, has an immediate effect in reproducing itself, in diffusing happiness, in developing the faculties, and in eliciting the best that is in everybody.—Exchange.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

The Chinese Habit of Doing Things Backward.?

We find the Chinese are a peculiar people, odiously practical. Despotically governed, they are abominably free. Ugly in features, they are yet substantial in color and appearance, and make a Caucasian who has his photographs taken with them look milk-and-watery. Proverbially polite, they are impertinently inquisitive. Lovers of proverbial truth, they are a nation of liars. Reliable, substantial, industrious and conservative, they are yet non-committal, lazy, and, to use Mr. DeQuincy's words, "unrelyuponable." They work for nothing and board themselves, supporting their family out of what they can make by such an opportunity.

But one of the most peculiar traits of the Chinese is the way they have of doing things backwards, or diametrically opposite to what we do them in Europe and America.

In America when two persons meet they raise their hats and shake each other's hands; here to raise the hat would be an insult, and each man shakes his own hand.

When a friend or relative dies they wear white mourning instead of black, and allow themselves to become dirty, instead of keeping themselves clean.

They turn to the left when they pass each other on the street, instead of turning to the right.

And when they address their friends they use the family name first and surname last. Thus John Smith in China would be Smith John.

Enter a school and you hear a tremendous noise as of a hundred persons talking at once; it is the pupils studying. They all study aloud.

The carpenter when he uses his line, instead of using dry white chalk, uses wet black ink.

When the women sew, instead of pinning the garment to their knee and sewing toward them, pin it to their bosom and sew from them.

They read down their book instead of across, and from the right side cover toward the left, putting the foot-notes at the top of the page, and running titles along the left side of the leaf; printing on one side of the paper only; folding it at the outer edge, and cutting it along the back.

Instead of blacking their shoes they whiten only the edges of the soles.

They wear their sleeveless garment, corresponding to our vest, entirely on the outside, each outside garment being a little shorter than the one under it; as if our undercoat were longer than our overcoat.

In company they keep their hats on while we take ours off.

We stick the candle into the candlestick and waste about an inch; they stick the candlestick into the candle and burn it all.

Our ladies wear their bangs on their foreheads; the Chinese ladies wear theirs on the back of their necks.

We build the best side of the house toward the street, and very often throw the dirt in the back yard. They build the windowless side of the house outward, and throw all the dirt into the street.—Gospel in All Lands.

Need for Chapels in Mexico.

God "dwelleth not in temples made with hands." Still these words are not to be taken as discouraging the building of houses where his people may meet for his holy worship.

About ten years ago our Board began work in Mexico; but as yet very little has been done in the way of chapel building on the field. With three or four exceptions our congregations worship in hired halls. This is unfortunate, and the time has come when it should be remedied.

We need chapels first, because in many places it is difficult and often impossible to get halls well adapted to public worship. As a rule, few such halls are to be found in a Mexican town, and these few are often owned by fanatics who would not, at any price, rent them for Protestant services. Second, besides, a chapel always gives greater stability and an air of permanence to the work. When we build a house of worship, the people see that we have come to stay, and so attention is drawn to our work. Experience shows that when a mission builds a chapel, a large increase in attendance may safely be counted on. Nor is it strange that this should be the case. The same is true at home. All who know anything of mission work in large cities, know this to be true. The mother-church does not try to hide her mission children back in a small, unsuitable room of a private house. On the contrary, just as soon as the interest demands it, a mission chapel is built, and the worshippers are made to feel that they have a home; and what is more, the community feels that the church is in earnest about the matter.

For the present, Mexico makes but a modest request of the Board. It is not likely that within the next three years she will ask for many chapels. There are hundreds of houses of worship within the bounds of the Southern Baptist Convention, each one of which has cost more than Mexico will ask for chapel building from now till the close of the year 1894. A $40,000 house of worship is by no means a rarity; and if the more than a million of Baptists of the South will give us this amount—less than four cents a member—we will put a neat chapel in every point where one will be needed from now till January 1, 1895. Is not this a modest request?—to ask the whole membership of our Convention to do for Mexico in three years what many a church at home does for itself in one year?

Remember, that just half the price you are now going to pay for that $8,000 organ will be sufficient to build a neat chapel in Parras, and to make glad the little band of this town. In Guadalajara, "the fourth city in the Republic in size, the second in importance, and the first in beauty and general attractiveness," the brethren will soon be asking for a church building, and they ought not to ask in vain.

Fellow-christians, hear the modest though earnest plea of Mexico for chapels!—A. Bartow Rudd, Parras.

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.

One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B. Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

MILLS—Samantha G., wife of A. C. Mills, passed from earth to heaven on March 26th, 1893. She was a member of Green Level Baptist church, and died a Christian. She was never happier than when she could visit the sick and administer to their wants. She leaves a husband and six children to mourn their loss. May God, who doeth all things well, bless them in their bereavement.

A FRIEND.

BORDEAUX—Bro. Armistead H. Bordeaux died April 22d, 1893. He was sixty-two years, eleven months and twenty days old when he died. He has been a member of the Baptist church since 1865, and when Sharon church was organized he was appointed deacon, which position he held until his death. He organized a prayer meeting at his church, when it was organized seventeen years ago, and he attended it regularly ever since, until his sickness about a month before he died. He has been a regular subscriber to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for ten years, and the writer of this obituary, who conducted the religious services, has heard him say that he would actually do without some of the necessaries of life rather than to fail to read its pages. He leaves a wife and eight children, and a host of friends and brethren, to mourn his loss. Their loss is his eternal gain.

A. J. BORDEAUX.

YOUNGER—The family of Bro. Josephus Younger, who lives one mile from Roxboro, N. C., was visited on April 25th, 1893, by the messenger of death, and the pure spirit of his afflicted daughter, Miss Eliza, was borne away to the beautiful home described in the Holy Bible, the book she so much loved, "as the building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens,"—as our Father's house with many mansions, where she now is enjoying that rest which remaineth to the people of God. She was given to her loving parents by birth on Jan. 1, 1849, and being the subject of tender care, careful training, and much prayer, she embraced Jesus by faith when only a child and united with Mill Creek Baptist church, where she remained in membership until about six years before she was called to join the redeemed above, she, with all the members of her father's large family, joined Roxboro church, under the pastoral care of the writer, whose pleasure it was to know much of her consecrated life. She attended the Baptist school in Raleigh when quite young, the fruits of which were seen in her intelligent conversation. Soon after this, God in his wisdom saw fit to lay the hand of affliction on her, to which she patiently and lovingly submitted for nineteen long years without one single murmur. It seemed that while some preached Jesus, and others worked for the Master, she took pleasure in witnessing for him in her suffering; so much so that all of us who knew her, visited her, and were most intimately acquainted with her, always felt helped by her sweet presence. She was the center around which the thoughts, interest, and affections of the family clustered, and no spot on earth was so sweet to all her kindred as the room in which she sat, rested and suffered, where they often met and were always loath to part.

In the absence of Bro. Watson, who was sick, Rev. J. J. Lansdell conducted the burial services. And now that God has called her away from this life of suffering to himself in glory, let us who knew and loved her join in with the aged parents, remaining brother and sisters, and submissively say:—

"Sister, thou wast mild and lovely,
Gentle as the summer breeze,
Pleasant as the air of evening,
When it floats among the trees.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber,
Peaceful in the grave so low;
Thou no more will join our number;
Thou no more our songs shalt know.

Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled;
Then in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed."

Letter from Monroe.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—We have just closed one of the most interesting meetings I have ever seen. The Spirit was present at every service and in great power. Our house was packed all the while, and all listened with unusual earnestness. There were thirty-four conversions. I have already baptized eighteen, and one stands approved, and I know of several others who will come soon. The greatest work ever done in our church. The greatest unity prevails, and all are working together as I have rarely seen.

Our hearts were saddened by the death of Rev. C. Austin. He was the leading man in this community for a number of years politically and religiously. He was ripe in years, and had done faithful service for a good number of them. We turn our eyes to the future with hope, and trust that God will continue to bless us abundantly. Pray for us. Fraternally,

A New England Miracle.

A RAILROAD ENGINEER RELATES HIS EXPERIENCE.

THE WONDERFUL STORY TOLD BY FRED VOSE AND HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW TO A REPORTER OF THE BOSTON HERALD. BOTH ARE RESTORED AFTER YEARS OF AGONY.

(Boston, Mass., Herald.)

The vast health-giving results already attributed by the newspapers throughout this country and Canada to Dr. Williams' "Pink Pills for Pale People" have been recently supplemented by the wonderful cures wrought in the cases of two confirmed invalids in one household in a New England town. The radical improvement in the physical condition of these two people from the use of this great medicine is vouched for, not only by the eager testimony of the patients themselves, gladly given for the benefit of other sufferers, but also by the indubitable assurances of disinterested relatives and friends who had been cognizant of the years of pain and distress endured by the two invalids, and who now witness their restoration to health, vigor and capacity.

The names of these people, the latest to testify from their own experience to the marvellous restorative, tonic and healing qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, are Fred. C. Vose and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Oliver C. Holt, of Peterboro, members of the same household, which is composed of Mr. and Mrs. Holt, and Mr. and Mrs. Vose, the latter a daughter of the Holts. The home occupied by the family is a cosy and neat looking two-storied house, situated on the top of a hill and surrounded by many of the natural attractions of a residence in the country. Mr. Holt is employed in the Crowell shoe manufactory of Peterboro, and Mr. Vose has for many years run the engine on the Fitchburg railroad trains between Winchendon and Peterboro.

Before entering upon an account of the long illness of Mr. Vose and his mother-in-law, which shall be given in their own words as taken by a reporter of the "Boston Herald," it will be well to give the exact reasons for the coming together under one roof of the two families, as this fact has everything to do with the manner in which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills first came to the notice of Mr. Vose and the reason of their introduction into the family as a medical remedy.

Mr. Vose's wife had been in failing health for a number of years, her illness finally developing into a brain trouble, accompanied by intermittent paralysis of the tongue and lower limbs. Death had taken all her children, and the heavy affliction increased her bodily and mental infirmities to such an extent that her husband, himself an invalid, was compelled to take some means toward securing for her complete rest and freedom from all household care. To this end he gave up housekeeping, and took his wife to her parents' home, where her mother might care for her in her ailments. Mrs. Holt was herself suffering from various complaints brought on by complete nervous prostration several years ago, but her daughter's severe and more hopeless condition was the more urgent and more appealing case of the two, and so Mrs. Holt for several years has tried to forget her own disabilities in tenderly ministering to her stricken daughter.

In February last Mr. Vose was reading the weekly paper, when his attention was attracted by the account of a case of paralysis cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The similarity of the case described to that of his wife at once aroused the deep interest of Mr. Vose, and he called his mother-in-law's attention to the published article. After long consultation they decided to send for the pills. The beneficial effect they had upon Mrs. Vose was marked. From being unable to stand she was so materially strengthened that she could walk without difficulty, and in other respects her condition was much improved. The beneficent results noticed in Mrs. Vose's condition from a trial of the pills caused both her husband and mother to consider trying them for their own complaints. They tried them on the principle that "if they don't cure they can't hurt," but before each had finished their first box they had felt such relief that they came to believe that the pills not only could not hurt, but were actually and speedily curing them.

To the "Herald" reporter who was sent to investigate this remarkable cure, Mr. Vose gave a detailed account of his long illness and subsequent recovery. He began his narrative by saying:

"I am not anxious to get into the papers in this or any other connection, but, as I wrote the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. I have felt such happy results from the taking of Pink Pills that I am willing, if my experience will help any one else, to state how they benefited me. I am thirty-seven years old, and fifteen years of this time I have spent in railroading for the Fitchburg railroad on the Winchendon and Peterboro branch. For the past three years I have been engineer of the train which connects with the Boston trains at Winchendon. I have been troubled with a weak stomach from my boyhood. In fact, there never was a time in my remembrance when I was not more or less troubled from that source.

"Seven years ago, however, the complaint became greatly aggravated from the nature of my work and other causes, and I suffered greatly from it. My stomach would not retain food, my head ached constantly, there was a dimness, or blur, before my eyes most of the time, and my head used to become so dizzy I could scarcely stand. On getting up in the morning my head swam so I was frequently obliged to lie down again. I had a most disagreeable heartburn, a continuous belching of gas from the stomach, a nasty coating of the mouth and tongue, and my breath was most offensive. I consulted physicians in Peterboro, and took their medicine for two years, but was helped so slightly by them that at the end of that time I gave up in discouragement, and let the disease take care of itself for a long time. I grew worse as time went on. I have been obliged to give up work many a time for a week or two, and have worked at other times when I ought to have been at home in bed. I have lost many months during the past seven years and would have lost more only for the fact that I stuck it out and would not give up until I had to.

"My appetite then failed me, and about four years ago I began to notice a fluttering of my heart, which grew so bad after a while that I could not walk any distance without a violent palpitation and complete loss of breath. The pains in my stomach, from indigestion lasted two and three days at a time. I lost considerable flesh, and before long I noticed that my kidneys were affected. This came from my work on the engine, I know, as many railroad men are troubled in the same way. I had awful pains in the small of my back, and was obliged to make water many times during the day.

"I resolved to go back to the doctors again, though their treatment had done me no good before. I was told that medicine was no good for me, that what I needed was a long rest. I could not take too long a vacation, being compelled to work for my living, and so I kept along, taking what stuff the doctors prescribed, but feeling no better, except for a day or two at a time.

"Finally my legs and hands began to ache and swell with rheumatic pains, and I found I couldn't sleep at night. If I lay down, my heart would go pit-a-pat at a great rate, and many nights I did not close my eyes at all.

"I was broken down in body and discouraged in spirit, when, some time in February last, I was reading in the "Montreal Family Herald and Weekly Star," which we take every week, of the great cures made by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I got a couple of boxes for my wife to see if she would be helped any by them, and then I tried them myself. I did not put much stock in them at first, but before I had finished the first box I noticed that I was feeling better. The palpitation of my heart, which had bothered me so that I couldn't breathe at times, began to improve. I saw that in going to my home on the hill from the depot, which was previously an awful task, my heart did not beat so violently and I had more breath when I reached the house. After the second and third boxes I grew better in every other respect. My stomach became stronger, the gas belching was not so bad, my appetite and digestion improved, and my sleep became nearly natural and undisturbed. I have continued taking the pills three times a day ever since last March, and to day I am feeling better than at any time during the last eight years.

"I can confidently and conscientiously say that they have done me more good, and their good effects are more permanent, than any medicine I have ever taken. My rheumatic pains in legs and hands are all gone. The pains in the small of my back, which were so bad at times that I couldn't stand up straight, have nearly all vanished, and I find my kidneys are well regulated by them. This is an effect not claimed for the pills in the circular, but in my case they brought it about. I can now go up any hill without the slightest distress or palpitation or loss of breath, and am feeling 100 per cent. better in every shape and manner.

"They have been a saving of money to me, for since I began their use I have not been obliged to lose much time away from work. I am still taking the pills, and mean to continue them until I am certain my cure is a thorough and lasting one."

After talking with Mr. Vose at the depot, where his engine was in waiting, the reporter went to the house where Mrs. Holt, the other patient for whom the pills have done so much, received him and gave an extended account of her experience with them. Mrs. Holt said:

"I am fifty-seven years old, and for fourteen years past I have had an intermittent heart trouble. Three years ago I had nervous prostration, which left me with a number of ailments, for which I have been doctoring unsuccessfully ever since. My heart trouble was increased so badly by the nervous prostration that I had to lie down most of the time. My stomach also gave out, and I had continual and intense pain from the back of my neck to the end of my backbone. I went to physicians in Jeffrey, Newport, Alsted, Acton and here in Peterboro, but my health continued so miserable that I gave up doctors in despair and lost faith in medicine altogether. I began to take Dr. Williams' Pilk Pills last winter, more from curiosity than because I believed they could help me, but the first box made me feel ever so much better. I have taken the pills since February last and they have made me feel like a new woman. The terrible pains in my spinal column and in the region of my liver are gone, and I believe for good. My palpitation has only troubled me three times since I commenced using the pills, and my stomach now performs its functions without giving me the great distress which formerly followed everything I ate. The pills have acted differently from any medicine I ever took in my life. I have tried everything—doctors' medicines, patent medicines, sarsaparillas, and homœopathic doses. In fourteen weeks, three years ago, I spent $300 for doctors' bills and medicines, and since then have put out as much more money, but the relief I obtained, if any, was only temporary.

"With these pills, however, the effects are different. They are not cathartic like other pills I have taken, but seem to act directly upon the stomach and liver without any loosening of the bowels. My sleep, too has wonderfully improved since I began their use. For a long time before I took these pills I lost sleep night after night with my heart and pains in my back.

"My improvement in health is a source of remark on the part of those who have known how sick I was. My husband, who didn't know I was taking the pills, is delighted at the noticeable betterment in my health, and upon learning the cause of it urged me to continue the use of the pills. This impulse, however, is not necessary, as I have been too sick in the past not to fully appreciate the value of a remedy that has done me so much good. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are certainly a grand medicine, and from my experience with them I can cheerfully and cordially recommend them to any one who is troubled with heart palpitation, indigestion, liver complaint, and the many ills consequent upon nervous prostration."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not a patent medicine in the sense in which that term is ususally understood, but are a scientific preparation, successfully used in general practice for many years before being offered to the public generally. They contain in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood, and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, the tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases depending upon vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, &c.

They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood and restore the glow of health to pale or sallow cheeks. In the case of men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. They are manufactured by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and Brockville, Ont., and are sold in boxes (never in loose form by the dozen or hundred) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company from either address.

The price at which these pills are sold makes a course of treatment comparatively inexpensive as compared with other remedies or medical treatment.

The State Normal and Industrial School.

The North Carolina Teacher for April reviews very carefully and thoroughly the "Report of the Directors of the Normal and Industrial School." It is very evident to the people of North Carolina that the President and President of the Board of Trustees have diverted the work of the school widely from the purposes of its creation, and it is now neither a normal nor industrial school, but simply a female institute which uses the State's money to compete with all other female schools in the State, and make a good easy situation for the President. The so-called report to the Legislature, when carefully examined, shows that the officers have labored to conceal and misstate facts to an amazing extent. The Teacher has fairly and honestly exposed a vast number of misdoings on the part of the President which prove him totally unfit to be at the head of such an institution as the State intends the Normal and Industrial School to be. Nine-tenths of the people of North Carolina fully agree with the Teacher in its criticism of the management, while all are united in approval of such a school for training teachers as the State intended to establish. The President has no right to so pervert the laws in regard to this school as to make it a female seminary instead of a professional school for teachers.

The "report" shows that upwards of $9,000 have been paid, of which no account is made, and that there has been a reckless extravagance in handling the State's money in the interest of the President. The President may be getting in various ways from the school three or four thousand dollars a year, instead of $2,250, which is his nominal salary, as there is clearly a considerable profit derived from boarding pupils, who are required to pay the maximum charge of $8.00 a month. As the school is under the direction of the State Board of Education, a committee of disinterested persons should be appointed to fairly investigate the management which is bringing the school into disrepute with thoughtful people of North Carolina. The State is too honest to submit to such management of a public institution.

Use Polk Miller's 'Victory' Poultry Food.

IT ADDS GREATLY TO THE FOWLS' LAYING, and I have never seen a case of Gapes in young chickens when it was used. Now, I would as soon do without salt in my food as to undertake to raise fowls without Polk Miller's Chicken Food.
WILLIS W. HORSON, Powhatan county, Va.

We buy it by the dozen boxes, and when my wife has a sick fowl of any kind "we make for these Powders, and that's the last of it." It is an infallible remedy with us.
WM. A. WILLROY, King William county, Va.

I have used one box, and found it very beneficial to young fowls. Have not lost any with Gapes since I commenced its use.
MISS NELLIE DIGGS, Mathews Courthouse, Va.

It is a sure preventive of Gapes, and we consider it indispensable in our many efforts at "poultry raising."
MRS. L. H. GRAIBELL, Arch Mill, Botetourt county, Va.

It stopped Cholera entirely among my fowls.

When I Have Time.

When I have time so many things I'll do
To make life happier and more fair
For those whose lives are crowded now with care;
I'll help to lift them from their low despair—
When I have time.

When I have time the friend I love so well
Shall know no more those weary, toiling days;
I'll lead her feet in pleasant paths always
And cheer her heart with words of sweetest praise—
When I have time.

When you have time! The friend you hold so dear
May be beyond the reach of all your sweet intent;
May never know that you so kindly meant
To fill her life with sweet content—
When you had time.

Now is the time! Ah, friend, no longer wait
To scatter loving smiles and words of cheer
To those around whose lives are now so drear;
They may not need you in the coming year—
Now is the time.

Teasing.

It seems to me that one of the most annoying traits of character which one can possess is a disposition to tease; for when it is freely indulged, there is nothing that can cause more unhappiness to others. To be obliged to spend one's life with an inveterate tease is like living in a bramblebush or of suffering constantly from the torture of innumerable pin pricks. To be sure, one pin-prick is nothing much, but when one has to bear ten thousand of them, it is quite another thing.

"Pshaw!" says the tease, "I did not hurt you any. I wouldn't make such a fuss about nothing. I did not mean anything. I was only teasing."

Exactly. And it is just because there is no meaning in it, nor necessity for it, because it is only "teasing," that poor, insulted, tormented human nature cries sometimes in a passion against it. If the tease cannot find anything else to annoy, he will torment an animal or a little child, and he thinks it is fun; but it is the most malicious, most dreadful and most dangerous fun in the world. I once knew a lady who was literally almost frightened to death by a miserable man who followed her home through the twilight; she reached shelter and dropped fainting on the floor, and the thoughtless fellow who had occasioned the distress explained that "he just followed her to tease her, because he knew she was timid, and he did it just for fun." He found that it was not so funny as he wanted, while she hovered between life and death, the victim of the wretched joke.

I think that a genuine tease is always a coward, for he never attacks his equals; his victims are the helpless animals, the little child, and the timid woman. If you will notice, it is never the smallest boy who teases the larger one. And then a tease can never bear to be teased himself. Nothing makes him angrier than to be paid back in his own coin.

But really the most distressing thing about the whole matter is the effect which the habit of teasing has upon the nature of the one who indulges in it. A confirmed tease becomes positively heartless. He can look upon physical and mental distress quite unmoved.

If there is a boy who reads these lines, who likes to tease his little sister till she runs in tears to her mother, or who torments some little fellow at school just to see him crimson and bristle with impotent rage, if you want to make a man of yourself, stop it; for it is a most ignoble and unmanly thing to take delight in causing pain to any living creature, especially if it is smaller and weaker than yourself.—Selected.

The Art of Grafting.

How to keep the boys on the farm is a question receiving considerable attention at the present time. It may be answered, briefly, without assuming that they should all remain there—make farm life attractive. One of the ways of doing this is by encouraging the finer lines of country work; among other things, the improvement of fruits, and the cultivation of the finest kinds. An important branch of this is the art of grafting. It is deeply interesting. Here is an apple-tree, vigorous, rough, thorny almost, bearing small, austere fruit, or none at all; but by grafting, in a few years it may be made to produce bushels of Greenings, Celestias, Stuart's Goldens, or some other of the finest varieties in cultivation.

The expert grafter will pardon the minute directions, as the design is to aid beginners.

The two component parts of a graft are the cion and the stock. The stock is the tree, or the branch of a tree, in which the cion is placed, to be nourished with sap drawn up by the former through its roots. The cion is a shoot, or piece of a shoot of the previous season's growth, of whatever fruit is desired. As Bacon wrote three hundred years ago, "the cion overruleth the stock, and the stock is but passive." Supplied with nutriment by the stock, the cion unfolds its own leaves, flowers, and fruit, precisely the same as the branch from which it was cut; Rambo, Rome Beauty, or Bartlett.

The cions should be cut early, while perfectly dormant; and always, when possible, from a tree proved in bearing, in order to insure accuracy. They should be kept from drying by being placed in the ground, or in moss or sawdust kept very slightly damp, remembering that much moisture is as injurious as drying out.

With the apple and the pear, grafting may be practiced on from the time the sap moves several weeks after the trees are in full leaf, to the middle of May. But late grafts usually do not make much growth the first year, and the shock to the tree is so much greater than if done early, that it is advisable not to defer the work so long unless in cases of necessity. The best time is when the sap first gets in full circulation. With the stone fruit it is different. The difficulty of grafting the cherry in the ordinary way is well known to many. Success is the exception unless the work is done before the sap moves, and with much care. A particular form of grafting, however, termed side-grafting, has been tried for a number of years with the cherry and plum, with very encouraging results. A downward incision, about an inch in length, is made in the side of the stock, at any desired distance above the surface; and into this is fitted the wedge shaped end of a cion; to be followed by the usual waxing. The stock in this case is to be cut off three or four inches above the graft, and it is better done before the incision is made. This stub left will give leverage sufficient to open the incision slightly so as to admit the end of the cion. When the stock is three-quarters of an inch in diameter or over, the incision is not easily made with a knife. An inch chisel (or three-fourths inch) driven by a mallet answers better. The incision should pass obliquely downward, inclining slightly toward the centre, and it should be smooth and perfect, on one side at least, in order to facilitate the close contact of the inner bark of the cion with the inner bark of the stock. This is the secret of grafting. The circulation of the life-giving sap is carried on through the inner bark; and successful grafting consists in (1) placing the two inner barks in perfect contact; (2) keeping them in such condition, by tying if the stock does not hold the cion firmly without; and (3) waxing carefully to exclude air and moisture.—R. J. Black, in The Examiner.

Crippled.

"CURVED LIKE A CRADLE ROCKER" FROM A DISEASED SPINE.

My little boy had been a great sufferer for about three years with an affliction of the spine. His neck was so greatly affected that he could not hold up his head; it dropped forward and his chin rested on his breast most of the time. He seemed to lose nearly all use of his limbs, could not sit up, and was so drawn that when we tried to stand him on his feet, just the tips of his toes would touch the floor.

His body was curved just like a cradle rocker, and all his meals had to be taken from a pallet rolled alongside the table.

Such was his condition when we began the use of the Electropoise; under its use he has gradually improved, until now he is able to hold up his head and walk unassisted about the house and yard.

We had almost given up all hope when we got the Electropoise, as nearly all else had been tried in vain; I think that its continued use will effect a complete cure.

Mistaken Politeness.

Is there any one who has not suffered from the mistaken politeness of friends and neighbors? How many times have host and guest sat martyr-like till late in the evening, making heroic efforts to be agreeable, because each feared the other would think it rude if he expressed a wish to retire! Most of us, too, have been visited in affliction by neighbors for whom we cared nothing, and who cared nothing for us, but came because they thought it would not be polite to stay away.

A young minister, not long ago, spent a Sunday with strangers. After the evening service he said to a friend: "My preaching to-night was a failure, and I'll tell you why. The morning service always exhausts me, and I am in the habit of taking a nap in the afternoon; then I feel fresh and bright at night. But the people with whom I am staying devoted themselves to entertaining me this afternoon, and I thought it would not be polite to excuse myself. So I managed to keep awake and appear interested, but my evening service had to suffer in consequence."

The friend, chancing next day to meet the young minister's hostess, made some reference to him.

"O," said the lady, "we like him very much, except for one thing. He stayed down stairs all the afternoon, and seemed to enjoy being entertained so well that we felt it would be rude to leave him; and I confess that I got completely tired out."

What a mistaken politeness was this on both sides! Every true Christian is willing to deny himself even in little things for the happiness of others, but when two people deny themselves, and succeed only in making each other miserable, the absurdity of the so called politeness is apparent. And yet few of us are wholly guiltless in the matter.

Politeness is a desire to please others, and to avoid whatever may be disagreeable to them. It isn't always easy to know what will please another, especially one who is a comparative stranger, and the only solution of the difficulty is in simple frankness. Let the host say to his guest: "I think you must be tired, and I hope you will feel at liberty to go to your room at any time, though, of course, I have no desire to hurry you." Certainly no one would stay after that unless he were really enjoying himself, in which case the true host would be quite willing to put aside his own preference in regard to retiring.

Oftentimes a host invites his guest to visit the manufactories of the place or to go on some excursion, because he thinks his friend would wish to go when in reality it is an unmitigated bore to both. How much better for him to say: "Now there are such and such things which we might do, but I have no wish in the matter except your pleasure. If you wouldn't enjoy them don't hesitate to say so, and I should be delighted if you would suggest something else." This would preclude all danger of obliging him to do what was distasteful to him.

If children, from the first, were trained to frankness (not the so-called bluntness which causes people to say and do most disagreeable things, but the frankness which answers friends and acquaintances just as they would like to be answered), then they would seldom make themselves and others uncomfortable through mistaken politeness.—Congregationalist.

From Father to Son.

One day a young man entered a merchant's office in Boston, and with a pale and careworn face, he said:

"Sir, I am in need of help. I have been unable to meet certain payments, because parties have not done as they agreed by me, and I would like to have $10,000. I came to you because you were a friend to my father, and might be a friend to me."

"Come in," said the old merchant; "Come in and have a glass of wine."

"No," said the young man, "I don't drink."

"Have a cigar, then."

"No, I never smoke."

"Well," said the old gentleman, "I would like to accommodate you, but I don't think I can."

"Very well," said the young man, as he was about to leave the room, "I thought perhaps you might. Good day, sir."

"Hold on," said the merchant. "You don't drink?"

"No."

"Nor smoke?"

"No."

"Nor gamble, nor anything of that sort?"

"No, sir; I am superintendent of a Sunday-school."

"Well," said the merchant, "you shall have it, and three times the amount if you wish. Your father let me have $5,000 once, and asked me the same questions. He trusted me, and I will trust you. No thanks—I owe it to you for your father's trust."—Presbyterian.

A Discourse on the Apostolic Ministry.

BY REV. DR. FRANCIS WAYLAND.

Delivered in Rochester, N. Y., before the New York Baptist Union for Ministerial Education on July 12th, 1853.

Text, Mark 16: 15—"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

III. But who is thus to preach the gospel? What would be the answer to this question, if we listened to the voice of common humanity? When the brazen serpent was lifted up, who was to carry the good news throughout the camp? When the glad tidings of peace arrived in the city, who was to proclaim it to his fellow-citizens? When the news of peace with God, through the blood of the covenant, is proclaimed to us, who shall make it known to those perishing in sin? The answer in each case is, every one. Were no command given, the common principles of our nature would teach us that nothing but the grossest selfishness would claim to be exempted from the joyful duty of extending to others the blessing which we have received ourselves.

But, besides this, we have in the text the command of Christ. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature;" and "lo! I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." The command is as universal as discipleship, and it is to continue obligatory till the Son of man shall come.

Does any one say that this command was given only to the apostles? It may or may not have been so; but were they alone included in the obligation which it imposes? The address at the last supper was given to them alone, as were many other of the instructions of our Lord; but were they the only persons to whom the words spoken apply? Is it affirmed that they and those whom they should appoint are alone to preach the word? I answer that Jesus Christ never said so, and we have no right to add to this any more than to any other of his commandments.

But let us see how the apostles themselves understood the precept. Their own narrative shall inform us. "At that time there was a great persecution against the church that was at Jerusalem, and they were scattered abroad throughout all the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the apostles." "Therefore, they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word."—Acts 8: 1, 4. "Then they that were scattered abroad upon the persecution that arose about Stephen, travelled as far as Phenice and Cyprus and Antioch, preaching the word to none but Jews only. And some of them were men of Cyprus and Cyrene, which, when they were come to Antioch, spake also to the Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus. And the hand of the Lord was with them, and a great number believed and turned to the Lord." These men were not apostles, nor even original disciples of Christ, for they were men of Cyprus and Cyrene. Yet they went everywhere preaching the Word, and in so doing they pleased the Master, for the Holy Spirit accompanied their labors with the blessing from on high. The ascended Saviour thus approved of their conduct, and testified that their understanding of his last command was correct.

If we need any farther confirmation of the interpretation which we have given of the precept in the text, we find it in other portions of our Lord's teaching. "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal until the whole was leavened." The words here indicate the manner in which the kingdom of Christ is to extend itself. Leaven assimilates the whole mass to itself by the contact of particle with particle—each particle, as soon as it is leavened, communicating its own virtue to all the particles surrounding it. So every disciple of Christ is bound, by proclaiming Christ to those near to him, to extend the kingdom of the Redeemer; and every one who becomes a disciple is bound to make it his chief business to disciple others.

Again, our Lord declares that every one who believes in him shall be the means of imparting salvation to others. "In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, if any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink. He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water." This he spake of the Spirit which, not the apostles, but they that believe on him should receive. Thus, as our Lord is the living fountain from which every believer drinks; so every one who has drunk of this fountain becomes, in this secondary sense, a fountain to all who are about him.

So, in the message to the churches, delivered by the ascended Saviour to the Apostle John, we find these remarkable words: "I am the root and offspring of David, and the bright and morning star. And the Spirit and the Bride say, Come, and let him that heareth say, Come, and let him that is athirst come, and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

You see, then, brethren, the nature and duty of the church of Christ. It consists of the whole company of penitent sinners, united to Christ by faith, animated by the indwelling of his Holy Spirit, every one partaking with Christ in that love of souls which moved him to offer up himself, and every one laboring after his example for the salvation of the world. This is the object for which the believer lives, as it was the object for which Christ lived. This consecration of himself to Christ for this purpose is a matter of personal obligation. It cannot be done by deputy. It must be done by the man himself. He can no more delegate it to another, than he can delegate faith, or repentance, or prayer, or holy living. Every disciple must be a discipler. Every individual is leaven, and he must assimilate to himself all that comes into contact with him. As he himself drinks of the fountain, he must become a fountain to his fellowmen; otherwise, he has not drunk of the fountain himself. If he bear not fruit, he is cut off as a branch, and is withered.

This is the first and primary duty of a disciple, and to it his whole life must be conformed. He may enter upon no calling, he may occupy no station, he may indulge in no amusement inconsistent with this elementary duty of discipleship. A revival of religion represents a church in its normal condition, the condition which Christ always intended it to maintain. Then every believer makes it his great concern to call men to repentance, not as a matter of form, but with earnest and moving persuasion. Every convert is inviting his former companions to turn unto the Lord. But, if this manner of life is appropriate to a revival, it is appropriate to all times; for men are everywhere and at all times sinners hastening to the judgment seat, and they all must perish unless they be redeemed by the blood of Christ.

It would be easy to show that it is by involving this obligation in the very elementary idea of discipleship, that Christ has provided for the universal triumph of his church. On this depends the vitality of personal religion. We can never in earnest call men to repentance, unless we are living holy and penitent lives ourselves. Hence, also arises the separation of the church from the world, and hence the antagonism which Christ declares must always exist between them. "Because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." It is under these circumstances that the church has always gained its most signal victories, and when these principles of duty exercise an abiding influence over the life of every disciple, the kingdoms of this world will soon become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ.

Such, then, is the privilege, and such the duty of every disciple of Christ. It enters into the elementary idea of discipleship. With this every other subsequent idea must be in harmony. No ecclesiastical system which we form can either liberate a disciple from this obligation, or take away his privilege of thus laboring for Christ. Whatever offices are created in the church, are created for the purpose of enabling the disciple the better to discharge this duty. They are made for the church, the church is not made for them; and it becomes us ever to be watchful, lest by any error the church of Christ be deprived of this, the mainspring of all its efficiency.

I have thus far spoken of the gifts which are common to every man of a sane mind. But almost every man has some peculiar gift, that is, some naturally bestowed means of usefulness. This also he is bound in the same manner to consecrate to the service of the Master. A brief allusion to some of these will sufficiently illustrate my meaning. One man may be endowed with uncommon conversational ability, so that in the ordinary intercourse of society he readily leads the minds of men in any direction he chooses. The disciple of Christ is not at liberty to use this talent for the purpose of attaining to social pre eminence, or for the gratification of personal vanity; he must use it as a means of winning souls to Christ. Beautiful illustrations of this form of consecration of talent were seen in the lives of the late William Wilberforce and Joseph John Gurney. Another disciple may be endowed with skill in the conduct of mercantile affairs, so that, with ease, he can accumulate a fortune, when other men would merely earn a subsistence. This talent he has no right to employ for the purpose of hoarding up wealth for himself, or for his children, or of procuring the means of luxurious extravagance, or fashionable display. "The lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life are not of the Father, but of the world." He must consecrate this gift to God, and remember that he will be called to account for this as for every other talent. And while such a man should abound in almsgiving, let him be his own almoner, laboring with his own hands, and not the hands of others in the work of benevolence. Another may have been gifted with skill in managing affairs, in arranging and carrying forward plans for the labor of others, and in guiding masses of men to right conclusions in all matters of public concernment. This talent should be given to the cause of religion and benevolence. Such men, instead of leaving the charge of all our benevolent institutions to the ministry, should assume it themselves. They can do it better than we, and the gift was granted to them for this very purpose. It belongs to Christ, and to him must it be cheerfully rendered.

These gifts to which I have referred, are bestowed upon Christians for the general service of the church of Christ. There are but few men who are not endowed with some one of them, which it is their duty faithfully to improve. I must, however, turn to those gifts which have special reference to the ministry of the word.

It frequently happens that a brother engaged in secular business is endowed with a talent for public speaking. On matters of general interest he is heard by his fellow-citizens with pleasure and profit. This talent is more largely bestowed than we commonly suppose; and it would be more frequently observed if we desired to cultivate and develop it. Now, a disciple who is able successfully to address men on secular subjects is surely competent to address them on the subject in which he takes an immeasurably greater interest. This talent should specially be offered up in sacrifice to Christ. The voice of such brethren should be heard in the conference room and in the prayer-meeting. They have no right to lay up this talent, more than any other, in a napkin. And still more is it incumbent on the churches to foster and improve gifts of this kind. Thus we arrive at the order of lay preachers, formerly a most efficient aid in the work of spreading the gospel. I believe that there are but few churches among us, in the ordinary enjoyment of religion, who have not much of this talent undiscovered and unemployed. Let them search out and improve it. Every church would thus be able to maintain out-stations, where small congregations might be gathered, which would shortly grow up into churches, able themselves to become lights to the surrounding neighborhood. I know of but few means by which the efficiency of our denomination could be so much increased as by a return to our former practice in this respect.

But, besides this, it seems plainly to be the will of Christ that some of his disciples should addict themselves exclusively to the ministry of the gospel. Such men are called elders, presbyters, bishops, ministers of the word, or stewards of the mysteries of God. If it be asked, under what circumstances may a believer undertake this service? I answer, the New Testament, as it seems to me, always refers to it as a calling to which a man is moved by the Holy Ghost. No one may therefore enter the ministry, except from the motive of solemn, conscientious duty. If he choose it as a profession, for the sake of worldly advantage, or that he may enjoy a life of leisure, or be enabled the better to pursue some favorite studies, he has mistaken his calling. No man will ever succeed in any undertaking, who pursues it as a means to the attainment of something else; least of all, when he makes a convenience of the service of God in the ministry of reconciliation.

If it be asked how a man may know that he is called of God to this work, I answer, the evidence seems to me to be two-fold. In the first place, he must be conscious of a love for the work itself, not for what in other respects he may gain by it; and also, there must be impressed on his soul an abiding conviction, that, unless he devote himself to this service, he can in no wise answer a good conscience towards God. With the Apostle, he must be conscious that a necessity is laid upon him, yea, that a woe rests upon him if he preach not the gospel. He who is impressed by no such convictions had, I think, better pursue some other vocation.

This is the first indication of the man's duty. In the next place, he must exhibit such evidences of his call to this work as shall secure for him the approbation of his brethren. Of his own feelings, he must be the judge; of his qualifications, they must be the judges. When both he and they, after prayerful deliberation, unite in the same opinion, then he may conclude that he is called of God to the ministerial office. Neither of these evidences alone is sufficient; the union of them alone is satisfactory.

The New Testament, I think, recognizes two forms of ministerial labor; that of evangelists and that of pastors. Evangelists are specially preachers or missionaries. Men called to this office are endowed with peculiar gifts for awakening the careless, arousing the secure, directing the attention of men to the subject of religion, and thus planting churches where Christ has not been named. The particular value of such an order of ministers, in such a country as our own, is, I think, apparent. Many of the fathers of the ministry in all this region, the men who laid the foundations of your present prosperity, were for much of their time evangelists; and worthily did they fulfil the ministry which they had received of the Lord Jesus.

Besides evangelists, the New Testament authorizes the appointment of pastors, that is, of ministers of the gospel placed over particular churches. The calling of such a man is not to the cure of souls generally; but, first of all, of the souls of that particular people. He believes that Christ has placed him over a separate church; from that church he receives his support; and, for both reasons, he is bound to devote to them his whole service. It is his duty "to warn every man and teach every man, that he may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus: whereunto he is to labor according to the working that worketh in him mightily." It is his duty to make known clearly and explicitly, and with tears, the danger and guilt of the impenitent, to arouse the conscience, to point the inquiring soul to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world, to unfold the riches of divine love to the believing, to guard the disciples against conformity to the world, to stimulate them by every holy motive to higher attainments in piety and closer conformity to Christ, to reclaim the backslider, to counsel the tempted, to caution the unwary, to comfort the sick, to speak peace to the dying believer, to suggest to his brethren means of usefulness, to watch over the discipline of the church, in all things showing himself a pattern of good works, and ever doing the same work which he urges upon them. He is to labor publicly, holding up the cross of Christ before his people on the Sabbath, and on all occasions when he can collect them to hear his message. Wherever he calls them to assemble, he should meet with them. He will accomplish but little by urging them to leave their secular business for a meeting for prayer, while he is too much occupied in miscellaneous business to attend it himself. But, besides this, he must follow them to their homes, and press upon them individually the claims of the Most High. With Paul, he must "teach publicly, and from house to house, testifying repentance towards God and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ," if he would finish his "course with joy," and at the close of his life take his people to witness "that he is pure from the blood of all men." My brethren, is not this a work great enough for any man? Can any duty vie with it in importance? Doth it not then become us "to give ourselves wholly to it, that our profiting may appear to all"? Can we have any excuse before God if we fritter away our lives in miscellaneous business, and give to the work of God the mere shreds and clippings of our time?

You see, then, the means which the Saviour has provided for the universal triumph of his kingdom upon earth. He requires every disciple, as soon as he becomes a partaker of divine grace, to become a herald of salvation to his fellowmen. He is a fountain from which is to flow a river of living water. The doing of this is the test of his discipleship. If he is a branch that beareth not fruit, his end is to be cut off. He is "the salt of the earth, and if the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out and trodden under foot of men." Secondly, every disciple is bound to employ for Christ every peculiar gift with which he may have been endowed. Thirdly, every man possessed of the gifts for the ministry, mentioned in the New Testament, is bound to consecrate them to Christ, either in connection with his secular pursuits or by devoting his whole time to this particular service.

If this be so, you see that in the church of Christ there is no ministerial caste; no class elevated in rank above their brethren, on whom devolves the discharge of the more dignified or more honorable portions of Christian labor, while the rest of the disciples are to do nothing but raise the funds necessary for their support. The minister does the same work that is to be done by every other member of the body of Christ; but, since he does it exclusively, he may be expected to do it more to edification. It is his business to labor for the conversion of sinners and the sanctification of the body of Christ, so is it theirs. In everything which they do as disciples, he is to be their example. I know that we now restrict to the ministry the administration of the ordinances, and to this rule I think there can be no objection. But we all know that for this restriction we have no example in the New Testament. In other respects, it is difficult to discover, in principle, the difference between the labors of a minister and those of any other disciple, in conversation, or in a Sabbath-school, or a Bible class, or in a conference room. All are laboring to produce the same result, the conversion of men, and by the same means the inculcation of the teachings of Christ and his apostles. The ministry is made for the church, and not the church for the ministry. We are not Boodhist priests, or Mahomedan dervishes, or members of a papal or any other hierarchy, or a class above or aside from our brethren, but simply ambassadors of Christ, your servant for Jesus' sake. The chiefest of the apostles desired no higher rank, and with it we are abundantly satisfied.

Some Lincoln Dots.

Some Charlotte boys have invaded our town and carried off two of our most accomplished girls, which has played sad havoc with our choir. First, came Mr. Tyler D. Haynes, and after a brilliant wedding in the Baptist church, carried away Miss Bettie Wilkie, daughter of our senior deacon; and just a week later came Mr. J. J. Manning, and took away our organist, Miss Lucy Cauble, and left us in great distress.

A GREAT FARCE.

I have just returned from our Union Meeting, which is fitly described by my sub head above. There was not a pastor or preacher in the Association present at the meeting except the writer, and he was sick, but notwithstanding our ministering brethren gave us the go-by, we had a great meeting. Brethren D. W. Thomason and J. L. Sams came to my rescue and did valiant service.

On Sunday, Dr. R. H. Griffith of South Carolina preached the dedication sermon of our new house at Lowell, and it was a great sermon to a thousand people. We had built one of the very best houses in the county at this mission station of the State Board, and we had engaged Bro. C. Durham to preach the sermon, but he was forced to disappoint us, and so we were very fortunate to get Bro. Griffith.

We had a debt of $250 on the house, and when I asked the people to please to take it off, they came up and in fifteen minutes they gave me $275. These Gaston county folks are great folks any way. This is the second house I have built for them; the other at Mt. Holly now has one of the best churches in it in the country.

This was the time appointed to bring up the Centennial funds. Only two churches outside of my own reported anything, but I sent Bro. Boushall $101 on Friday night.

While it was a great meeting, it was a great farce as a Union Meeting. I now give my fellow-pastors in the Association notice that I am done with Union Meetings. I have never missed a meeting since I came to the Association, while some of our leaders have not been present in fifteen months. So far as my churches are concerned, they don't need it, and if the others do not want it I shall not force it on them.

Let me say to any Baptist people wanting to attend the World's Fair, that I expect to start with a party about the 20th of June and spend days in Chicago. Having lived there, I know the city and can show them the sights at the least possible cost. I have already provided lodging for fifty, which is all I want. I will give any one the benefit of lowest rates and make no charge for my trouble. If you want to go, write me.

I leave next week for the Convention, thence up to my old home above Kinston.

M. P. Mangum.

The Biblical Recorder

WEDNESDAY, MAY 17, 1893.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

"What Baptists Believe," by the late J. L. Burrows, will be given to every new subscriber to the BIBLICAL RECORDER who will pay $2.00 in advance for a years' subscription. We will also give the book to every old subscriber who will pay his subscription to date and a year in advance.

Think of it! Your denominational paper, the subscription price of which is $2.00, one year, and a neatly bound book of over a hundred pages, containing a clear and fair expression of what Baptists believe and practice, all for the price of the paper.

Remember, this offer is to new and old subscribers alike.

THE HELPING HAND.

One has but to study the accounts given in the Bible of the earthly life and ministry of Jesus our Saviour to be convinced of the fact that his life, after the active duties of his ministry commenced, was chiefly given to the promotion of the happiness and peace of those about him. The Son of man came "not to be ministered unto, but to minister." How fond was he of healing the bodily infirmities and weaknesses of men and women! And his contact with the vicious, the degraded, and the fallen, plainly shows us how his great heart went out toward such people. Concerning people of this kind, two quite common mistakes we think are made by Christian workers of the day. One is the plan of hurrying them into the church, and trying to reform them there; the other is to ignore, or despise them, and cause them to think that there are but little sympathy and love in heaven or on earth for them.

The first mistake mentioned leads those who follow the plan it implies to cause the church to become a sort of reformatory, and by a system of petting and coddling the wicked and abandoned, cause them to think, that after all, the Christian world is disposed to place a premium on depravity. Those on whom this impression is made may very naturally suppose that, as they were counted worthy to be taken into the fellowship of a Christian church, and receive more attention while their vicious course continues than they expect to receive afterward, it may "pay" them best to continue the life they are leading. The indiscriminate visiting of great criminals by gushing bands of male and female workers who scatter flowers on the prison floor and adorn prison walls with affectionate reminders of their presence, has its dangers, and sometimes produces just the opposite effect to what was intended. And, then, these sudden conversions (?) of hardened criminals in their cells just before they suffer for their crimes, after their gushing declarations that they "are going straight to heaven," deepens the impression that it is quite an easy thing for a man to get right with God after a life of red handed crime. The church is certainly no home for such characters who remain in their sins, and those who visit such characters as have committed grievous crimes, ought to be composed of judicious persons, who should guard the criminal against basing his salvation on priestly manipulations or the sympathy and prayers of a band of "workers" who have a zeal not according to knowledge, and also against a nauseating public profession of a faith that does not really exist.

Much harm may be also caused by those who make the second mistake mentioned. One thing is certain, Jesus Christ was the friend of publicans and sinners. He came to "seek and to save them that are lost." If we would be Christ-like we must follow his methods and exhibit his spirit. If people are wicked they should be encouraged to confess their wickedness; and then they should be told of the panacea for all sin. And we should be careful to emphasize the fact that an open outspoken sinner out of the church is dearer to God and to men than the oily-faced hypocrite in it. Jesus loves sinful men; so should we, if we would win them from the error of their ways. The average preacher, we are verily persuaded, would be more successful if he would preach on the one hand the "terrors of the law," which declare God's hatred for sin, and then [illegible] such passages as "God so loved the world," &c., which show his compassion for the sinner. "Help your fallen brother" give him the helping hand. He needs [illegible] you can be sure that you are in the [illegible] duty when you love the souls of the [illegible] and by proper methods lift [illegible] instead of driving them to despair [illegible] them as if they were beneath

NOT FAR FROM THE KINGDOM.

The poet Whittier, we believe, once penned these striking words:—

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these: 'It might have been.'"

And among the most beautiful and yet among the saddest words that Christ ever spoke to one who was not among his disciples were, "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God." These words are beautiful because they remind us that Christ honors uprightness, integrity, and common sense among those who are not numbered among his people. True religion is something that commends itself to the wisest and manliest of men. It would be well for us to recognize the fact that there are often much virtue, merit, and true manhood among those who are not Christians. We do not mean that they have either virtue or merit that atones for their sins; to the contrary, it is needful that they confess their sins, and seek God in the same manner as the most abandoned of men; but still, we can afford to recognize true manhood where we find it, while we seek to rescue men from their sins.

These words of the Saviour are sad indeed when they remind us that a man may come very near the border of his kingdom, and yet turn away and be lost. Whether the scribe to whom Christ spoke these words ever passed over into his kingdom or not, the Scriptures do not inform us. It is to be hoped that he was saved. But oh, how inexpressibly sad is it that there are dear ones all about us who are continually treading on the very border of Christ's kingdom that may after all be lost! They sit with us in the same pew in the house of God; they go with us to the prayer meeting, and to the Sunday-school; they join us in the family worship; and yet from all of these, and in spite of all of these, they may pass finally into the "outer darkness." We fear that we do not feel for our children and friends about us as we should; if so, we would not only seek to lead them near the border, but into the kingdom of Christ. If we properly realized their danger, and the glorious nature of that kingdom that is offered to them, we would make more earnest and persistent efforts to reach them and bring them to Christ.

It is sad to lose a kingdom. The last king of the Moors in Spain may well have wept when, for the last time, his eyes rested upon fair Grenada; and who does not sympathize with France's greatest monarch when, like a caged eagle, he fretted out the remnant of his days on the storm swept rock of St. Helena! But what is the loss of such a kingdom, compared to the loss of the heavenly? If Napoleon was a Christian, then St. Helena ought to have been a Patmos to his soul; for it was only the stopping place from an earthly throne to a heavenly, and from a kingdom that had been lost to one that had been gained. Many of us, we fear, are more concerned about providing for the temporal welfare of our loved ones than we are about leading them to him who once said to his disciples, "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION.

At Greensboro the Baptist train was made up. Brethren from different parts of the State came together and made quite an interesting party. It was not long before we had shaken hands and passed a word with all, and then we were ready to sleep.

Wednesday morning we were in Atlanta. Quite a number of the brethren met us here and joined our merry party. The ride from Atlanta to Nashville was a long one, and but for our pleasant company we would doubtless have complained at our Secretary for taking us this route.

By Wednesday night we were in Nashville, and soon we were off to our homes, and every brother believes he has the best one in the city. The reception committee has done well. The delegation thus far is larger than usual; however, North Carolina has not so many as last year.

THE EDUCATIONAL SOCIETY.

Thursday at 11 a. m., we assembled in the First Baptist church to attend the joint session of the American Baptist Educational Society and the Southern Baptist Educational Conference. According to program the American Society was to meet first, but their train being delayed, Dr. Rothrell of William Jewell College called the Southern Educational Society to order. Rev. C. S. Gardner, of the Egfield church, delivered the address of welcome. He spoke of the educational advantages of Nashville; said she had seventeen colleges filled with students. His address was short and free from the usual red tape which characterizes addresses of welcome. Dr. Rothrell responded, and spoke feelingly of the death of Dr. Dudley of Georgetown College, and also spoke of the good the Southern Educational Society had done in its short life. He said that there was no conflict between the two existing societies. Both had for their object the advancement of the cause of education among Baptists.

The next thing being the enrollment of delegates, it was learned that there were between two and three hundred present, representing the different institutions of learning in our Southland. Visiting brethren representing the American Baptist Educational Society were invited to seats.

The election of officers resulted in the selection of Dr. Rothwell of William Jewell College, President; Dr. Thos. Hume of the University of North Carolina, Secretary.

Dr. A. J. Emmerson of Howard-Payne College, Texas, read a voluntary paper on "Higher Education in Texas." This was a good paper, and was much enjoyed by all. The North Carolina delegation were noticeably fond of its praise, because they remembered him to be a son of North Carolina and Wake Forest College.

Dr. H. H. Harris read a paper on "College Examinations and Degrees." He deplored low scholarships and the greed of so many colleges to confer diplomas. He said sometimes a diploma was all a boy carried away from college. He said many boys would be better off without a diploma.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Dr. Judson of New York, and other members of the American Baptist Educational Society, having arrived, this Society was called to order by President Judson. Quite a number of delegates were present, among them many distinguished men from the North. Probably the most conspicuous figure among them was Dr. Harper of the great Chicago University.

Dr. Edward Judson of New York was elected President, and Dr. H. M. Wharton of Baltimore was made Secretary. Treasurer Joshua Levering of Baltimore made his annual report. The Corresponding Secretary, Rev. Dr. F. T. Gates of Brooklyn, made his report. It was an interesting report, and called forth the closest attention. He said that this Society would under no consideration help any institution which would not lend local help. Out of the sixty-five white colleges in the South, only eleven were endowed. The help of the Society was largely given to colleges in the South. The Society raised last year $331,000. He spoke at length of the University of Chicago; that it now had $7,000,000. He also lauded John D. Rockefeller in words of extravagant praise.

NIGHT SESSION.

At night the two Societies met in joint session in the great Tabernacle, which will hold six thousand people. It was full. "Christian Education" was the theme. Dr. Judson was the first speaker. His speech was full of gems of thought. It would be difficult to attempt a synopsis.

Dr. W. R. Harper was the next speaker. He is very youthful in appearance for one so distinguished. He was received with great enthusiasm, and spoke mainly of "specialism."

Dr. J. L. M. Curry was the next speaker. His address was eloquent and fervid.

THE CONVENTION.

The thirty-eighth session of the Southern Baptist Convention met in Nashville, Tenn., May 12th.

The following officers were elected: Dr. Wm. E. Hatcher of Richmond placed Judge Haralson in nomination for the presidency of the fifth term, and he was elected by acclamation. The following vice presidents were elected by ballot: Governor Northen of Georgia, Joshua Levering of Maryland, Dr. Whitsitt of Kentucky, and Dr. S. H. Ford of Missouri. The present Secretaries, Dr. H. Lansing Burrows of Georgia and Dr. O. H. Gregory of Maryland, were elected by acclamation. Prof. H. H. Harris of Richmond was appointed chairman of the committee on the Order of Business.

The address of welcome was made by Dr. J. M. Frost, pastor of the First Baptist church, and was responded to by Dr. Henry McDonald of Georgia. At this juncture the courtesies of the Convention were extended to a number of distinguished visitors. Many of them responded in happy speeches.

AS ELSEWHERE stated, we did not mean to endorse anything which, in the article by "Observer," was calculated to reflect upon the character of President McIver. And while we take pleasure in saying this, we will say further that this is not to be construed to mean an endorsement of the institution over which he presides. What we meant to say by the reference we made to the article in question, and what we here reiterate, was that we were opposed to the policy of giving aid from the State to any institution of learning which can come into competition with other schools which are deprived of a like advantage. In this position we feel that we are securely backed by the principles of justice and common honesty, and that we have the sympathy of our brethren, and the endorsement of a large majority of the tax-payers of North Carolina.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Bro. J. H. Morrisette of Shiloh called to see us last week.

....Rev. J. E. Green has moved from Bostic to Mooresboro, N. C.

....Rev. Q. C. Davis, lately of Elm City, N. C., is now at Cumberland, Md.

....Prof. J. F. Lanneau of Wake Forest paid this office a pleasant visit last week.

....We were glad to have Bro. R. E. Peele, who spent some time in Raleigh last week, call to see us.

....Rev. J. W. Carter, Rev. C. Durham, Rev. J. J. Hall, Bro. N. B. Broughton and Miss Fannie Heck are absent from the city in attendance upon the Southern Baptist Convention at Nashville, Tenn.

....Bro. W. G. Ferrebee of Belcross was in Raleigh last week attending the Odd Fellows annual meeting, and called to see us. He reports the kingdom of the Lord in good condition so far as Eastern Carolina is concerned.

....Rev. E. F. Jones preached for the brethren at Gastonia on last Sunday. He leaves this week for Woodland, California, and expects to spend the summer in preaching at different places along the Pacific Coast.

....A correspondent of the Oxford Ledger, writing from Push, Va., says: "Rev. J. A. Stradley filled his appointment here Sunday. He preached a splendid sermon on training children with which we were all pleased."

....Please announce in the BIBLICAL RECORDER that the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of Wake Forest College will be held at Wake Forest on Tuesday, May 30th, 1893, at 10 a. m.—R. E. Royall, Sec., Wake Forest, May 11, 1893.

....Bro. Wm. Taylor of Goldsboro, N. C., in renewing his subscription, says, "I shall take the RECORDER as long as I take any paper. If it were to come to it, that I must drop every other paper or leave off the RECORDER, I should not hesitate a moment to let them all go."

....There will be an annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of Chowan Baptist Female Institute, at Murfreesboro, on Tuesday at 10 a. m., the 30th day of May, 1893. It is earnestly desired that all the Trustees of the Institution be present.—R. P. Thomas, President Board Trustees.

... Dr. Broughton, who had been assisting the pastor at the Baptist church in a series of meetings, left last Friday morning to fill other engagements. The meeting closed Sunday night. Eleven have been added to the church by baptism, and a large number are awaiting baptism.—Leaksville Gazette, May 11.

....Paternalism in the matter of education is just as odious as if presented in any other form, and we shall hail the day with great joy when the State will no longer furnish education to a few of its citizens while the great masses must live and die in ignorance for the lack of means to procure even the rudiments of an education.

....We are glad to hear that so many of our churches sent their pastors to the Southern Baptist Convention. This is wise, as well as magnanimous, on the part of the churches. And now when these brethren return, let them reciprocate by telling their brethren a part of what they saw and heard while at the Convention.

....On Sunday morning last, thirteen persons united with the Fayetteville Street church, Raleigh, on a relation of their Christian experience. This is a result of a series of meetings conducted by Bro. Hocutt of Wake Forest. Others are expected to join. The meetings are still in progress, Rev. O. L. Stringfield preaching during this week.

....We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation to attend the forty-fifth commencement exercises of the Chowan Baptist Female Institute at Murfreesboro, N. C., May 28th-31st, 1893. We have also received an invitation to attend the fifth annual closing exercises of Augusta Seminary, Augusta, N. C., May 17th, 1893.

....A minister recently had a call to another church, and his congregation waited anxiously to know if he would leave them. The old deacon met the minister's little boy in the road and asked him about it. "O, yes, we are going," said the boy. "But I didn't know your father had decided yet," exclaimed the troubled deacon. "He has not," the boy replied; "father is still on his knees praying for light, but mother—she's packing the trunk."

....Bro. J. W. Rose, who was employed by the brethren of the Newbern church the first of this year to do mission work in Craven county, is fully sustaining himself in the estimation of these brethren. His contact with them is greatly developing him as a preacher, and he is encouraged in his work. He is now ready to begin the building of a new church at one point on his field.

....Just as we are ready to go to press the sad news comes that Rev. J. H. Cuthbert, D. D., died at the residence of his brother, Rev. Lucius Cuthbert, near Aiken, Sunday last, after a brief illness. Dr. Cuthbert was for many years pastor of the First Baptist church of Washington, D. C. A more extended notice of this pure and noble Christian man will be published later.—Baptist Courier, May 11.

....Bro. F. P. Hobgood, Principal of Oxford Female Seminary, May 12, 1893, requests us to announce that the three great systems of railroads in the State—the Seaboard Air Line, the Richmond and Danville, and the Coast Line—have agreed to give reduced rates to persons wishing to attend the commencement exercises of Oxford Seminary. These rates can be known by applying to the nearest depot.

....The whole amount received by the Foreign Mission Board at Richmond, Va., during the year closing April 30, 1893, was $154 686.28, of which $21,345.90 was for "Permanent Fund" and $28,438.91 for "Enlargement." North Carolina gave $8,937.46, of which $726.55 was for "Enlargement" and $878.42 for "Permanent Fund." Western North Carolina gave $964.42, of which $85.45 was for "Permanent Fund" and $61.44 for "Enlargement."

....The semi centennial of Hollins Institute, Virginia, will occur on the 7th of June. See card in another column. This is not only the oldest but the most numerously attended boarding school in Virginia. It has had a successful career of fifty years, and was the only school in that State which continued its work throughout the war. Its graduates are scattered all over the land, many of them holding prominent positions as educators. Hollins has done a noble work, and has had a brilliant career.

....At a recent conference meeting of one of our best churches, there were some half dozen cases of discipline reported. The church withdrew fellowship from some, and the cases of others were deferred until later, but will probably be treated likewise. While this is to be regretted, yet it is evidence of the life and vigor of this church. We have long since ceased to fear that we shall not have an abundance of numbers in our churches, but what we are sometimes exercised about is that we may get a great many who ought not to be in the churches at all. A "back door" revival is sometimes a very healthy season for a church to pass through.

....Rev. Pinckney Oliver of Dalton, in enclosing a list of subscribers, writes: "We are moving on slowly in our section. Not much excited on the centennial of missions. Think the Lord would have us work every year alike. Believe the Master through his people will be just as able to take care of his cause in future years as he is now. Somehow we cannot realize that the church needs any endowment. Times are 'hard,' but we do not intend to fall behind the liberality of the past if we can possibly avoid it. The Lord help us to do our duty in every respect. I do appreciate your firmness to Bible principles so much. May you continue long to battle for truth and duty, though many Baptists may go wild."

....Bro. Charles D. Frink of Eldorendo, Ga., in renewing his subscription, writes under date of May 9th, 1893: "I enjoy reading the RECORDER in this my adopted home. It tells me what the brethren are doing in North Carolina and elsewhere. Here we have very little preaching, and especially Baptist. It is mostly Hardshell or Primitive Baptists here. Often when I read your editorials, news and notes, and many of the good articles contributed, what is being done at Wake Forest, and about the good meetings held in Raleigh, Winston, and other places, it makes me feel like I want to return to North Carolina and spend the remainder of my years. May the RECORDER continue to grow in power, influence and usefulness, and you be spared to live and edit it for many years to come."

Letter from Wake Forest College.

Several young men who expect to graduate at the next Commencement, and whom the Faculty can highly recommend as to character and scholarship, have not yet secured positions as teachers. Others, undergraduates, are desirous of securing schools for the vacation. And several young ministers would be willing to undertake to do colportage work, or to aid in evangelistic work, or to supply vacant pulpits. It will give me pleasure to put parties who may wish to secure the services of any of these young gentlemen in correspondence with them.

The Faculty passed a resolution yesterday afternoon suggesting that if the Memorial Endowment can be secured, it shall be known as "The William Royall Chair of English." There would seem to be a peculiar fitness in this. For the last twelve and a half years of his life, he was in charge of the school of English. And there are other reasons which will probably lead the Trustees to consider the suggestion favorably.

Quite a number of new Local Alumni Associations have recently been formed, and some of these have gone enthusiastically to work to carry out the ends of their organization. In reply to inquiries which have been made, I give herewith a copy of a form of Constitution which has met the approval of some of the Alumni.

Art. 1. This Association shall be called the Wake Forest Local Alumni Association of ———.

Art. 2. The object of this Association shall be to preserve and quicken the interest of its members in their Alma Mater; to discuss and devise ways and means for the enlargement of the influence and increase of the patronage of the College; to unite the Alumni and other friends of the Institution for the protection and advancement of its interests; to co-operate in the securing of better equipment and larger endowment; to found and to foster Academies which shall be feeders of the College; to secure through public lectures and discussions a deeper and more general interest in Common-school, Academic, Collegiate, and University education; and to aid, so far as possible, worthy and indigent young men in securing the advantages of liberal culture through the Students' Aid Fund.

Art. 3. All old students of Wake Forest College who reside in, or in the neighborhood of ———, shall be entitled to active membership in this Association. Other friends of Wake Forest College may be elected as honorary members.

Art. 4. The Association shall meet at least twice a year, and more frequently when meetings are called by the President.

Art. 5. The officers of the Association shall be a President, a Vice President, and a Secretary, who shall also act as Treasurer.

Art. 6. It shall be the duty of the President (and, in his absence, of the Vice President) to preside over all meetings, preserve order, appoint committees, and call special meetings.

Art. 7. It shall be the duty of the Secretary to keep a correct record of all proceedings, to conduct all correspondence, and to keep and disburse the funds of the Association.

Of course the above will probably be modified and improved by such new Associations as may adopt the general form.

Examinations will be in full blast next week. The students are working with the utmost diligence. CHAS. E. TAYLOR.

From Sister Tatum in China.

Dear Christian Friends:—We who are laboring as your representatives in this portion of the great China field, feel that we want you to share in our rejoicing over gathered sheaves. We cannot say our sheaves; for we feel how true it is that others have labored and we have entered into their labors, God permitting us to reap where others have sown. Moreover, in all the triumphs of the gospel on heathen shores, we feel sure that very much is due to the effectual, fervent prayers of the dear home workers, who make it possible for us to labor here.

As is already known to most of you, the Word of God has for several decades been faithfully preached in and about Shanghai, and the visible results are seen in the existence of about a dozen Christian churches, with a membership of something over a thousand. The fact, however, that there must be many thousands with a sufficient knowledge of gospel truth for the salvation of their souls, were that truth but brought home to their hearts by the Holy Spirit, has been weighing upon the minds and hearts of the Shanghai missionaries for a long time; and earnest prayers have been offered for a rich blessing to rest upon this field, and our faith has been strengthened to "expect great things from God."

Early in the year all the Shanghai missionaries united with the native Christians in a series of revival and evangelistic meetings, which continued for a month. Our native Christians had their spiritual strength greatly renewed and many of the heathen were interested to inquire more fully concerning the truth of the preached Word.

Soon after these meetings closed, a young man, who had attended them regularly and who had been brought to accept Christ as his Saviour, came before our Baptist church, told his experience and asked for baptism. Several of the brethren who knew his life testified to its Christian character, and his experience, as he related it, seemed so genuine that it was voted to receive the young brother and baptize him without the usual period of probation. He was baptized February 19th, the Sunday following China New Year, and we have since then felt much like calling him our Timothy, such a helper in the gospel has he been to us. He has a good understanding of his Bible, presents the truth clearly and forcibly, and more than all else goes from his knees to the pulpit. Every evening, for five weeks after his day's work is over, he has come to our North Gate chapel, to help in the meetings we have been holding there; Sunday afternoons he has spent with us in our work at the East Gate; and Sunday mornings, from seven until eight, he is giving his time to work among the country people who come into market to sell their cloth at that time.

Five weeks ago we commenced a series of special meetings at our various preaching places, our pastor, evangelist and six or eight of the brethren agreeing to help all they could, and faithfully and well have they labored. Surely we have great reason to praise the Lord for giving us such a noble and efficient band of native helpers who seem to find his service a delight. Every morning from seven to eight there has been Christian work among the country people who come into market; every afternoon, there has been preaching at either the East or West Gate chapel, and every evening at the North Gate chapel. At all these services there have been large and attentive audiences. The first half hour of the service is devoted to prayer, praise and the announcement of the text, with a few introductory words; the second half hour, three ten-minute sermons have been preached on the text for the day; and then, after singing the doxology, those present have been invited to remain for personal conversation about the gospel. Very many, oftentimes nearly the whole congregation, have been interested enough to remain and have lingered for a season of prayer, seeming loth to leave the place.

Four have already taken a decided stand, professing faith in Christ and asking for baptism. We have reason to hope that these four are honest in what they have done. One of them has been listening to the gospel for a long time and says it was Mr. Herring's preaching which led him to believe. These, who have expressed their desire to unite with God's people, have been formed into a class for further instruction, and, if they continue steadfast, will after a time be received into the church.

There are many others who are interested, some of whom say they believe the gospel message. The Chinaman does not, as a rule, consider himself a sinner, but the Spirit is present with us "convincing of sin."

We feel sure you will join us in earnest prayer to God to continue the work so graciously begun.

Mr. Bryan and Mr. Tatum are working hard, but both of them are unwell; they need your prayers that physical strength may be granted them for the Lord's work. Mrs Bryan is nursing her children through the measles and is weary in body. We do trust the journey home and the months spent there may be very beneficial to the whole family.

With so many at home who know the Shanghai field, we feel sure its needs and claims will not fail to be well presented.

The Bryans expect to leave for home in May, and then we shall be alone for a time—not long, we trust; for, even should our hopes as to new workers be disappointed, we look forward with joy to welcoming back our dear Mrs. Yates at the beginning of another year.

This letter which I agreed to write, because I seemed freer to do so than any one else, is to represent us all, and assures you of our loving interest in, and prayers for, all the home work and workers.

Sincerely, ALICE M. TATUM

A Great Opportunity.

Dear Recorder:—An opportunity is now before us—one not likely to present itself again in the lives of the present generation of the Baptists of North Carolina—an opportunity to do for Wake Forest College what has been for a great many years one of the most definite hopes of those who have observed the chief needs of its enlarged influence and usefulness—namely, the establishment of a Chair of the Bible as a feature of the College curriculum.

The need of this was apparent before the death of the great and good Dr. Royall emphasized it, and before the desire to honor his memory gave inspiration to the effort now of securing it. It was a need inherent in the very character and spirit of the institution as the college of a great Bible-loving denomination.

But now with this need and the desire to honor the name and character of Dr. Royall, and with the advantageous and liberal offer of the American Baptist Educational Society, if we fail to accept and use the opportunity, we shall be derelict to a grave extent of a great duty.

It is an opportunity not merely to enlarge and endow for wider usefulness our College, but it is an opportunity to emphasize with particular emphasis a principle which has slowly been losing support and countenance in the country and in our State, and which has of late years found but little favor in undenominational educational circles—that any but a Christian education is a curse and not a blessing. I think the Baptists of North Carolina are called on to set the seal of their approval on Christian education and to do it in such a manner as cannot be misunderstood. A Chair of the Bible at Wake Forest College will commit the denomination to this in such a way.

It is not needful to urge arguments. The Bible is the Baptist argument. The more it is studied, the more it is understood, the stronger Baptists become and the more firmly are Baptist principles founded. We should have this Book taught in the institution, which, as it always has done, is to furnish us three-fourths of the training received by our ministry, and in which are educated such a large proportion of our laity.

Now if this effort is to be successful, if we are to raise by Jan. 1st, 1894, $20,000, there must be on the part of the Alumni an earnest co-operation with the effort and a ready liberality in giving the movement impetus and certainty. The demand for earnestness and liberality rests peculiarly on the classes graduating since 1860. It is the William Royall Chair we are to endow. In honor and testimony it is to be of that noble Christian teacher whose influence upon the thirty classes graduating since that time is to be measured only by heavenly weights and measures. Since 1860, the time at which Dr. Royall came to the College, 280 men have been graduated. Of that number, 200 are now living. The very large majority of these are men of prominence and influence in their communities. Now let these thirty classes rally in such a way to this effort as to place success in sight, and the effort cannot fail.

It is an opportunity, but like all other opportunities it is a fleet horse and must be mounted unhesitatingly, or he soon flies beyond the reach. As chairman of the committee of classes, I shall write to the chairman of each class stating the plan of work. By looking in the RECORDER of the first week in February in Dr. Taylor's letter, the names of these will be found. All together now, for the honor of Dr. Royall, for the advancement of the College and for the study of God's word. JOHN E. WHITE.

"Honor to Whom Honor."

[We give the following letter of the Home Mission Secretaries, addressed to our State Secretary, Rev. Dr. C. Durham.—EDITOR]

Dear Brother:—At a meeting of the Home Mission Board held on Wednesday evening the 3d inst. the Secretaries were instructed to convey to you as one of the State Secretaries who have helped us in our work, our hearty thanks, and it is our pleasure, as well as our duty, to comply, as we hereby do, with the instructions of the Board.

You will be glad to know that the receipts of the Board for the past year have been over $100,000 at our office, besides about $150,000 raised by co operative bodies to be spent on the fields where raised. We do not hesitate to say that the co-operation, and active help of the State Secretaries have contributed in no small measure to this result, and that for such success in the future we must depend largely upon the sympathies and active support of the State Secretaries.

The work of our 368 missionaries have also been greatly blessed during the year and we shall be able to present to the Convention at Nashville the best report the Board has ever made.

We need scarcely add the assurance that the Home Mission Board holds itself always ready to co-operate with the States in their work just so far as it may be deemed mutually desirable, and the churches may furnish us the means.

Allow us to take this opportunity of tendering you our personal thanks for the Christian courtesy you have shown the Secretaries of the Home Mission Board, and for the readiness you have shown to help us in our work. Praying God's richest blessings on your own special field, and hoping the coming year may prove the best in the history of all the Boards, we are

Yours fraternally,

I. T. TICHENOR,
J. WM. JONES.

From Florida.

Dear Recorder:—Your smiling, ubiquitous face greets me with unfailing regularity down in this bright, sunny, flowery State, suggesting to me the words of the immortal Tennyson on "The River":

> "Men may come and men may go,
> But you go on forever."

May it be so, scattering your cheerful beams everywhere, making men happier and their burdens lighter.

I have been in the Peninsular State for two months. I have seen "lots" of sights, and more folks, and some of the best I have met are from "ye Old North State."

At Live Oak, where I preach bi-monthly, is Sister Allen and her family from Oxford. At Ocala I met Brother and Sister Crawford, from Oxford, also, whose facile pens have enriched your columns. Keep them at it; don't let their pens rust. At Tampa is "Will Osborne," than whom Florida has no abler and better man. At De Land, as all the world knows, is Farriss, sometime on the editorial staff of the RECORDER, now professor of Greek in Stetson University and editor of the Baptist Witness, which he and Porter are making a power for good and increasing in momentum every day.

After meeting these good people, regular "Tar-heels," and remembering that this scribe for a time pitched his tent on your sacred soil, seeing these and himself doing so well and being so content, he concludes that North Carolina is a good State to move away from, and Florida is a good State to move into. If you have any more of such as I mentioned above, send them on "C. O. D.," we will cheerfully pay the carriages.

I drank tea (coffee) and spent an evening in Bro. T. D. Crawford's family. It was most pleasant to know them. They are among Dr. Geiger's most faithful church-workers and a great comfort to him.

It goes without saying that Farriss has the "true editorial gumption" in being the man and the occasion met in him and the Baptist Witness.

As I said, I have been off Georgia soil two months. Coming down, I was in the "Nancy Hanks" wreck, in which the engine, tender and cars were dashed, mashed, smashed into smithereens and scattered in fragments; but in the eloquent English of an Atlanta reporter, "I came out unskated!" Did he mean unscathed?

I have been busy; held two protracted meetings, one at Ocala, one here; preached 37 sermons, made 101 pastoral visits, etc., etc. I need not tell you I have regained my health.

My home is here, brand new two-story parsonage, artesian water through it, hard by the church. Here I find a most delightful, congenial people, gentle and refined. Here I preach two Sundays a month. At Live Oak, county-town of Suwannee county, I preach two Sundays a month. These, both county towns in adjacent counties, one hour's ride apart, on the same railroad, make one of the pleasantest pastorates in the South, and I am undoubtedly the happiest pastor in Florida. I am so grateful for having my health given back to me and for being again permitted to enter the pastorate. My last pastor, Dr. Henry McDonald of Atlanta, said to me as he bade me good by, "Strickland, God bless you, and may you do the best work of your life in Florida." God helping me, I mean to.

Suwannee, did I say? Yes, from childhood's days I've sang:

> "Way down upon the Swannee river, > Far, far away," &c.

Now I am here, the grand old river flows between the two counties, and tis no longer "far, far away."

But I forbear, I sat down to write a letter, and have just run on; I can't re-write it, for the train will soon be here to carry me on to the gathering of the Baptist tribes at Nashville, whither my sisters have ordered me, supplying the sinews of war for the trip. Bless them, how can pastors do without them? I like Mary—calm, sedate, devoted, worshipful—sitting at the Master's feet, but Marthas are necessities in the present order of things, too—"careful and troubled about many things." I thought of Martha as I saw a good sister driving her pony around and levying contributions for this trip, of which the writer is the hero. Give me some Marys, but more Marthas.

Dear RECORDER, I stand with you on taxation for State colleges, journeymen evangelists, independent foreign missionaries, and holiness craze.

If you see Dr. Pritchard, tell him, "Brer Fox sen' his lub ter brer rabbit, sis rabbit, an' all de fambly—Mity glad brer rabbit git so heap much noticin Shailot. Hit won't spile 'im.

Should be glad to pick you out among the surging cyclone of Baptists in the Rock City and wring your hand in memory of "Auld lang syne." Yours fraternally,

WM HENRY STRICKLAND.

Madison, Fla., May 5, 1893.

A Short Statement.

Thinking that some of the methods of our Boards might be improved, I offered a friendly suggestion. I also allowed a correspondent to make a complaint through Charity and Children, at the same time condemning some of his expressions. If these had been received in the spirit in which they were offered, good might have resulted. But a personal attack was made upon me in two papers the same week, while the complaint of our correspondent was not answered. Instead of arguments and explanations, came war paint on both cheeks and chips on both shoulders. There came also a hue and cry for the names of those who had expressed honest opinions. They must be hectored and hounded till no one will dare to bell the cat. Having given a fair hearing to each side, I dismissed the subject from the columns of Charity and Children. But it is still continued in secret circulars sent to many ministers, who are requested to nose up something against me. I have not seen it, but tell as I have heard. A poor little orphan editorial in the BIBLICAL RECORDER rises to a point of veracity. I printed a statement made by a leading member of his church concerning the basement (not the gutter) of his house of worship. Editors must believe somebody, and the best men make mistakes.

And now I have a great work on hand—no time to devote to Sanballats, and so I dismiss this subject from my thoughts.

Are there any people who do nothing to help the children of their dead brethren and sisters, and ease their consciences by finding fault with me? Alas! what a sorry form of religion! J. H. MILLS.

Timely and Appropriate.

The sermon from the great preacher, Dr. Francis Wayland, that is now going through the first page columns of the BIBLICAL RECORDER, is most timely indeed; and it is to be hoped that all our preachers, old and young, will carefully read it and endeavor to preach the gospel every time they stand up before their congregations on the "Lord's Day" and on all other days.

The "Word of the Lord" and a "thus saith the Lord" are the themes for us; not human speculations; not the views and opinions of men; not even our own opinions of what that Word declares, but the declarations of the Word itself; nothing more, nothing less. The gospel is what is needed, whether it is wanted or not; and the preaching we do must be that which will be pleasing to the Lord Jesus; if it please men, all well, if it does not, all well, so we preach the gospel; and not dissertations, nor discourses, nor theories, nor other vagaries about the things of kingdom.

There is too much of just such so-called preaching done now, and we are disgusted and ashamed of it; and when our brethren in the ministry rely upon the Holy Spirit more, and less upon themselves and their own efforts, souls will be saved by the Lord, and he will add them to the church daily, even now as it was in the days of the Apostles.

There is still a call and always will be a call for faithfulness and boldness on the part of every true servant of Christ, everywhere, and at all times; in the pulpit and out, in the social circle, in the prayer-meeting, in the sanctum of the editor, everywhere, and this brings to mind the excellent and appropriate editorial in the last issue of the BIBLICAL RECORDER, on "The Sabbath Question." If some of our people are not ready to go daft on Sabbath-day-ism in some localities, then we are greatly mistaken. If we were able, we'd buy about forty copies of the RECORDER, containing the article on the "The Sabbath Question," and send them out to the deluded "folks" up in the Crankbury township, "free gratis for nothing," that they might "read and learn and inwardly digest" the truth on that subject; for some of them seem to be determined to go back to Judaism and its rituals or "bust," and they stay shut up in their houses, hid, apparently, all day Saturday, and, on Sunday morning, the real Lord's day, they are ready to take their plows and hoes and start for the cotton fields to the utter disgust of all right thinking people in the neighborhood; which makes us know just what we do know, that "all the fools are not dead yet."

We are sorry for such people; but why will they listen to "every wind of doctrine" that "cunning craftiness" can suggest, and allow themselves to be led astray by artful teachers of the Sabbatarianism which is really only Saturdayism? It is amazing how new things take hold on some people!

The exhortation of the Apostle Paul in Gal. v, should be specially heeded in this perilous time of the age in which we live, "Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty, wherewith Christ has made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage," &c. W. B. HARRELL.

My Last Request for Help.

Dear Brethren:—I am trying to build a house at Moyock on the N. & S. R. R., the largest town between Norfolk and Elizabeth City. We have a small church of twelve members, but the outlook is promising if we can get a house of worship. All the property of the church would not amount to more than $2,000. We have a good lot paid for, and the timber for the frame.

My work is about done, and I am very sure I shall never make another request. I do earnestly desire to see this work finished before I die. I ask, therefore, that every one who reads what I have written, that they send me a contribution for the Lord's house at Moyock. My postoffice is Belcross, Camden county, N. C.

R. R. OVERBY.

Resolutions.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Western Union, Raleigh Association, at the late session of that body:

Resolved, That we, the representatives of the churches composing the Western Section of the Union Meeting of the Raleigh Association, express our deep sadness at the absence of Rev. J. R. Maynard, a brother much beloved and of great usefulness in our midst, who died recently at his home in Morrisville. We shall miss him in our churches, in our gatherings, and in our homes; but feel that our loss is his eternal gain. An earnest, consecrated man of God is gone. The faithful citizen and friend will meet us no more in this life.

Resolved, That the sympathies of this Union are tendered to his bereaved wife and children; that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, and one sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

The Memoir of Dr. James P. Boyce. By John A. Broadus, D. D., LL. D. Price $1.75.

By the help of Dr. Boyce's kindred and other friends, the work contains quite a full account of his ancestry, and his childhood and youth in Charleston, S. C., and of his education in Brown University and Princeton Theological Seminary; also of his experience as editor of a religious paper, and as pastor at the capitol of South Carolina, as Professor of Theology in Furman University, and as the chief founder and the president of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. It tells of his work as a chaplain in the Confederate army, and a member of the South Carolina Legislature, and of his long course of struggling toil in keeping alive, and finally endowing, the Theological Seminary. It has interesting letters from him, and accounts of his works, and very striking and attractive estimates of his character, furnished by persons who knew him well. Many interesting questions about theological education are discussed in extracts from Dr. Boyce's works, and also by the author; but the book is mainly a narrative.

Three girls and their Motto. By E. L. S. E. Author of Walter Harley's Conquest. 12mo, 200 pp. Price, $1.00. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

The story is an excellent one, especially for young Christian girls. It is most helpful in its tone and teaching, and to our mind is more true to the New Testament idea of the kingdom of Christ, which is "righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost," than are they who teach us that the kingdom is still in the future, and that we must look for its revelation by-and-by in all pomp and circumstance of material splendor.

Prospective Union of Regular and Free-Will Baptists.

A movement has been quietly going forward in this State during the last few weeks in the direction of a union between the two branches of the Baptist family known as Regular and Free-Will. A definite conclusion was reached last Monday evening which we are at liberty to lay before our readers, the restriction of privacy which was laid upon the movement from its beginning being now removed.

The Free-Will Baptists separated from the regular order in New Hampshire in 1780. The ground of separation was the rejection of the high Calvinistic doctrines then held and preached in Baptist churches. The new denomination gradually spread and increased until now it numbers in the United States 1630 churches, with an aggregate membership of nearly 85,000. In Michigan there are 125 churches, with a membership of 5550.

About three months ago Rev. J. D. McColl of Jackson suggested to Rev. C. E. Conley that it might be possible to secure a union of the two denominations in Michigan. Mr. Conley brought the suggestion to the Bureau of Ministerial Supply, and was advised to co-operate with Mr. McColl in securing a conference of representative brethren from both sides to consider the matter.

The conference was held in the First Baptist church in Jackson on the 13th of March.

The following brethren had been invited from the Regular Baptists: Revs. A. S. Carman, C. E. Conley, E. R. Currey, W. L. Farnum, Z Grenell, S. Haskell, J. Huntington, J. S. Holmes, J. L. Jackson, E. H. E. Jameson, J. A. Johnston, D. D. MacLaurin, W. Whitney, T. S. Woodlin, all of whom were present, excepting Dr. Haskell.

From the Free-Will side Revs. E. O. Dickinson, R. Dunn, H. F. Ford, C. B. Hart, J. L. Higbee, G. A. Jackson, J. D. McColl, J. H. Maynard, C. B. Mills, C. H. Myers, W. A. Myers, F. R. Randall, D. B. Reed, J. I. Twner and W. P. VanWormer had been invited, all but three of whom were present. Dr. Dunn and Prof. Reed are prominent members of the faculty of Hillsdale college.

After devotional exercises, in which a number of prayers were offered for the guidance of the Holy Spirit, and hymns breathing a spirit of fellowship were sung, Mr. Conley gave an account of the steps leading up to the meeting. The conference organized by appointing Rev. J. A. Johnston chairman, Rev. W. A. Myers secretary. The papers which had been prepared by request of the committee were read as follows:

"The History of the Free Baptists," by Dr. Dunn; "The Desirableness of Union between the Baptist Brotherhoods," by Z Grenell; "Points of Agreement," by Dr. Jameson.

Discussion of these papers, especially the last, followed, in which there was much freedom and candor of expression, with an evident desire to understand each other's position, and to find forms of expressing the truths and precepts of the gospel equally acceptable to all.

While this discussion was in progress, a committee was in session in an adjoining residence comparing the articles of faith issued by the two bodies to find the points upon which they are separated. After an hour and a half the committee returned and reported that there are three divergences:

(1) As to the election of grace, (2) as to the perseverance of the saints, (3) as to the terms of admission to the Lord's Supper.

While these points were under discussion, many of those in attendance being obliged to return home, it was decided to adjourn, after appointing a committee to formulate a basis of prospective union, and to call the conference together again when they were ready to report.

The second session of the conference was held in the same place last Monday afternoon and evening.

All those who were in attendance at the former session were present, excepting Revs. A. S. Carman, J. S. Holmes, D. D. MacLaurin and W. Whitney on the one side, and Revs. J. H. Maynard, E. O. Dickinson, J. I. Twner and C. B. Mills on the other.

The report of the committee on the proposed basis of union was presented by Rev. C. E. Conley, and after some slight modifications of expression, was adopted section by section, the roll being called for each vote and every member of the conference voting aye.

"It is the judgment of this conference that Regular and Free Baptists, looking to the ultimate union of the two bodies, can consistently agree to the following:

1. No abandonment of doctrines now held is required, but the Regular Baptists are asked to signify their acceptance of the doctrines of the freedom and responsibility of man, and the Free Baptists are asked to signify their acceptance of the doctrines of grace, the exact interpretation of all doctrines being left to the individual subject only to the mind of the Lord as revealed in the New Testament.

2. According to the teaching and practice of the apostles, baptism should be received immediately after regeneration, and therefore properly precedes the Lord's Supper and public Christian duties.

3. It is advisable that invitations to the Lord's Supper be omitted, the announcement of the observance of the Supper being considered sufficient.

4. All our churches are advised to omit the use of the term "sacrament," as defining the nature and meaning of the ordinances, and that "watch-care membership" be discontinued where it has existed.

5. It is suggested that our churches discontinue the use of the distinctive terms, "Regular," "Particular," "Free" and "Free Will," and use only the name Baptist.

6. It is suggested that churches of both bodies mutually accept church letters of commendation and ministerial credentials.

The discussion of the several points in the report was full, general and spirited, but was characterized by the most fraternal and conciliatory tone. Some of the points were reconstructed several times before the vote was taken, but in most instances the intention of the committee was preserved. The third point, after being amended and rephrased, lengthened and shortened, was brought back to the form in which it was substantially offered in the first instance.

Resolutions were adopted favoring union services, appointing a committee to advise in cases where organic union of two churches may be deemed advisable, and commending Hillsdale and Kalamazoo colleges and the Divinity School of the Chicago University. Also it was agreed to hold a Baptist Congress some time in the coming autumn or early winter, for the discussion of questions relating to practical work, and a committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements. It was decided, too, to publish and issue to the churches a circular letter giving an account of the conference and its conclusions.—Christian Herald.

We commend the above to the thoughtful consideration of our brethren in this State. If something could be done to unite the Free Will Baptists and our own people of this State, would not the cause of our Master be the better served? Why cannot this union be agreed to by both organizations? Will some of the brethren in position to consult with our Free Will brethren bring this matter to their attention, and report the indication of disposition to consider this proposition favorably?

"Plunge, and Stay There."

The presbytery of the Presbyterian church recently convened at Greenwood, S. C., to examine and ordain a young man to the ministry. During the examination an elderly Presbyterian divine from Anderson, S. C., asked the candidate: "What does immersion mean?" "Immersion means," said the candidate, "to plunge." "What else does it mean beside plunging?" questioned the doctor. "Plunge and stay there," was the candidate's reply. Well, the doctor sanctioned that expression. The correct interpretation of plunge and stay there is to bury and drown. What else can it mean. This is a sad reflection upon us Baptists, and a gross insult to the Giver of the Ordinance. I never heard that the Baptists plunged and drowned. This is a new thing under the sun. I am very sorry to say that an ordinance, like baptism, so sacred, so solemn, and so significant, has become an object of ridicule and severe criticism by our Pedo baptist brethren.

Now, if immersion means plunge and stay there (drown), I would rather be plunged and drowned according to the correct teachings of the Bible, than to be sprinkled or poured upon according to the corrupt and unfounded teachings of the church of Rome, and of other churches with modified Romanism. It is far better, nobler and honorable to obey God than to follow the spurious doctrines of men.

I know all about the church of Rome and its errors, follies and corruptions. My own father was a Roman Catholic. I am very well acquainted with the Greek church, and familiar with its rituals and doctrines, pure and impure. My dear mother was once connected with that church and immersed there, but not drowned. I was immersed in the Greek church likewise with trine immersion, and plunged once in the Baptist church, but neither my priest nor my pastor attempted to let me stay there or be drowned. I declare how inconsistent our Pedobaptist brethren are in translating baptizo into sprinkling or pouring, without any Scripture foundation, except the infallible testimony of the infallible Pope of Rome. Some time ago a Presbyterian minister remarked publicly that there was no evidence of the baptism of Jesus. He might as well have said, "There is no God, no heaven, no hell, no church, no Bible and no religion," and be done with it.

Is there no sufficient proof in the New Testament to substantiate the doctrine of believer's immersion? A careful New Testament reader cannot be anything else but a Baptist and an immersionist. Why not our sprinklers go to the best Greek scholars of Greece and ask them the true meaning of their own word baptizo? But the very Grecian peasant, with little or no culture, will say baptism means nothing but to immerse, plunge, submerge, bury, put under water. A celebrated professor of the University of Athens, Greece, in a letter addressed to Rev. Calvin Jones of Chattanooga, Tenn., said that baptism meant immersion. This very letter was published and given to the public of America. The Greek church from time immemorial has been practicing immersion, and that only. She is a living testimony among the nations speaking out louder and louder, so that we could hear, understand, and be convinced, and quit our non-sensical arguments as to the mode and meaning of baptism.

But some may think the New Testament infant sprinkling is the continuation of the Old Testament circumcision. The Bible does not teach so. The Bible teaches faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and obedience to divine command. Others may say immersion is indecent. The Bible does not say so. It is far from being indecent. Take it for granted, however, that immersion is not decent, was not circumcision, upon which infant sprinkling is founded, an indecent practice, too? God commanded it, and the Jews had to obey God, and practice it. No human excuses or objections raised against the practice of immersion are justifiable in the sight of God. Was not the Presbyterian mission in Greece a complete failure because of substituting sprinkling for immersion? I believe some of those missionaries had to submit to practicing immersion. The believer's baptism is what the Bible teaches. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

Ordination.

At the request of Cool Springs Baptist church, Moore county, N. C., on Saturday night, April 29, 1893, a presbytery, consisting of Elders W. H. H. Lawhon, W. H. Smith and I. T. Newton, met at the residence of Bro. Sidney Weatherspoon of Sanford, N. C., to examine Bro. C. J. F. Anderson with a view to his ordination.

Presbytery organized by electing Brother Lawhon, Chairman, and I. T. Newton, Secretary.

After a thorough and satisfactory examination as to his Christian experience, call to the ministry, and views of doctrine, it was decided to ordain Bro. Anderson to the full work of the gospel ministry.

Accordingly, the ordination service took place at Cool Springs church on Sunday, April 30th, as follows:

Ordaining prayer by W. A. Smith; charge and presentation of Bible by W. H. H. Lawhon; sermon by I. T. Newton.

Enormous Circulation.

The Advanced Quarterly issued by the American Baptist Publication Society has attained the enormous circulation of one-half million copies each quarter, and this even would be doubled if every school knew its excellence and value and remarkably low price of 2½ cents per copy—nine cents per year. Any school not familiar with this lesson help ought to send for a specimen copy.

Hope.

No good work was ever begun that obstacles and hindrances did not speedily present themselves; and the better the work, the more and greater do the difficulties often seem to be. It is these that try men's courage; and it is in the face of them that one begins to appreciate how grand an element hope is in a noble life. Hope is as much a duty of the Christian as faith or charity. Resolute hopefulness often snatches victory from the jaws of defeat, and a "fervent spirit," as St. Paul calls it, is a spirit so warmed with sacred enthusiasm as to be full of resolute and courageous hope. It is utterly intolerant of the lukewarm faintheartedness that allows good and hopeful works to drag along to needless failure.—The Worker.

Danger in Persecuting Your Pastor.

"Touch not mine anointed." It has not unfrequently occurred that the pastor has been cruelly persecuted by certain members of the church. They have done all they could to make life miserable. They have slandered him, they have attempted to thwart his plans and destroy his influence, to reduce his income, to darken his pathway. You have known such men. We want to say that in an experience of a good many years we have seldom known a man who maliciously persecuted the pastor, who was not, sooner or later, laid low by God's hand. We do not presume to say that it is the divine judgment, but the two facts, so far as our observation goes, have been almost invariably linked the one with the other. O brother, if your hand is lifted against your pastor, take care; there is bitterness in store for you.—Central Baptist.

A Few Words to Young Converts.

You who have recently found the Saviour and felt his love shed abroad in your hearts, and feel as though you would always be on the mountain-top of joy, peace and love, remember you are but babes in Christ, and need to be encouraged by the older ones "who have long borne the burden and heat of the day."

The eye of the world is upon you, and you exert an influence over them for good or evil, just as your walk or conversation may indicate. Strive to enter in at the straight gate. There is no standing still in the divine life; you will go backward and not forward. The command is, "Go work to-day in my vineyard." Work for Jesus. Speak one little word for him. We cannot do enough for him who has done so much for us!

Many are the machinations of the wicked one. "He goeth about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour"; but the love of the Saviour prevails and succors us in our temptations, and will make a way for our escape if we will but seek his guidance. Our Father has promised to "be with his children even unto the end." Take the Bible for your guide, study it carefully and prayerfully: it will be "a light to your feet and a lamp unto your path;" then you will ever be ready to give a reason for the hope that lieth within you; and others seeing your good works will be constrained to glorify your Father which art in heaven. "If sinners entice thee, consent thou not," neither go with them, for their way leadeth to destruction. But come thou with us, and we will do thee good.

Remember, young Christian soldier, "the battle is not to the strong, nor the race to the swift." Of ourselves we can do nothing; "we are but worms of the earth." Put on the whole armor of God, and for an helmet the hope of salvation. He is your "shield and buckler, and strong rock of defence." Are you suffering affliction or distress in any way? His pitying eye is ever on you, and he will tenderly carry the feeble lambs in his bosom, and will place a crown on his saints that shall never fade away. Then

When to glory we shall rise,
And with the victory win the prize;
We'll sing and shout over sufferings o'er,
Yea, then we'll weep and sigh no more.

M. G. C.

Ridgeway, May 2, 1893.

Peculiar to Women.

THEIR SUFFERINGS MORE THAN EQUAL ALL CAUSED BY THE WORLD'S EPIDEMICS.

In the treatment of chronic troubles indigestion comes first, as being the most important and most susceptible to rapid relief and cure. Second on the list is placed the numerous and often nameless troubles known as female complaints. They are usually a bugbear to the profession and cause more suffering than all the epidemics known in history.

In the vast majority of cases they spring directly from faulty nutrition. Both their origin and continuance can be summed up in the one word "Weakness." The organ is somewhat in the shape of an inverted bottle held in position by muscles at its lower extremity. From lack of proper digestion and assimilation these muscles become unable to do their work, so that the least jolt or wrench causes the organ to lose its place, and, being top-heavy, it falls to one side or the other. The unusual pressure on the other organs gives rise to the various bladder and bowel troubles, including constipation, unfortunately too common and familiar to all females to need description. Give these disturbances as many names as the symptoms developed call for and the fact remains that there is but one cause for them all. Treat these symptoms in the way dictated by the best medical authority, and still the fact remains that there is no cure but to remove this cause. The patient must have strength, and can only get it in Nature's way—by food eaten, digested, and assimilated. Everything else attempted is but a delusion and a snare and only prolongs the agony.

By stimulating the digestion and toning all the organs of the body to normal action, the Electropoise admirably meets this demand. Experience in treating cases of the character outlined above with the Electropoise has been so varied, and success so uniform, that reference can be given in every State. With this experience and special instruments adapted to local treatment relief and a cure come so easily and quickly to women who have lost hope and are a burden to themselves and all around them, including their physicians, that really it is a pleasure to be the means of relieving so much suffering.

Lost His Pipe and Popularity.

It is related of a Methodist preacher who, in spite of an irritating pomposity of manner, enjoyed a fair degree of popularity, that, having foresworn the use of tobacco, he made the announcement to his congregation with the utmost gravity as follows: "My respected hearers will excuse me this morning if they observe that I do not speak with my usual coherency; for I have been trying to abandon the use of tobacco—a filthy practice taught me by my venerable father, who died and went to heaven a great many years ago when he ought to have been in better business." Which, if a moral is needed, may be used to illustrate the evil effect of tobacco upon a preacher given to personal references, and to the pernicious use of long and involved sentences in the pulpit.—Chicago Christian Advocate.

The Sunday-school.

Dear Recorder:—With your permission, I beg leave to speak a few words to the Baptist brethren and sisters of this State concerning the Sunday-school work. As I have been laboring in the Sunday-school from the earliest dawn of my existence, I feel it my duty to do all I can for the advancement and edification of that grand and glorious work. I was but six years of age when I first united with the school at Rockyhock church, first as a student, then as teacher, and then I became superintendent of a branch school near by. As I travel from church to church, preaching the unsearchable riches of the dear Son of God, I feel it to be my bounden duty to try to stir up the Sunday-school workers to a double diligence in the discharge of their every duty.

Teachers, are you doing all you can to interest your pupils and make the lessons profitable to them? Do you attend regularly and greet your classes with a pleasant smile and a cordial hand-shake?

Do you little boys and girls, scholars in the Sunday-school, know who it was that organized the first Sunday-school? If not, I will tell you. It was Robert Raikes in Gloucester, England, who organized the first Sunday-school of modern times in the year 1780. Did the institution thus started lie still and do nothing? No; it spread over the British isles. Did it stop there? It did not; it found a warm reception in the hearts of the American people. It has gone from the ice-clad, snow-covered regions of the Arctic shores to the southern Patagonian Pampas; from the Atlantic to the Pacific shores. It has clamored up the mountain sides and dispelled the gloom of sin, rendering Christianity lovely to behold.

Now, in conclusion, may the Sunday-school ever prosper, winning for its workers a crown of never-fading glory.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

The Spurgeon Monument Unveiled.

On the afternoon of April 19th, 1893, at Norwood cemetery, London, a massive granite and marble monument, which has been erected over the grave of the late Rev. C. H. Spurgeon, was unveiled in the presence of several prominent members of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, together with a number of delegates to the Pastors' College, now in session. One of the panels of the monument bears a striking medallion portrait in marble of the great preacher, and immediately below it is a cushion of polished red granite, with the open Bible in marble, bearing the text, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." In front of the pedestal is a granite door leading to the vault below, engraved with the simple inscription—"Here lies the body of Charles Haddon Spurgeon, waiting for the appearing of his Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."—Christian Secretary.

"I Have no Influence."

Don't say so. All have some. A gentleman lecturing said, "Everybody has influence, even that child," pointing to a little girl in her father's arms.

"That's true," cried the man. At the close he said to the lecturer, "I beg your pardon, sir, but I could not help speaking. I was a drunkard; but as I did not like to go to the public-house alone, I used to carry this child. As I approached the public-house one night, hearing a great noise inside, she said, 'Don't go, father!' 'Hold your tongue, child!' 'Please, father, don't go!' 'Hold your tongue! I said.' Presently I felt a big tear fall on my cheek. I could not go a step further, sir. I turned round and went home, and have never been in a public-house since. Thank God for it! I am now a happy man, sir, and this little girl has done it all, and when you said that even she had influence, I could not help saying, 'That's true, sir.' All have influence."—Newman Hall.

Judge Browning of Illinois, who succeeds General Morgan as Commissioner of Indian Affairs, is a Baptist. He is said to be a man of ability and of high personal character. We trust he will administer his difficult office on the same high plane as did his predecessor. Now that all the leading Protestant denominations—Presbyterians, Congregationalists, Episcopalians and Methodists have abandoned the contract school system, we hope the new Commissioner will be able to complete the good work of separating the government entirely from sectarian schools and appropriations in educating the Indians.—Christian Inquirer.

Chinese Work in the South.

In the report of the committee on plan of work, at the last annual meeting of Woman's Missionary Union at Atlanta, Ga., May, 1892, the third item reads:—

"That wherever the Chinese are found, whether many or few, they be gathered and taught the Word of God and prayer."

In order to bring this work definitely before our women's missionary societies of the South it is necessary to present the need for such work, and also to give some encouraging features connected with it.

In almost every city of considerable size in the South may be found Chinamen in larger or smaller numbers. It will be observed that they are anxious to perfect themselves in the English language, and may therefore be induced to attend school on Sunday for this purpose, though it is to be regretted that they are too frequently indifferent to appeals on the subject of personal religion.

This at the outset seems discouraging. But whenever one heart in a community is found to undertake this work, instances may be cited showing most blessed results following efforts put forth by such an one. The fact in these schools that each scholar must have his own particular teacher tends to concentrate work; and if the teacher labors and prays in the spirit, the effort cannot be in vain in the Lord.

Der Sang, a member of Eutaw Place church, and convert of that Sunday-school, stated when spoken to about attending the school that he laughed in derision; but after finding he could there be taught English, he concluded he would become a scholar. He says he came to this country to make money, and after he should be able to lay aside several thousand dollars, he intended to return and enjoy it in his own home in China. The lady who became his teacher was determined that God should give her his soul, and for this she labored, for this she prayed, and Sunday after Sunday while teaching his letters and setting copies on his slate, she made him feel her deep and personal interest in him. He came to find that she was his friend, and gradually his heart was opened to receive the message she had for his soul's salvation. Now he says, though he came for money, he has found what money cannot buy, that which is beyond all price—"the love of God shed abroad in his heart,"—the forgiveness of sins.

We must approach the Chinese, and not wait for them to seek us. The gospel plan is "go preach the gospel," not sit and wait for the world to come to hear the truth. We must seek out the Chinamen and show ourselves their friends for Christ's sake, and when they come to us we must give them a cheerful welcome. There is an unspoken universal heart language which the Chinese understand as well as we do. There must be no sham, for they will detect it. We must feel kindly, as well as act kindly, be like Christ, and love the men while we may abhor their ways. We need not wait for others to begin. Any one Christian may begin with even one Chinaman, if no more can be gotten at first.

As far as reported there are only twelve schools among the Baptists in the South for the Chinese, but we hope that this work will receive the attention of our women, and that many more schools will spring up all over the South. "The harvest is great."—Mrs. James Pollard, Baltimore, Md.

The St. Louis Trade Review and Export Journal in its issue of February 7th, 1893, has this to say:

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.

One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B. Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

Correspondence.

RALEIGH, May 10, 1893.

Editor of Biblical Recorder—Dear Sir:—In order that your readers may know that the communication signed "Observer" in last week's RECORDER, attacking me and endorsing the N. C. Teacher, was a perfectly natural occurrence, considering all the circumstances, I ask that you publish this letter, including the enclosed correspondence.

Yours respectfully,
CHARLES D. McIVER.

RALEIGH, May 10th, 1893.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, D. D., Raleigh, N. C.

Dear Sir:—In the BIBLICAL RECORDER of this date the following communication, signed "Observer", appeared:

"THE STATE NORMAL AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

The North Carolina Teacher for April reviews very carefully and thoroughly the 'Report of the Directors of the Normal and Industrial School.' It is very evident to the people of North Carolina that the President and President of the Board of Trustees have diverted the work of the school widely from the purposes of its creation, and it is now neither a normal nor industrial school, but simply a female institute which uses the State's money to compete with all other female schools in the State, and make a good easy situation for the President. The so-called report to the Legislature, when carefully examined, shows that the officers have labored to conceal and misstate facts to an amazing extent. The Teacher has fairly and honestly exposed a vast number of misdoings on the part of the President which prove him totally unfit to be at the head of such an institution as the State intends the Normal and Industrial School to be. Nine-tenths of the people of North Carolina fully agree with the Teacher in its criticism of the management, while all are united in approval of such a school for training teachers as the State intended to establish. The President has no right to so pervert the laws in regard to this school as to make it a female seminary instead of a professional school for teachers.

The 'report' shows that upwards of $9,000 have been paid, of which no account is made, and that there has been a reckless extravagance in handling the State's money in the interest of the President. The President may be getting in various ways from the school three or four thousand dollars a year, instead of $2,250, which is his nominal salary, as there is clearly a considerable profit derived from boarding pupils, who are required to pay the maximum charge of $8 00 a month. As the school is under the direction of the State Board of Education, a committee of disinterested persons should be appointed to fairly investigate the management which is bringing the school into disrepute with thoughtful people of North Carolina. The State is too honest to submit to such management of a public institution. OBSERVER."

In your editorial paragraph you partially endorse the communication in the following language:

"'Observer' on the seventh page takes the Normal and Industrial School at Greensboro to task, and, in our opinion, somewhat justly."

As the communication reflects on my integrity, you will doubtless recognize my right to demand the name of the author of said communication.

I would also like for you to state whether or not you meant by your editorial to endorse the attack on my character.

Yours respectfully.
CHARLES D. McIVER.

RALEIGH, May 10th, 1893.

PRESIDENT CHARLES D. McIVER, Raleigh, N. C. Dear Sir:—In reply to your letter of this date, I will say:

1. The communication was handed to me by a boy and was in the handwriting of Col. E. G. Harrell.

2. In my editorial paragraph, I did not mean to attack your integrity, nor to endorse any attack on your character.

Yours truly, C. T. BAILEY.

OFFICE OF NORTH CAROLINA TEACHER,
RALEIGH, N. C., May 11, 1893.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, D. D., Raleigh, N. C.

Dear Sir:—In reply to your inquiry, I will say that the article published in last weeks' RECORDER in regard to the Normal and Industrial School, signed "Observer," was sent to me by a gentleman through the mails, with this request: "Please read the enclosed, re-write it, and hand to the RECORDER for publication, if you have no objection." I had no objection, and therefore complied. I have received a number of communications on this subject.

Yours truly, EUGENE G. HARRELL.

Hon. J. C. Scarborough, Ex-officio President of the Board of Directors of the Normal and Industrial School at Greensboro, informs us that the funds of that Institution are in the hands of E. J. Forney, Treasurer of the Board and Bursar of the Institution since October 1st, 1892, who is under a bond of ten thousand dollars, and that the funds have never been in the hands of President McIver.—EDITOR.

Notes from Caldwell and Watauga Counties.

Dear Recorder:—The Caldwell Union Meeting was held with Blair's Fork church, and was a good meeting. Brethren George R. Clark and A. E. Nelson were Moderator and Clerk. These brethren are not preachers, but they love the Union Meetings and are always on hand. They make good officers.

Among the subjects discussed were "Our Duty to the Rescue Perishing" and "What Shall be done with members of the church who do not bear the burdens of the church and rarely attend its meetings?" The latter was answered as follows:

"Let the pastors be careful to instruct all the members faithfully as to their duty, and then let all our churches exclude all members who wilfully refuse to help bear the expenses of the church."

On Sunday, Blair's Fork church-house was dedicated, the writer, by request, preaching a sermon on the church and its ordinances, and Bro. H. M. Croom leading in the dedication prayer.

A collection was taken for our Orphanage and also one to replace a pulpit Bible which had recently been stolen from this church.

From this meeting I went over to Boone, my old home, and spent a few days, it being court week, and met many of my old friends, among whom were the following preachers:

Brother E. F. Jones, who is preparing to start this week to California. He will probably go by Gastonia and preach for them next Sunday, he having recently been called to the pastorate of the Gastonia Baptist church. He is going to California to spend a month with Bro. Jno. G. Pulliam in meetings, and if he is pleased, will most likely make that State his future home, and if not pleased, he may return and locate at Gastonia. The good people of Watauga regret very much to give him up, and I don't blame them, for Bro. Jones is a good and strong man. He leaves three good churches pastorless—Boone, Zionville and Three Forks.

Next, I met Bro. J. L. Sherwood, who is very corpulent and in good spirits with his hands full of work. He is pastor of one church in Tennessee, two in Watauga, and one in Caldwell.

Next, I met brethren D. C. Harmon and David Greene, the former being in a good old age and not doing much pastoral work, and the latter—young, vigorous and strong—having his hands full of work.

Last of all, I met Bro. J. F. Davis, one of the strongest and most vigorous preachers of his section. He has been living in Tennessee till recently he has moved back to North Carolina. He is still serving three churches in Johnson county, Tenn.

The annual Sunday-school Association of the Three Fork Association had just come off, and from the report I saw in a secular paper, the meeting must have been a good one.

On my return home I spent one day at the Caldwell County Sunday-school Association, which had convened with the Globe church. The annual sermon was preached by the writer, and the body was organized by electing Jos. Powell, President, and Jos. Howell, Secretary. These brethren made good officers, both young men with hearts enlisted in the work.

Bro. E. J. Edwards of the Orphanage came up and spent two days in the meeting. He preached once, got a collection for the orphans and some subscribers for Charity and Children. On his return, he spent last Sunday with us at Lenoir, aiding in the administration of the Lord's supper and preaching for us at night. In the afternoon he ran out to Lower Creek and preached. His sermons were good, as were also his talks in behalf of the orphans. We all enjoyed his visit, and hope he will come again.

Our last meeting gave us three additions by letter to the Lenoir church.

CHICKENS AND EGGS,
AND HOW TO GET 'EM.

Use Polk Miller's 'Victory' Poultry Food.

IT ADDS GREATLY TO THE FOWLS' LAYING, and I have never seen a case of Gapes in young chickens when it was used. Now, I would as soon do without salt in my food as to undertake to raise fowls without Polk Miller's Chicken Food.
WILLIS W. HONSON,
Powhatan county, Va.

We buy it by the dozen boxes, and when my wife has a sick fowl of any kind we make for these Powders, and that's the last of it." It is an infallible remedy with us.
WM. A. WILLROY,
King William county, Va.

I have used one box, and found it very beneficial to young fowls. Have not lost any with Gapes since I commenced its use.
MISS NELLIE DIGGS,

The Leaksville Woolen Mills, Leaksville, N. C., need no introduction to the public in North Carolina and adjoining States. This is simply to remind you that they are still "in touch" with the people, working up their wool into various forms of finished product at satisfactory prices. A handsome catalogue, containing samples of their new and attractive styles of Fancy Cassimeres and All-Wool Flannels, together with all other goods made by them, is sent to any address on application. Besides an interesting article on "Wool and How to Handle It," the catalogue contains full particulars in regard to shipping wool. If these details are carefully followed, we guarantee prompt return of goods.

Write to Hiram Foard, Sec'y, Leaksville, N. C., for catalogue, before disposing of your wool.

New Spring Dress Goods.

Among the new Dress Goods for the Spring will be noticed some distinct changes, both as to colors and styles, from those of the past season.

Our advance lines of Dress Fabrics for this season are already on sale, and embraces the newest shades and textures in Plain Materials, as well as the latest ideas in the handsomer French Novelties.

This year, Cotton Dress Fabrics will be shown in many dainty effects, and our present exhibit of these is the most extensive we have ever made.

We suggest to our patrons to buy early, as most of these goods are our own importations, consequently many styles once sold cannot be duplicated.

Requests for samples should indicate something as to colors, and about what price goods are desired.

Cash with the order, of $5.00 and over, goods will be delivered free (except furniture and crockery) to the nearest Express Office or Railroad station.

Be Prepared to Act Wisely.

Dear Recorder:—I venture to show my opinion in reference to the embarrassment of our State Board. No doubt the Board in the past has done nobly, using present methods. But, with the increasing demands upon the energies and contributions of our people, is there not a more excellent way? I fully agree with Dr. Pritchard, that no man among us more richly deserves every cent he receives for his services than Bro. Durham. But, isn't he attempting too much? Is it any wonder, that in trying to look after the interests of State, Home and Foreign Missions, some of these should suffer? Now, would it not be better to let the Vice-Presidents of the Home and Foreign Boards look after the interests of their respective Boards, as they do in several other States, while Bro. Durham devotes himself exclusively to work of State Missions? This would enable us to dispense with the Treasurer of the Board—Bro. Durham being both Secretary and Treasurer of State Missions, while funds for the other Boards could be sent direct to their destination. According to this arrangement I do not think the interests of the Home and Foreign Boards would suffer, and I am sure the cause of State Missions would be advanced. The amount now paid to the Treasurer of the Board of Missions, if turned over to the Secretary of the Board of Missions, would pay half his salary and thus make up for the amounts he now receives from the other Boards. So that, while State Missions would lose nothing, the other Boards would be gainers.

The discussion of this subject, just at this time, may seem to be out of place; but I have written that we may consider these things, and that other brethren may express themselves, and be prepared to act wisely before we come together in State Convention. Fraternally,

J. K. FANT.

The FIFTIETH SESSION of this school will close on the 7TH OF JUNE.

As this is the Semi-Centennial of the school, more than ordinary interest attaches to the occasion. Hon. J. L. M. CURRY of Washington, D. C., will deliver the address.

Rev. JAMES F. FAIR, D. D., of Richmond, Va., will address the Literary Societies on the evening of the same day.

On SUNDAY, JUNE 4TH, Rev. H. W. BATTLE of Petersburg, will preach in the chapel at 11 A. M., and at 7 P. M., will deliver the Annual Sermon before the Christian Association.

The Music, Art and Elocution Schools make their exhibit on the 5th and 6th.

We hope to have with us on the occasion many former pupils and many of our friends generally.

The Register for the current session will be issued in June, giving the full work of the session, including names of Graduates, Medallists, &c., and will contain the names of all Full Graduates, Graduating in Special Courses, Medallists, &, throughout the history of the school, and other valuable matter.

The attendance for the present session is 178 resident pupils and thirteen day pupils—total, 191—from twenty States.

The FIFTY-FIRST SESSION will open on the 13TH OF SEPTEMBER. With our costly and valuable improvements recently made, and increased facilities, we hope the second half century will begin with full numbers and expanding prospects.

DIED.

HENDERSON—On April 16th, in Montgomery county, Lackey Henderson, a consistent member of the Eldorado Baptist church for about twenty-five years. It is the Lord's doings. He is gone to his place. He is now receiving the reward that the Lord had in store for him. He lived and has been toiling upon the earth for seventy-five years. He leaves a widow and fourteen children to mourn their loss. G. W. H.

HALL—Allen Hall departed this life on March 23d, 1893, at the age of ninety-three. He was a faithful and consistent member of the Pleasant Plains Baptist church for quite a number of years. Previous to his death he was confined to his room about six months, and about twenty hours before he died he went to sleep and went away without a struggle. He often repeated during his last illness that he was ready and willing to go when the Master called him. He left eight living children, fifty grandchildren, and eighty-nine great-grandchildren. He was born and raised in this county, and always lived here a faithful and good citizen.

W. D. NEWSOME.

Winton, Hertford county, N. C.

EVES—Sister Geneva Eves, the wife of Bro. J. P. Eves, departed this life May 3d, aged twenty-two years, six months and twelve days. Sister Eves became a member of Salem church, Pasquotank county, N. C., some years ago, and proved her faith by her Godly walk and unchanging love for her church. She was quiet and unassuming as a Christian, but firm. For four months she suffered, and grew worse until the summons come calling her home. We all will miss her from church, from her seat. It has been Geneva from a little girl walking the isles of Salem. But, alas, that voice is hushed, steps stopped, and she is gone to come no more. She leaves a kind husband, a good father, many relatives, and a host of friends to mourn their loss. She leaves a sweet little girl sixteen months old. Dear Bro. Eves, God doeth all things well. Look up through your tears to Jesus, and remember that she will not come to you, but you and your dear babe can go to her. She is not dead, but has gone up just ahead. Thank God for such noble young women.

JOSIAH ELLIOTT.

LAUGENOUR—Lewis C. Laugenour died very suddenly on Friday morning, April 28th, at his home in Lewisville, Forsyth county. He was apparently in usual health, ate a hearty breakfast, was lively and cheerful, conversing with relatives and friends, went to the front door to see a gentleman on business, complained of feeling a little indisposed, passed back into his room where he fell by his bedside and expired in a few moments.

Mr. Laugenour was born May 12th, 1826, about three miles south of Salem in Forsyth county, the third son of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip and Phœbe Laugenour. From young boyhood he was of a kind-hearted disposition, and won the regard and esteem of his associates and all who knew him. Early in life he manifested a warm devotion to his sainted mother which afterwards characterized his life in mature years.

In the year 1849, accompanied by his three brothers, John D., Thomas and George Laugenour, he emigrated to California to seek his fortune in the far west. Here he was eminently successful, and would probably have remained the balance of his life, but true in his devotion to his mother, and at her request, he returned to North Carolina in 1857.

On April 26th, 1860, he was united in marriage to Bettie, the second daughter of the late lamented J. P. Nissen of Waughton. Soon after their marriage they located in Lewisville, where they spent thirty-three years in happy and useful wedlock. They were never blessed with offspring, but they have been father and mother to children of their near relatives. Mr. Laugenour's kindness and interest in children made many of them feel that he was their warm-hearted friend.

Mr. Laugenour was distinguished by his large heartedness and kindness to the poor, and many around Lewisville will hold him in lasting remembrance for his many acts of kindness. He was also a man of large hospitality, and delighted to entertain his friends. His gifts for benevolence were frequent and large. The Baptist church in Lewisville owes its existence largely to his liberality and generous gifts in its erection, while other church buildings in the surrounding country were liberally aided by him.

Mr. Laugenour was not connected with the church, but gave many evidences that the grace of God had changed his heart. He was a regular attendant upon the worship of God, and was one of the best supporters of the gospel and Sunday-school in the community. Had he lived awhile longer it is thought he would have been baptized and identified himself with the church. In his death the village of Lewisville loses one of its chief supports and most enterprising citizens, the church and Sunday-school one of its best friends. May the Lord in his kindness and mercy comfort the heart of the dear wife in the sad and lonely hours of her life, and unite them again in the bright home above, is the prayer and wish of a sincere friend. C.

Tributes of Respect.

The Sunday-school of the First Baptist church, Raleigh, on May 7th, 1893, adopted the following tribute of respect to the memory of the late Bro. W. H. Pace:—

After many weary months of intense suffering, our beloved brother, William H. Pace, was on the 27th day of April, 1893, released from pain and called to his heavenly rest. Immediately on coming to reside at Raleigh, about twenty-three years ago, he identified himself with religious work, and filled positions of much usefulness in the Sunday-school, church, Association and Convention, during his brief, busy life.

As superintendent of this school—1878 and 1879—he rendered that energetic, interested service which so fully characterized the man. As a church member he was called to work in many spheres, and always did his part with faithfulness and efficiency.

For many years he was a delegate to the Central Association, ever taking an active part in its deliberations and plans. Representing his Association and church in the North Carolina Baptist State Convention, he was on two occasions, 1887 at Durham, and 1888 at Greensboro, made President of that body, and often went as a delegate to the Southern Baptist Convention.

For eleven years he was chairman of the Board of Missions. His interest in State Missions and active efforts in collecting funds for that work will never be forgotten. On whom will his mantle fall? Time does not allow the record here of the many useful, honorable positions he held among his brethren and fellow-men.

To count his life by "deeds, not by years," he would have reached a very advanced age. As ordinarily calculated, he was taken just at the meridian of life. The heroism with which he passed through the last four years, struggling against the advances of insidious disease, using all the means for recovery that medical science and surgical skill could suggest, and at the same time faithfully pursuing his daily work as a Christian business man, is cause for admiration and wonder on the part of all.

A noble, brave brother has been taken, whose presence, service and counsels will be sadly missed in this school.

"Gone before us, O our brother,
To the spirit land!
Vainly look we for another
In thy place to stand."

As a slight estimate of affectionate regard, we desire to record this tribute to the memory of Bro. Pace, and to extend to his family our sympathy and assurance of sorrow over this loss of theirs, by which also we are so deeply afflicted.

May the divine blessing rest upon each and all of the bereaved.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Raleigh Affairs.

Gov. Carr has appointed Capt. A. G. Brenizer of Charlotte to represent North Carolina in the World's Congress of Bankers and Financiers at Chicago June 19th.

Last Wednesday, Memorial Day, was duly observed here, with appropriate ceremonies. The orator of the occasion was Associate Justice A. C. Avery, and the theme, "The Life and Character of Brig. Gen. D. H. Hill," was well presented. A large audience was present. The procession to the cemetery was a large one, and the ceremonies in the cemetery were impressive and befitting the occasion.

The Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows met here last week. There were about 250 Past Grands in attendance with 95 lodges represented. Goldsboro was selected as the place for holding the next session. The following officers were elected: Grand Master—W. D. Gaster of Fayetteville; Deputy Grand Master—W. C. Douglas of Carthage; Grand Warden—C. F. Lumsden, Raleigh; Grand Secretary—B. H. Woodell of Raleigh; Grand Treasurer—R. J. Jones of Wilmington; Grand Representative—J. D. Bellamy, Jr., Wilmington; Trustee of Orphans' Home at Goldsboro—A. H. A. Williams of Oxford.

The State Medical Association convened in this city last week. There was a large attendance. A number of valuable papers were read. Important matters pertaining to the profession were fully discussed. Dr. J. A. Hodges of Wilmington, delivered the annual address. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Dr. W. H. H. Cobb of Goldsboro; First Vice-President, Dr. J. Allison Hodges; Second Vice-President, Dr. R. F. Tate; Third Vice-President, Dr. Willis Allston; Fourth Vice-President, Dr. M. H. Fletcher. Dr. R. D. Jewett was chosen Secretary, and Dr. M. P. Perry Treasurer. Both of these were re-elections. E. J. Monroe of Elm City was selected as orator for next year, and J. H. Wray of Waynesville was chosen essayist. Greensboro was selected as the next place of meeting.

Dr. Boykin's Worm Killer.

"The best selling Vermifuge in the market." Recipe furnished to any regular physician when requested.

We have never asked for a certificate. We have some of the strongest ever given—all sent without solicitation. Read a few only of the many evidences of its great merit:

LA GRANGE, N. C., July 1887.

Mr. J. P. Joyner:—I gave my child one dose of Boykin's "Worm Killer," purchased of you. It brought 366 worms. I consider it the best worm medicine made. Respectfully, J. W. THOMAS.

Messrs. I. M. & B. F. Powell, prominent merchants in Columbus county, N. C., wrote us in July, 1887 that "Rev. T. C. Floyd gave his child one dose of Boykin's "Worm Killer," and the result was 367 worms."

Mr. W. J. Davis of Ridgeway, S. C., says: "I have quite a demand for your "Worm Killer." It is the best Vermifuge I get."

Dr. R. H. Edmunds, a well known physician and farmer, writes under date of Ridgeway, S. C., May 26th, 1884, "that a negro girl 10 years old, near him, took two or three doses of the 'Worm Killer,' and passed 366 worms."

Price: 25c. per Bottle. Take no other.

Song of the Sea.

BY NOERA WINSTEAD.

Open thine arms to me!
On thy cold heart let me now go to sleep,
Nor wake my eyes their woful tears to weep,
Until thou givest up thy dead
To other life, oh Sea.

I cry aloud, how long!
I cannot voice the song I want to sing,
I wail and writhe like some poor wounded thing
And from thy depths, oh Sea, instead,
Something sings my song.

I die to live again:
I come, oh Sea! My work is yet undone.
My song, my soul is—both in thee are one.
"There shall be no more Sea," He said—
Then I shall sing, amen.

Truthfulness.

Two country lads came at an early hour to a market town, and arranging their little stand sat down to wait for customers. One was furnished with fruits and vegetables of the boy's own raising, and the other supplied with clams and fish. The market hours passed along and each little merchant saw with pleasure his store steadily decreasing, and an equivalent in silver bits shining in his little money cup. The last melon lay on Harry's stand, when a gentleman came by, and, placing his hand upon it, said: "What a fine large melon! What do you ask for it, my boy?"

"The melon, is the last I have, sir; and though it looks very fair, there is an unsound spot in it," said the boy turning it over.

"So there is," said the man, "I think I will not take it. But," he added, looking into the boy's fine, open countenance, "Is it very business like to point out the defects of your fruits to customers?"

"It is better than being dishonest, sir," said the boy, modestly.

"You are right, little fellow; always remember that principle, and you will find favor with God and man also. I shall remember your little stand in future. Are those clams fresh?" he continued, turning to Ben Wilson's stand.

"Yes, sir; fresh this morning. I caught them myself," was the reply, and a purchase being made, the gentleman went away.

"Harry, what a fool you were to show the gentleman that spot on the melon! Now you can take it home for your pains, or throw it away. How much wiser is he about those clams I caught yesterday? Sold them for the same price as I did the fresh ones. He would never have looked at the melon until he had gone away."

"Ben, I would not tell a lie, or act one either, for twice what I have earned this morning. Besides, I shall be better off in the end; for I have gained a customer, and you have lost one."

And so it proved; for the next day the gentleman bought nearly all his fruits and vegetables of Harry, but never spent another penny at the stand of his neighbor. Thus the season passed. The gentleman, finding he could always get a good article of Harry, constantly patronized him, and sometimes talked with him a few minutes about his future prospects. To become a merchant was Harry's great ambition; and when the winter came on, the gentleman, wanting a trusty boy for his warehouse, decided on giving the place to Harry. Steadily and surely he advanced in the confidence of his employer, until, having passed through various posts of service, he became at length an honored partner in the firm.—India's Young Folks.

Table Manners.

A FEW RULES FOR CHILDREN, BIG AS WELL AS LITTLE.

Drink from the cup—never from the saucer.

Teaspoons are left in the saucer, not in the cup.

Little children only have the napkin arranged as a bib.

Making a noise, either in eating or drinking, is vulgar.

Always cheerfully defer to older people and to guests.

Eat slowly, and do not fill the mouth with large quantities.

Eat the food served, or quietly leave it upon the plate without remark.

Never imitate a rude or uncouth act, even if committed by an older person.

Avoid drumming with the fingers or the feet; it is the height of impoliteness.

If in doubt at any time as to what is proper, follow the example of others of more experience.

Patiently await the coming of your turn; do not follow with the eyes the food served to others.

Never unnecessarily handle the dishes, or in any other manner exhibit nervousness or impatience.

Do not feel obliged to "clean up the plate;" especially do not make a laborious display of doing so.

Do not ask for any particular part of a fowl, or similar dish, unless asked your preference; in that case always indicate something, and if there be really no choice, designate the portion with which the host can most conveniently render service.—Good Housekeeping.

Many people are kept away from Christ by no inconsistent Christian than by the blasphemer.—Central Baptist.

If you feel weak and all worn out take BROWN'S IRON BITTERS

What he Liked in Her.

He was just the nicest sort of a fellow, just the kind that you and I love, as I love my brother or somebody else's brother. He was full of ideas, and honestly liked, as only a thoroughly nice fellow can, a girl friend of his sister's. This sister was a bit curious, for the girl her brother liked was not particularly good looking nor particularly talented; so she said, "Tom, what do you see in her?"

Tom stopped a minute, and then he said very slowly: "'What do I see in her?' Well, first of all, she has a pleasing presence, and yet it is not one that is arrogantly so, or that makes me feel anything but welcome. Then she speaks good English, she never talks scandal, she has a low, sweet voice, and she is always ready to give a helping hand, metaphorically, to the people who are embarrassed, or who don't know just what to do when they are out. She is always neatly and properly dressed, but I have never seen her wear anything flashy, and I don't think she would ever look at a cotton back pink satin with a view of wearing it any more than she would at a brass brooch. She always makes me feel that it would be a hard struggle for me to get her love, but when I do get it, it will be worth having. She is never effusive, but always polite. And then what I like about her best of all, and what I see in her that is best, is that she is mother's girl. The first thought in that household is to give pleasure to mother. Her first idea is to have some pleasure in which mother can join; and I never yet have known of any frolic or any game or any joyful time in which she didn't first make all the arrangements about mother and afterwards about herself. I see unselfishness, dignity, consideration and a loving heart in her, and that's why I want her for my own.—Selected.

The Question of Pin-Money on a Farm.

"I never have five cents, even for postage-stamps, without asking for it." The speaker was a young wife who in her girlhood earned regular wages as a seamstress, and when married found her financial position changed. Eben held the purse-strings and made plenty of money, new machinery was often needed, improvements must be made; hired hands cost a good deal, and so no allowance was thought of for the wife, who had the position of "nurse, seamstress, housemaid, cook," with the added duties of motherhood.

"I always have a lump in my throat when I ask for a dollar," she said, "and I used to go to his pocket-book for spare change, for at the marriage service he said, 'With all my worldly goods I thee endow.' But when little Tom began to steal pennies because he wanted something and could not get it I began to wonder if I had done wrong and the sin was visited on him."

It was a sad contrast—this little mother's tender conscience, with a world of trickery and knavery.

Nowhere is this lack of pocket money felt so much as among farmers' wives and daughters. Many of them go from positions in the city—teachers, typewriters, saleswomen, with a regular salary—a good cook can earn her fourteen dollars a month. She may marry a young farmer, and with all her life before her decide to be his helpmate and money saver. How they work and struggle to pay off the farm, to get the necessary improvements made! But when the fight is partly over, sometimes the young wife has a feeling of envy on Saturday nights, when her husband pays the "hands" who have worked for him, and has not a dollar for her, for she knows that they have been fed while she has served; that they have slept while she lost hours of slumber with the precious babe in her arms, and that they can buy clothes that she would feel it extravagant to wear.—The Farm and Fireside.

Managing a Wife.

Manage? What is that? Does it mean to control? We manage a horse. We use our superior human intellect to control and guide his superior physical strength so as to obtain the best results. But a wife is not a horse. Where two persons are properly married, the wife is superior to her husband in as many respects as he is superior to her in others. If happiness is to be the result of the union, the first business of the husband is to manage himself so as keep himself always his wife's respectful friend, always her tender lover, always her equal partner, always her superior protector. This will necessarily stimulate the wife to be always an admiring friend, always an affectionate sweetheart, always a thrifty housewife, always a confiding ward. And this will so react upon the husband that his love for his wife will grow so as to make it easy for the husband, with all his faults, to bear with all the infirmities of his "one and only" wife.—*C. Root and Branch, the poison in your blood, however it may have come or whatever shape it may be taking, is cleared away by Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It's a remedy that rouses every organ into healthful action, purifies and enriches the blood, and through it cleanses and invigorates the whole system. Salt-rheum, Tetter, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Enlarged Glands, and the worst Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, are perfectly and permanently cured by it.

Unlike the ordinary Spring medicines or sarsaparillas, the "Discovery" works equally well at all seasons. All the year round and in all cases, it is guaranteed, as no other blood medicine is. If it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back. You pay only for the good you get.

Isn't it safer to say that no other blood-purifier can be "just as good?"

If it were, wouldn't it be sold so?

Whoever has wasted valuable moments in attempting to keep pillow shams in their places will appreciate a simple device which holds them in position and gives very little trouble in the adjusting. On the back of the shams, at each of the upper corners, sew a bit of narrow tape diagonally across the corner. When the sham is put over the pillow, pull a little corner of the pillow case up through this tape loop. Nothing further is necessary, and the shams will stay in their places unless some more than ordinary means disturb them.—N. Y. Ledger.

MISS FLORENCE E. BEHLER,

No. 57 Alma St., Alleghany, Penna. writes: Derma-Royale works like a charm. My face was covered with freckles and in less than two weeks' time they are all gone. My complexion is now clear and white as a child's. Everyone can see what Derma-Royale did for me.

Mrs. Ella M. Murray, Newton, N. C. writes: I have used one bottle and have found a great change. I had what the doctors here called Skin Leprosy—large brown spots, causing no pain or trouble, except the looks. Now they have entirely gone and I can recommend Derma-Royale highly. Please send me your terms to agents.

May Van Hoene, No. 807 Dayton Street, Newport, Ky. writes: For nearly five years I was afflicted with eczema. My face was a mass of sores and scabs and the itching was terrible. I found nothing that could help me until I tried your Derma-Royale. I have not used quite a bottle and my skin is smooth and clear. I call myself cured, and consider Derma-Royale the greatest remedy in the world.

Miss Lillie Hanna, No. 23 Brainard Block, Cleveland, Ohio, writes: Your Derma-Royale cured my blackheads in two nights.

A Discourse on the Apostolic Ministry.

BY REV. DR. FRANCIS WAYLAND.

Delivered in Rochester, N. Y., before the New York Baptist Union for Ministerial Education on July 12th, 1853.

Text, Mark 16: 15—"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

You see, then, my brethren, what is the New Testament idea of a church of Christ; it is a company of believers, each one united to Christ and pervaded by his spirit, and each one devoting every talent, whether ordinary or peculiar, to the work of evangelizing the world. When a company of disciples is collected together in a particular community, they are the leaven by which Christ intends that whole community to be leavened. By virtue of their discipleship they are called upon to accomplish this work, and it is their duty, in his strength, to attempt it. He did not light that candle to place it under a bushel. Every individual is to become at once a herald of salvation. Those endowed with aptness to teach are to be sent to destitute and forgotten places in the vicinity, to the highways and hedges to compel men to come to the gospel supper. The ministry are to devote to this work their whole time, as ensamples and leaders of the flock; surveying the whole field and suggesting to each brother his appropriate sphere of labor. Let the disciples of Christ thus obey the Master in the most depraved city among us, and, by the grace of God, its whole population would soon be subdued unto Christ. The moral atmosphere would be purified by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, "the work of righteousness would be peace, and the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance forever."

And when the disciples of Christ of every name thus obey his last command, making, as he did, the conversion of the world the great object for which they live, the last act in the great drama of men's redemption will have opened. Private believers will feel their obligation to carry the gospel to the destitute as strongly as ministers. They will then be seen by thousands, like Paul, ministering to themselves with their own hands, while they carry the gospel to regions beyond. Then will ensue the final struggle between the powers of light and the powers of darkness, for dominion over this world. Then will "the heathen be given to Christ for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession." Then will the accuser of the brethren be cast out. Then from every people and tongue and nation of a regenerated world will ascend the anthem of salvation to him that sitteth upon the throne, and to the Lamb forever.

If now we need any confirmation of the truth of these views, I think we shall find it in observing the manner in which the church of Christ was first planted under the eye of the Master. It was simply this: One individual, when called of Christ, brought other individuals to him. "John stood, and two of his disciples, and looking upon Jesus as he walked, he saith, Behold the Lamb of God. And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus. One of the two was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother. He findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, we have found the Messiah. And he brought him unto Jesus. The day following Jesus findeth Philip, and saith unto him, Follow me. Philip findeth Nathaniel, and saith unto him, We have found him of whom Moses in the law and the prophets did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph. Nathaniel saith unto him, Can any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, Come and see." Thus, by contact of soul with soul, did the church of Christ increase. And I may add, if any one will read the gospel with this view, he will be surprised to observe how much of the recorded teaching of Christ consists of conversation addressed to individuals in the ordinary intercourse of life.

Again, observe that no sooner had our Lord collected a little band of disciples than he employed a large portion of them as missionaries to announce the approach of his kingdom. From his small company of followers, he chose first twelve, and then seventy, whom he sent abroad on this errand. If every church among us furnished heralds of the gospel in like proportion, there would be no lack of ministers.

Observe, again, the circumstances under which, after the ascension of our Lord, the church of Christ commenced its victorious march over the then known world. Against it were arrayed not only the interests and lusts and pride of man, but the power of every government, and all the influences emanating from a luxurious, refined and intelligent civilization. On what did Christ rely, as his human instruments, to prostrate this vast fabric of tasteful, venerable and cultivated idolatry? He made no attempt to undermine and overthrow paganism in general. He published no discourses intended to prepare the public mind for the coming revolution. He sent abroad no schoolmasters, to instil the principles of secular truth into the minds of the young. On the contrary, he met the whole power of the adversary face to face, and brought divine truth into immediate collision with long cherished and much loved moral error. He charged every disciple to proclaim the gospel at once to every creature. He selected those who were to be the first preachers of the Word, the first ministers of his church, from the lower and middle walks of life—men destitute of all the advantages of special intellectual culture whom their enemies reproached as unlettered and ignorant. As cultivated talent was required, it was provided in the person of the Apostle to the Gentiles. As the church commenced, so, to the close of the inspired record, it continued. "Ye see your calling, brethren," said the Apostle, "how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called, but God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty, and base things of the world, and things that are despised, hath God chosen, yea, things that are not; to bring to nought things that are, that no flesh should glory in his presence." Under the conviction of these truths, Paul labored in the ministry. Though a well educated man, who had profited above many that were his equals, yet when he proclaimed the gospel in refined and luxurious Corinth, although the preaching of the Cross was to the Jews a stumbling-block, and to the Greeks foolishness, he resolved to know nothing among men but Jesus Christ and him crucified. He did from choice precisely as his uneducated brethren did from necessity. It is surprising to observe the entire simplicity of those efforts, by which, in an incredibly short period, the gospel was planted throughout the whole Roman Empire. We can discover no means to accomplish this result, but proclaiming to all men repentance towards God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, imposing on every regenerated man the duty, in turn, of proclaiming the good news to his brethren, always relying, and relying wholly, on the power of the Holy Ghost.

But, it may be said, these times were unlike any that the world has since witnessed. But let us ask, does change in social condition render it necessary to adopt any new principles in conducting our efforts for the conversion of mankind? Survey our missionary field, and observe the places where the preaching of the gospel has been attended with the most remarkable success. We number among the Karens, for instance, more converts than in all our other missions together. And how was the gospel preached to them? They live in scattered hamlets along the water courses, in the jungle, whose miasmata are fatal to a foreigner, except for a few months in the year. During this brief interval the missionary traveled among them, preaching Christ to one, or two, or ten, or twenty, as he could collect hearers. The Holy Spirit was poured out, and sinners were converted. Small churches were formed, and, from the necessity of the case, left for the remainder of the year to themselves. With the spirit of Christianity, these rude men pointed their neighbors to the Saviour. Ministerial gifts manifested themselves among them as they were needed, and a large number became ministers of the Word. The work of God was thus carried forward with remarkable power. The brother whose labors among them have been so eminently blessed, worn down by incessant toil, was obliged to leave his station for a year or two for the recovery of his health. On his return, fearful that his flock had been scattered during his absence, he inquired with trembling solicitude concerning their condition. You may judge of his surprise, when he learned that about fifteen hundred persons were then awaiting baptism. This blessed result had been accomplished by men hardly elevated at all above their brethren, for they had no knowledge whatever beyond that contained in the New Testament, and the few books and tracts which, within a few years, had been translated into their language. The contact of soul with soul was thus leavening the lump. Pastors as they were needed had been raised up among them; and these are now, in a large measure, supported by the voluntary effort of the brethren. Thus is the religion of Christ displaying through this whole region its power of self extension by the preaching of the gospel attended by the power of the Holy Ghost.

If the question be asked, could this work have been carried on without the aid of men of more cultivated minds and larger knowledge than the Karens? I answer, certainly not. But I ask again, could this work have been carried on without the labors of these rude and unlettered men, who went everywhere preaching the Word? The answer is the same, certainly not. Our conclusion, then, is that God requires, and that he employs in his vineyard, all classes of laborers; and the union of all is necessary to the accomplishment of his work. In general, I think it will be found that, other things being equal, the preacher of the gospel will be most successful, whose habits of thought are not greatly elevated above those of his hearers. President Edwards was, I think, without dispute, the ablest theologian of his time. His ministry for many years was eminently successful in Northampton and its vicinity; but I have never heard that it was attended with any remarkable results during his missionary life among the Stockbridge Indians.

But it may perhaps be said that, in this case, the people to whom the gospel was preached were ignorant pagans; and that we cannot, from such an example, learn the best manner of extending the church of Christ among men of intellectual culture. Let us then turn to Germany and inquire for the circumstances under which the gospel has wrought so powerfully there. Among no people on earth has education been more widely diffused, and nowhere has teaching been conducted with more admirable skill. It is the land of Luther and of the reformation, the preceptress of Europe in science and philology. What, then, have been the facts here?

In the year 1835, a Baptist church of believers was constituted in Hamburgh, consisting of seven members, imbued in a remarkable degree with the spirit of Apostolic Christianity. Of this church, Rev. Mr. Oncken was ordained pastor. That church of seven members has already multiplied itself into 42 churches, sustaining 356 stations, numbering 4,215 communicants (exclusive of those who have been removed by death and emigration) baptized, on profession of their faith, into the name of the Lord Jesus. Each church is supplied with a pastor. Churches and stations are established in Northern Germany, eastward from Hamburgh to the borders of Russia; quite extensively through Southern Germany, and to some extent in Sweden and Denmark. On no other churches in Christendom does the smile of heaven so signally rest. They are, emphatically, a field which the Lord has blessed.

And how have these results been accomplished? By following the example left us by Christ and his apostles, "the little one has become a thousand, and a small nation a strong people." Every disciple acknowledged the obligation laid upon him by the last command of our Lord. The Holy Ghost bestowed upon the churches ministerial gifts adapted to the work before them. These gifts were cherished, and called into exercise. Preaching was commenced wherever the Lord opened a door. Stations were established, and the men were found to occupy them. These stations grew into churches, by which other stations were sustained. Thus churches were multiplied in every direction; the Holy Spirit was everywhere poured out, and much people was added to the Lord. Some of these churches now contain two or three hundred members. Almost all of them sustain stations, some of them as many as twenty or thirty; and, though it may seem incredible to some of us, all this glorious work has been accomplished, in classical Germany, without the aid of a single classically educated laborer. Would it not be possible for us to learn a lesson from our brethren in Germany?

But it will perhaps be said, this is an example from a foreign country; would the same means for extending the reign of Christ avail us equally here at home? Cast your eyes backward, then, and look upon our own condition some fifty or sixty years since. The men are now living, who remember the Baptist denomination when it was the least of the thousands of Israel. We are now among the most numerous, perhaps the most numerous communion in the United States. By what means has our increase been so astonishing? How has it come to pass that believers in such multitudes have, through our instrumentality, been added to the Lord. I think the answer at once suggests itself, if we call to mind the character of the Baptists of the preceding generation. Though plain men, generally of ordinary education, they were men of prayer, full of the Holy Ghost, each one holding himself in a special manner responsible for making known to those that were around him the truth as it is in Jesus. They were men of conference and prayer meetings, and revivals of religion; who, in barns, in school-rooms, and in private houses, wherever they could collect an audience, preached repentance towards God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. Every talent which a church discovered among its members, was called into the service of Christ. There was scarcely a church amongst us which had not its lay preachers, or, as they were termed, licentiates. Of these, many from time to time entered the regular ministry, and thus pastors were supplied in proportion to our need. Our settled ministers labored not only in their own churches, but made frequent missionary tours in the more destitute regions in their vicinity, thus doing the work of evangelists. While we were thus, with singular earnestness, devoting all the means in our power to the service of Christ, the Lord added to us daily of such as should be saved. And nowhere could I appeal to the result of these labors with greater pleasure than in the very spot on which I stand. The numerous and flourishing churches that fill the whole of Western New York, this University, with all its strength in the present, and its boundless hopes for the future, all owe their existence to the self denials, the preaching, the prayers of these plain, pious, venerable and never to be forgotten men. "They have labored, and you have entered into their labors." Of late years our progress has been much less rapid. Our views in many of these respects have changed. May not this change in our views be connected with the change in our prosperity?

These instances seem to me to throw some light upon the teachings of the New Testament on this subject. I fear that we are in danger in this matter of forsaking the instructions of Christ and his apostles, and following the traditions of men, not observing the tendencies to which they lead. The Reformers brought with them many of the errors of the church of Rome. May we not have derived, through them, some erroneous notions respecting the church and the Christian ministry? Can any one fail to perceive that the views of our Hamburgh brethren on this subject are more in accordance with the New Testament than those of Luther, or Calvin, or Melancthon, or John Knox?

The doctrines here presented seem to me to have an important bearing on the subject of Christian and ministerial education.

The principles which should govern us in this matter seem to be something like the following:

I have said that every disciple of Christ is under imperative obligations to become a herald of salvation to his fellowmen, and to beseech them, in Christ's stead, to be reconciled to God. This can only be done by the action of mind upon mind. It is a case in which the mind of one man seeks to exert an influence over the mind of another. To accomplish this result, it is obvious that disciplined is more powerful than undisciplined mind. We are taught by Christ that we are under obligations to use, but to improve, every talent committed to us, that we may have the more to consecrate to his service. The slothful servant was condemned because he returned his talent just in the condition in which he had received it. This is the universal condition on which we are allowed to hold every gift entrusted to us. But, if this be the universal rule, how emphatic is its application to intellectual gifts, the most valuable of all the talents with which we are entrusted. Hence, every disciple of Christ is under the most imperative obligations to enlarge his knowledge, to cultivate his faculties, to discipline his mental energies; that he may have the more to devote to the service of the Master. A wilfully ignorant Christian is a contradiction. He is a barren fig tree. He is the indolent servant who returned his talent, which he had kept wrapt up in a napkin. When the Master shall ask what he has gained by trading, what will he reply? Brethren, the law of the Lord is exceeding broad, and it would be well for us if we more frequently contemplated the universality of its application.

When I say this, I beg not to be misunderstood. I do not mean to teach that Christ requires you all to qualify yourselves for what are sometimes called the learned professions, or to pursue any particular course of mental culture. I mean that every man, whatever be his calling, should avail himself of every means of mental cultivation which Providence has placed within his reach; and that he should strive, with all earnestness, to place such means within the reach of his children. Let our youth universally be provided with every opportunity for generous intellectual discipline. I can see no reason why a farmer, or a mechanic, or a manufacturer, should not read as good books, and be as well informed and intelligent a man as a lawyer, or a minister, or a physician. I have thought that our institutions of higher education should be organized upon this principle; providing education not for one class, but for all classes, thus enabling all classes to avail themselves of their advantages. To labor for these results seems to me to be our duty as parents, and as citizens, but above all as disciples of Christ. If we are bound to consecrate our all to him, we are just as much bound to render that all as valuable as possible, that so we may have the richer gift to lay upon his altar. Looking upon the subject from a Christian point of view, this seems to me to be the principle underlying every other, which should govern all our efforts to educate ourselves, and to provide the means of education for our children. Were this principle universally recognized, is it possible to estimate its effects upon the progress and stability of individual piety, and the enlargement of the kingdom of Christ?

[TO BE CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.]

To a Sceptic.

Perhaps, my young friend, you have been infected with the prevailing scepticism of the times. What is scepticism? It is simply not believing. It is denial, negation, darkness. There is only one cure for darkness, and that is coming to the light. If you will produce a better rule of life than my Bible (perhaps your mother's Bible, also), if you will find a holier pattern of living than Jesus Christ, and a surer Saviour than he is, I will agree to forswear my religion for yours. But what is your "I do not believe" in comparison with my positive "I know whom I have believed"? What is your denial in comparison with my personal experience of Christ? Scepticism never won a victory, never slew a sin, never healed a heart-ache, never produced a ray of sunshine, never saved an immortal soul. It is fore doomed defeat. Don't risk your eternity on that spider's web.—Watchman.

God Seeing.

"Thou God seest me." Genesis 16: 13. This revelation of God's presence and nature operates in opposite directions in its effects upon the character of men. To one man this is but the breaking of the news that a spy is watching his every act through the chink in the prison wall; to another it is the revelation of God's presence as a merciful father and friend in the time of need. One bows at the thought of the divine presence; the other feels melancholy without a sense of that presence. One is repelled because he sees nothing but justice, punitive and vindictive justice, the relentless judge of the earth; the other is drawn by the chords of divine love, because he sees a merciful and loving father and friend.—Rev. A. M. Overton, in Texas Baptist-Herald.

A Little Twisted.

A gentleman in New York recently said to another, "Is Mr. L——— a Christian?" He replied, "Well, yes: Godward he is all right, but manward he is just a little twisted." How many really good people lay themselves open to this description! They do not carry out their Christian principles so as to be void of offense. Their life is not lived up to their faith. In small things they dishonor God. In some of their common-life dealings they do not carry out their principles amongst their fellow-men. We are afraid the "little twist" is more or less to be seen in us all. Alas! twists of temper, twists of inconsistency, society twists, business twists, home twists! May God set us upright and give us in our daily life a straight backbone, so that we may walk upright amongst our fellow-men on our way to heaven!—Exchange.

The men who have been broken down in any way have usually said of the destroyer beforehand: "It will not hurt me." They have said this of overwork, of exposure, of disease, of moral evil, of pollution, of strong drink, of opium, of evil companionship, of deviation from strict integrity. They fallen victims too, and their [illegible] blamable on the words [illegible] who walks truthfully and [illegible] Christ, fearing sin in any [illegible] measure. Any one [illegible] counsels the power of [illegible] thinks that in his own strength [illegible] from harm and death.—Exchange.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 24, 1893.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

"What Baptists Believe," by the late J. L. Burrows, will be given to every new subscriber to the BIBLICAL RECORDER who will pay $3.00 in advance for a years' subscription. We will also give the book to every old subscriber who will pay his subscription to date and a year in advance.

Think of it! Your denominational paper, the subscription price of which is $3.00, one year, and a neatly bound book of over a hundred pages, containing a clear and fair expression of what Baptists believe and practice, all for the price of the paper.

Remember, this offer is to new and old subscribers alike.

THE FEAST IN LUKE 14: 16–24.

It is quite common, we believe, for our preachers to speak of the above-mentioned feast as the gospel feast, or the feast of salvation. It is very obvious that the parable that describes this feast was aimed at the Jews; and Dr. Broadus, in his commentary on Matthew, seems to think that the words that the Saviour uses in Matt. 25: 1–10 are a reproduction of the same ideas contained in Luke 14: 16–24, with some additional details that make it quite plain that as the Jews as a nation first rejected the gospel, it was given to the gentiles. One blessed fact remains, however, and that is, in the economy of grace the gospel is still offered to Jew and to gentile. It is very evident, we think, that the parable in Luke and the one mentioned in Matthew, if they may be regarded as separate, were intended for the Jews, and plainly outline God's subsequent dealings with that people for their hardness of heart, and for their persecution of his appointed servants, and their rejection of his Son.

While these things are so, it may not be amiss to regard the feast mentioned as the gospel feast; and if so, some quite important inferences naturally follow. For instance, it is plain that as the feast was prepared by a "certain man," who here evidently represents God himself, that salvation is by grace, and not by works. That supper was prepared at the cost of him who sent out the invitations, and in his own way. It did not cost those who came one cent. They had nothing to do with the preparation. They were asked to come and share the bounty of him who invited them. There is a great tendency in certain quarters now for men to divide with God the honor of being saved. But God is the author of salvation. He alone prepares the feast to which he invites those whose souls are starving for the Bread of Life.

And again, it is remarkable how ready men are to offer excuses for not accepting the gospel. Many may think that the excuses here offered were very flimsy. As a matter of fact, however, they are about as good as any that can be offered. The man of wealth, the man immersed in business, the man who loved social and domestic enjoyment more than the interests of his soul, represent three very large classes of men now. The wealthy man who has his treasures on earth is apt to have his heart so much fixed on them that he gives very little attention to the gospel messenger. A good many church members are so encumbered with worldly business that they imagine they cannot give the Lord part of a day, once or twice a month, and this helps men of the world, who are engrossed in worldly pursuits, to have an easier conscience in refusing to come to the gospel feast. The men who love self-indulgence, social pleasures, the ball room, and the card table, too well to leave them to go to the feast of good things which the Lord has provided for them are numbered by the thousand; and we fear that their numbers are larger than they would otherwise be from the fact that they are joined at these places where the gratification of the flesh is the order of the day by some who claim to have gone to the gospel feast. The man among the guests mentioned by Matthew, we fear, represents a numerous class who sit boldly among God's people until the Lord of the feast comes.

Another thing is forcibly impressed on [illegible] in reading this parable, and that [illegible] solemn and a scary thing to reject [illegible] hearty invitation from the [illegible] servant that God sends forth to [illegible] to his feast, or to excuse [illegible] not be well for our [illegible] this thought healthy [illegible] hearts and consciences [illegible] give more power [illegible] and earnestness to their message! If a man is in danger, and he who warns him is careless and indifferent in his manner of warning, it is not to be wondered at that the one warned is himself careless about heeding the message delivered. And this leads us to say that the doctrine of the twenty-third verse plainly implies that something more than dry persuasion is not only commanded by the Lord, but is necessary to arouse the sinner. Ah, brethren, an earnest ministry is the need of the age!

PROSPERITY UNDER THE OLD DISPENSATION.

One has only to read the Old Testament to notice that God, as a rule, blessed those who were distinguished for righteous living, with worldly riches and prosperity. This rule holds good, except in the case of some of the prophets whom God called to be preachers of righteousness. It was so with Noah, with Job, Abraham, Lot, David, and Solomon. It was so generally; so that David wrote of the righteous man, "And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither, and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper." It is quite a noticeable fact, however, that now, under the New Dispensation, many good men are in humble circumstances; and some of them are quite poor in this world's goods. Some of these, noticing that God seemed in old times to grant worldly prosperity to his servants as a visible proof of his approval of righteous living, and that he now often withholds it, even from the best men, may be sorely perplexed thereby, and disposed to think that these ancient servants of God had a piety superior to many modern Christians, or that God makes exceptions, in their cases at least, to the general rule.

We are far on the way to solve this seeming difficulty, however, when we remember that the ancients, to a much greater extent than the moderns, had to walk by sight rather than by faith. They did not have the full of the Sun of Righteousness to walk in as we have, and hence they needed to see many landmarks by the way, and God deemed it necessary to place before them many visible evidences of his approval of righteous living, and among these he usually blessed his servants with worldly prosperity. His people now are supposed to have faith and spirituality enough to walk more by faith and less by sight. The pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night were deemed necessary by God to lead his people through the wilderness, and to act as continual reminders of his presence. He is just as truly with his people now, but does not deem it necessary to give to them such a visible reminder of his presence and leadership. He would have been more honored and better pleased to have the Israelites journey through the wilderness without such visible proof of his presence; but he knew that people full well, and it is a sad fact, that even with the striking visible reminders they had of Jehovah's presence they at times lost heart, rebelled against his authority, and longed for the flesh-pots of Egypt. It is to be noticed, too, that while God granted these visible evidences of his presence among his people, and his approval of righteous living by tokens that appealed to mens' senses, he did not have the highest opinion of the kind of faith or people that so persistently demanded it; for the Saviour himself said, "A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign," &c.

We do well, then, to cultivate a faith that can face serenely trials and difficulties before which our less fortunate brethren who lived before the coming of Christ had better reason to quail, and in passing through which they had better reason to be sorely perplexed, as Job was when his prosperity was taken away and poverty came. To serve God now in prosperity, after all, does not demand a faith or consecration superior to that of the ancient servants of God; but to serve him in adversity, to be bright and hopeful around the fireside of a home, across the threshhold of which poverty has passed, and to cling trustingly to him whose hand is smiting us, demands a faith that astonishes the world and causes demons to tremble.

Ah, it will never be known, until the summing up of the Great Day, how much the world, under God, is indebted to those who have let the lower lights burn, and who have said by their acts, while others around them were groaning with anguish, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be his holy name."

THE late session of the Southern Baptist Convention closed its labors on Tuesday evening, May 16th, at Nashville, Tenn., and on Thursday afternoon, 18th inst., the minutes of the meeting were on our table. This was quick work, and speaks well for the excellent and efficient secretaries, Rev. Dr. Lansing Burrows and Rev. O. F. Gregory.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....How pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

....We learn with regret that Rev. L. R. Pruett of Mt. Airy is quite sick.

....The brethren at Cameron are making headway on their new house of worship.

....The next session of the Southern Baptist Convention is to be held in Dallas, Tex.

....Prof. W. L. Poteat was in the city last Friday, and paid us a pleasant visit as usual.

....Rev. R. VanDeventer of Henderson has received a call from the church at Suffolk, Va.

....Rev. J. H. Lamberth is aiding Pastor Vann in a meeting with the Scotland Neck church.

....The number of students in attendance at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary this session is 263.

....Rev. Dr. N. Collin Hughes, of the Episcopal church, died at Chocowinity, Beaufort county, on the 19th inst.

....Rev. J. H. Hildreth, writes: "I have resigned my work in and around Bayboro, N. C.; resignation to take effect July first.

....The Sunday-school of the Raleigh Baptist Tabernacle will have their annual picnic this year at Occoneechee, on May 25th.

....Rev. B. P. Robertson of Gaffney, S. C., has recently held an excellent meeting in his church, which resulted in fifty-three additions.

....A protracted meeting is in progress at the Baptist church in High Point. Pastor Fant is being aided by Rev. C. A. G. Thomas of Greensboro.

....Bro. W. C. Douglass, after attending the Southern Baptist Convention, came by Troy, Montgomery county, and spent a few days with his mother.

....John P. Kelley, aged about fourteen years, son of Brother and Sister William Kelley, was drowned in the river near Oregon inlet on the 28th ult.

....Dr. J. William Jones has resigned his position as assistant Secretary of the Home Mission Board and will become the chaplain of the University of Va.

....Rev. T. Bright of our town closed an eight days meeting at Cherryville on Sunday night which resulted in eleven conversions.—Forest City Ledger. May 18.

....Mrs. J. E. Clough, wife of Dr. J. E. Clough, of the Telugu Mission, was accidentally killed in Evanston, Ill., on the 15th inst. by the falling on her of a folding bed.

....The Chowan Association met yesterday with the church at Plymouth. We hope the attendance will be large, and that the brethren may have a pleasant and profitable session.

....Rev. R. R. Day, a student of Wake Forest College, passed through the city last Saturday on his way to his appointment in Clayton, where he has recently become the pastor of the Baptist church.

....We are in receipt of a very neat program of the closing exercises of Littleton High School. The literary address will be delivered by Dr. J. B. Powers of Wake Forest, Wednesday, May 24th.

....On Sunday morning last two persons joined the Fayetteville Street Baptist church by experience. Bro. O. L. Stringfield conducted the meetings last week. The services will be continued this week.

....Shaw University held its Commencement last Wednesday and Thursday and conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity on the Rev. R. S. Walden of Garysbury and the Rev. A. W. Curtis of Raleigh.

....The ladies of the Baptist church expect soon to make some extensive repairs on the interior of the building. The walls will be papered, new carpeting put down, and the pews repainted.—Mt. Airy News.

....Dr. J. B. Hartwell has been appointed by the Foreign Mission Board to take charge of the North China Mission. This is the same field to which Dr. Hartwell was assigned when he first went out as a missionary.

....Please announce that the Sunday-school Board has elected Dr. T. P. Bell to succeed himself as Corresponding Secretary, and M. B. Pilcher as Treasurer. We begin our new year with great expectations.—J. M. Frost.

....Drs. Carter and Durham returned from the Southern Baptist Convention last Wednesday. They give a favorable account of the meeting. Dr. Carter preached on Sunday night in the First Baptist church of Nashville.

....Bro. S. N. Liles of Pine Bluff, Moore county, was in Raleigh last Thursday, and called to see us. Bro. Liles is representing Southern Progress, a monthly journal published at Pine Bluff, devoted to the industrial advancement of the South.

....Phillips Brooks preached his first sermon in a log hut to a handful of negroes. "It was a failure," he said afterwards. That is a common feeling with real preachers. It is the men who can't preach that are never troubled that way.—Ex.

....In a letter just received from Rev. D. S. Williams of Arkadelphia, Ark., who is eighty-six years old, he says: "The RECORDER finds me every week in my Arkansas home, always glad to see it, and enjoy it much. I see in the last issue the death of Dr. F. H. Ivey, born in my native town, Fayetteville, N. C. I knew him in his early life. He was one of the star young men of our city, quiet, popular with all who knew him, although rather reserved and reticent." Brother Williams sends love to all the brethren. For the want of space we are not able to print all of his letter this week.

....Rev. J. W. Wildman has resigned the pastorate of the Baptist church in Wadesboro. Bro. Wildman is conducting a meeting in Shelby this week, after which he will remove with his family to South Boston, Va., he having accepted the pastoral care of the church at that place.

....Rev. M. A. Adams of Monroe, N. C., writes May 18th: "I baptized two to-night. That makes twenty—and there are several others to follow. My work is prosperous and pleasant. It keeps me busy all the time. I enjoy your editorials very much. They are, as a rule, sound to the very heart. God bless you in your noble work."

....The Episcopal Convention held its annual meeting last week in Raleigh. They decided on the election of an assistant bishop, and appointed June 26th for the time of election. Among the names mention for assistant bishop are Dr. M. M. Marshall, Rev. J. B. Cheshire of Charlotte, and Rev. Mr. Murdock of Salisbury.

....Our first supply of premium books, "What Baptists Believe" was quickly exhausted, and we have ordered another supply. If you are not now a subscriber to the RECORDER, send us $3.00 for one years subscription and get the book free. If you are taking the paper now, and your subscription is in arrears, pay up to date and a year in advance and a copy of the book will be sent you without additional charge.

....There was a pleasant reunion of the Wyatt family in this city last week. The occasion was the celebration of the golden wedding of Brother and Sister E. F. Wyatt. We congratulate our brother and sister not only for the happiness and success which have attended their union, but for having reached a period which comparatively few ever live to celebrate. There were forty-one members of the family present. This was the first couple ever married by Dr. W. T. Brooks of Wake Forest, N. C.

....The commencement at Wake Forest will take place May 29th, 30th, 31st, and June 1st. The program insures one of the best commencements ever held at the College. Tuesday, 8:15 p. m., Alumni Address by W. E. Daniel. Wednesday, 11 a. m., Literary Address by Dr. J. C. Hiden of Richmond, Va. Wednesday, 8:15 p. m., sermon before graduating class by Rev. A. C. Dixon of Brooklyn, N. Y. The Alumni Banquet, furnished by the Wake Forest Local Alumni Association, will take place Wednesday night at the conclusion of the sermon.

....It is said that in South Africa there are birds which have this queer way of obtaining food: Whenever a swarm of locusts fills the air near them the birds fly among them and nip off the wings of as many as they wish for, and then descend to the ground to feast on their fallen bodies. The pity is that some men have very like characteristics. They like to bring down and destroy others. Once in awhile we hear of a clerical gossip who pursues very similar tactics, and having found some scandal or blunder in a brother seeks to make a feast of his reputation and gathers all he can for the delectation.—Inquirer.

....We clip the following from the Baptist Courier's excellent report of the Southern Baptist Convention, telling of the mission mass-meeting in the Tabernacle Sunday afternoon: "The room was filled. Gov. Northen presided. Dr. Broadus led in prayer. The vast congregation arose and sang, "Jesus lover of my soul." The meeting was specially in the interest of the Centennial of Missions. The first speaker was Dr. C. Durham, Secretary of State Mission work in North Carolina. Dr. Durham does not often appear before the Convention. He spoke well, on the field and work of Home Missions. Durham is an untiring worker and one of the best mission secretaries in the South."

....Your announcement of the death of Rev. Dr. F. H. Ivey of Augusta, Ga., brings a shadow of sadness over my soul. My class-mate in College, from January, 1855, to June, 1860. Our class-roll on the day of graduation embraced the names of Ivey, Kelly, Larkins, Poindexter, Savage and Jones. All, but one, now gone! And those faithful teachers at whose feet we sat—Brooks, Walters, Wingate, Simmons and Royall—they too, are gone! In a wreath of deathless memories their names will hold a century's union with the progressive spirit of Wake Forest College. It is true "The workers may die, but the work goes on." With tender sympathy for his sad-hearted wife and daughter, and a sense of personal bereavement, in the death of Fitz Henry Ivey, I sorrow as one that may now answer—"left alone."—G. S. Jones, Hendersonville, N. C.

....We are in receipt of a catalogue of the University of North Carolina from which the following statement has been compiled: "There are fifteen departments of instruction, including eighty-eight minor courses. The number of students has grown to 316, being a gain of sixty-eight over last year; of these fifty-three are law students and seventeen medical and pharmacy students; twenty-seven have already graduated at college and are pursuing advanced or professional studies. They came from Vanderbilt University, Davidson College, Wake Forest College, Guilford College, Washburn College, the University of New Brunswick, and the University of North Carolina. There are four general courses of study leading to degrees; professional courses in law, medicine, and engineering; brief courses for men of limited means; special courses in Chemistry and other sciences, and a large number of optional courses. The Faculty includes twelve teachers; there are six scientific laboratories and museums, eleven buildings, reading rooms, Y. M. C. A. room, athletic grounds, gymnasium, etc. The Deems Fund for loans amounts to 16,000 dollars. Catalogues, pamphlets, etc., are sent free to anyone who will address President Winston at Chapel Hill, N. C."

....Dr. R. H. Lewis of Kinston writes under date of May 20th: "Bro. T. J. Taylor of Warrenton has been with us a week preaching most excellent sermons every night. The house is crowded at every service. There have been about fifteen professions. The membership of the various denominations here has received much spiritual strength from the meetings—especially the Methodists and Presbyterians, as well as the Baptists."

....Rev. E. F. Jones preached in the Baptist church last Sunday morning and night to excellent congregations. At a deacons' meeting in the afternoon he accepted the call to the pastorate of the church with the proviso that he be not required to enter upon active work before September. This proviso was agreed to by the board of deacons. On Monday Mr. Jones left for California where he will remain until the fall.—Gastonia Gazette, May 18.

SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION

After the election of officers (as given in our last issue), President Haralson made some brief remarks, and declared the Convention open for business.

Bishop Fitzgerald of the M. E. Church, South, was introduced. He made a few interesting remarks. Rather an amusing thing occurred in the course of his remarks. He was speaking of the unity of purpose, and said, "Yes, thank God, we have one Lord, one faith and one Christ"—the audience was seen in spasmodic laughter. The Bishop, seeing that he had changed a favorite quotation of Baptists, said, "And if I've changed anything in that glorious declaration of the Apostle, I'll go back and say, one baptism." He said, further, as he listened to the roll of Associations, he was carried back to every creek and river in which he had fished from boyhood up. At the close of his remarks, H. M. Wharton started up "Blest be the tie that binds," and the whole house was melted to tears.

Dr. J. M. Frost of the First Baptist church delivered the address of welcome, and Dr. Henry McDonald of the Second church, Atlanta, responded. They were of the usual make up—delivered, however, in a very happy and interesting style.

Joshua Levering of Baltimore introduced a very interesting resolution from many standpoints—a committee of investigation of mission methods. More of it, later.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Dr. H. A. Tupper, Cor. Sec. of the Foreign Mission Board, made his report. Also the reports of the Home Mission and Sunday-school Boards were read. These several reports were referred to appropriate committees.

EVENING SESSION.

At night, by 8 o'clock, the great hall was full to its utmost capacity, and Dr. Wm. E. Hatcher of Richmond, Va., preached the Conventional sermon. His text was from Rom. 5: 4—"Experience worketh hope." No synopsis can be attempted. It was indeed a great sermon, fraught with much that will be bearing fruit when the Master comes. It was scholarly, eloquently delivered, and yet simple and plain. The body of the sermon, it might be said, was a plea for the "old time religion." During its delivery, many wet eyes were seen and many amens went up. "It was just such a sermon as suited this Methodist city," said a good brother near the reporter.

SATURDAY, SECOND DAY—MORNING SESSION.

After preliminary exercises, the Convention proceeded to business.

Dr. Montgomery of Brooklyn, N. Y., the man who baptized Diaz, was called out. He said he was charmed with our Southern way of doing things. Diaz was spied in the house, and many eyes were turned upon him.

Dr. Henry McDonald offered a resolution looking to the establishment of a better plan for the development of our young people.

Dr. T. T. Eaton read the report of the Centennial Committee. Among other things, this committee recommended that the time for the raising of the $250,000 be extended until November, 1893, which was adopted. Hence, for a few months longer, we will be held in check by the Centennial movement. We will not have another soon, so let us enjoy this one. Dr. Eaton's speech was grand. He endeavored to face the individual church with the individual responsibility in missions. He said a church should know no distinction in contributing to the pastor and its missionary—one fund for one cause. Several strong speeches were made and much enthusiasm was manifested along the line of missions.

Pulpit announcements were made for Sunday. All the evangelical churches of the city were given over to the Baptists. Many of the North Carolina delegation occupied good pulpits.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Drs. John A. Broadus and W. H. Whitsitt made earnest appeals for the Seminary and $1,500 was raised in a little while.

The report of the committee on Pagan Fields was read and discussed by Rev. C. A. Fulton of Baltimore, Dr. H. H. Harris and others. The report contained two important recommendations: first, that medical missionaries be sent; second, that native help be secured.

Rev. C. C. Newton, missionary from Africa, was called upon and spoke to the Convention on the work in Africa.

by Dr. F. M. Ellis and discussed. This report showed that our women last year had raised more than one-fourth of all the money the Convention had raised for missions. Dr. Ellis's tribute to the women was eloquent. Dr. Eaton said: "Not only had the women given to missions, but it was also a fact that they raised about half of all our church funds."

Dr. J. J. Hall of Raleigh submitted the report on Conclusion of the Board's Report, and spoke to it in his concise way, after which the whole was adopted.

MISSIONARY MASS-MEETING.

The meeting at night was not a regular session of the Convention. It was a missionary mass-meeting. The audience was very large, and many were turned away for want of seats. Gov. W. J. Northen of Georgia presided, and eloquent and stirring appeals were made by Drs. Bell and B. H. Carroll.

Dr. Bell spoke largely of the needs of Japan and a certain portion of Africa. His address was the best we ever heard him deliver.

Dr. B. H. Carroll of Waco, Texas, made the speech of the Convention on "Paganism vs. Protestantism." It was the most severe arraignment and exposure of Catholicism to which the writer ever listened or ever expects to listen. He spoke one hour and a half, and the closest attention was paid throughout. It was too grand to even think of hinting an abstract. One thing, however, will bear reporting, even at the risk of failing to convey an approximate idea of its grandeur: "Catholicism is composed of Judaism and paganism with a little Christianity sandwitched between. To accept it is to substitute black superstition for education. The war is upon us—it is to fight—death or victory. There is no chance at a compromise." (Amen, amen.)

After Dr. Carroll's address, Dr. H. M. Wharton of Baltimore sang a solo, and Oh! how the audience was lifted as he sang.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON MASS-MEETING.

Another big mass-meeting was held in the interest of missions at the Tabernacle Sunday afternoon. Addresses were made by Dr. C. Durham of North Carolina, Dr. Ellis and Dr. Bell. It was a grand time. A lady said, "Don't you folks talk about anything but missions?" "Well, it does look like nothing else is before us," we replied. The writer was not present, but heard that North Carolina did not suffer in the hands of her representative. If Bro. Caddell had been on hand, from what we heard upon the street, he would have learned something of "that poor little boy in that wagon."

MASS-MEETING FOR THE NEGROES.

As per arrangement, Sunday night the colored Baptists of the city met in mass-meeting in the Tabernacle and were addressed by Dr. J. William Jones and others upon the subject of missions, especially Home Missions, and their work in Africa. Great enthusiasm prevailed, and much good will doubtless result along missionary lines from this meeting.

MONDAY—MORNING SESSION.

At 9 a. m. Monday, Gov. Northen called the Convention to order.

The first thing was the consideration of the report of the committee on "Mission Methods." The committee reported in favor of doing away with the Assistant Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board and of the Home Mission Board.

Joshua Levering of Baltimore spoke in favor of the recommendation, as also did others. But the strong opposition of such men as Drs. Hawthorn, Hatcher, Carroll and others caused its defeat.

Much discussion and great confusion was caused while considering another recommendation of this committee, which gives to the Boards the power to elect their own Secretary. It was seen to involve a change in the constitution, and two-thirds of the entire delegation not being present, an amendment was finally agreed upon, which in spirit is the same as allowing the Boards to elect. While the resolution was under consideration, it whispered, as addressed by some of the leaders, "Hatcher must if it isn't done."

The committee on Time and Place recommended Dallas, Texas, and that Rev. Dr. Kerfoot of Louisville preach the sermon, and Dr. Ford of St. Louis be the alternate. Adopted.

The committee on Reduced Basis of Representation asked that the matter be continued until the next Convention. Their report was ordered printed in the minutes, and the request of the committee complied with.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

At 3 p. m., the Convention again took up the subject of Home Missions.

Dr. J. Wm. Jones, Assistant Secretary, introduced a colored brother from Kansas, who had been employed by the Board. He made one of the best speeches of the Convention. The speech was free from any display, simply dealing in facts as to what his opinion was with reference to the Negro and the Baptists. At the conclusion of his speech, Dr. Hawthorne spoke of the Board's work during the year among the colored Baptists.

The recommendation of the Home Mission Board is that greater efforts than ever be put forth for the colored race. Much interest was manifested in this department of the Board's work. The Convention adjourned to meet at 8 p. m. in a MASS-MEETING FOR HOME MISSIONS.

This meeting was addressed by Dr. A. J. Diaz in his happy and interesting style. Also by Rev. Dr. Montgomery of Brooklyn, N. Y., who baptized Diaz. His was one of the best speeches delivered. He said he was "carried away with Southern Baptists." The North proposed to join the South in the Cuban work.

TUESDAY'S SESSION.

Tuesday a. m. was set for the consideration of the Sunday school report. Drs. Bell and Frost made strong speeches, urging the denomination to stand by this department which is promising so much. A publishing house is the crying need of the Baptists. This is what all said.

CONVENTION SIDE-SHOWS.

As is always the case when we attend a Convention, there are many things which interest one not in the session. Nashville furnished an unusual amount of these. It is a Methodist city in every sense. They have some of the finest churches in the South here. They have some of the best institutions of learning, among them the Vanderbilt University, which we visited.

Here in Nashville is located the Methodist Publishing House. By the kindness of friends we were taken through it. We unhesitatingly say it is the best thing of the kind we have seen. It is not only convenient to have, but also turns into the denomination a good pile of money every year. It is in this establishment that our Sunday-school helps are printed. Why don't we Baptists have one of our own?

BOSCOBEL COLLEGE.

One of the most interesting places we saw was Boscobel College for girls. This magnificent institution, presided over by Prof. J. G. Pate, is only two years old, and yet has one hundred boarding pupils: more would come if they could find room. Prof. Pate kindly showed us over the institution into its different departments, &c. Its history is somewhat peculiar. Two years ago Rev. C. S. Gardner of the Egfield Baptist church began the movement, and much to his surprise, in so short a time there is to-day one of the best female colleges in the State, and promises to equal any in the whole South. The course of study is very high and thorough. They are arranging to enlarge this summer. It is a noble monument to Bro. Gardner and ought to encourage him as few things can. With such a man at its head, we confidently expect great things from Boscobel. Our own C. G. Jones, now of Chattanooga, Tenn., is to preach the Commencement sermon next Sunday. He is a big preacher in Tennessee.

Memorial pages were ordered in the minutes for J. L. Burrows, R. M. Dudley and Matthew Hilsman.

The Convention expressed its sense to be that any church which wished to do so should have a Young People's Meeting, but not to have any Society connected with any general body. The publications of our own Sunday-school Board were recommended.

A resolution of sympathy with Dr. J. R. Graves in his confinement to his home by bodily affliction was adopted.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RETIRED MISSIONARIES.

We copy from the printed minutes the following from the report of this committee, submitted by Bro. Fred. W. Boatwright for said committee:

The Convention has heard with profound sorrow that the connection of Brethren Herring and League and of our honored Sister Crawford with the Convention has been severed. It is cause for regret that these brethren and this sister, as well as Dr. Crawford and Brother Bostic, reported last year, can no longer work in harmony with the Board.

In the new enterprise on which these zealous workers have entered we will rejoice with them in any success which may attend their efforts to evangelize the nations, and will try to believe that though they follow not with us they are working as sincerely, if not as wisely, and that in every way Christ is preached.

The prime purpose of this Convention, as embodied in the preamble to its organic law, is to elicit, combine and direct the energies of the whole denomination. The brethren above named agree in efforts to elicit, but depart from us on plans for combining and directing, and thus are no longer fellow-helpers.

Your committeee recommend that the Convention fully approve the action of the Board, and congratulate them on the prospect of greatly strengthening the North China Mission by recalling the honored and beloved Jesse B. Hartwell to the work to which he gave himself years ago.

May the mellowed wisdom of his later life confirm the promise of his early manhood!

A COMPARATIVE MISSIONARY EXPENSE STATEMENT.

[The following paper, read in argument, is printed at the request of the Convention, and with the consent of Rev. D. W. Herring. It must be understood as a very partial exposition of his views, concerning only the relation of his proposed work to the Board, and stated as they were developed in a free conference with him, the avowed design of which was to find, if possible, some common ground on which Brother Herring and the Board could stand.—H. H. Harris.]

Brother Herring proposes that local churches or groups of churches shall select, appoint and support their own missionaries.

That these churches or groups of churches shall be invited and urged to send their funds quarterly to the Board, who shall thereupon transmit them to the said missionaries, less a reasonable commission for costs as shall be determined by the Board.

That the Board shall under no circumstancies transmit to any missionary more or less (except the commission above allowed) than is received for him.

That the Board shall report these sums in connection with its annual report, and shall similarly report the work of the said missionaries as they shall report the same annually to the Board.

That the Board shall have no voice in the selection or approval of missionaries, no responsibility for their support except to transmit designated funds, and shall have nothing to do with their location or methods of work.

RESOLUTIONS OF J. A. HOYT.

Resolved, That the Foreign Mission Board is hereby instructed not to accede to the proposition of Brother Herring in regard to the appointment of missionaries, but that the policy heretofore pursued shall obtain hereafter.

The following statement, prepared by an expert accountant of a large business corporation, as to the ratio of our home expenses to receipts, in comparison with that of other missionary organizations, is worthy of permanent record by the Convention, as fiduciaries of sacred funds. It is based upon our Treasurer's report for 1892:

The statement of the Treasurer of the Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention for 1892, shows that the receipts for that year were $114,325.80, and that the expenses of administration were as follows:

For salaries of secretaries, treasurer, and clerk	$4,950 00
For postage, printing, travelling expenses, rent, &c.	5,566 33
For commissions paid State organizations for making collections	6,857 18
Making a total of	$17,373 51

The following are the ratios which these separate items of expense bear to gross receipts:

Salaries	4.8 per cent.
Postage, printing, &c.	4.9 per cent.
Commissions to State organizations	6.0 per cent.
Ratio of total expenses to gross receipts	15.2 per cent

Now the only fair way to determine whether this ratio is too large, is to institute a comparison between the expenses incurred by like bodies charged with the conduct of similar work. Such a comparison will be found in the table below, compiled from reports of the several bodies named for 1892, in which all legacies are excluded from receipts, for the reason that they add little or nothing to the cost of administration, and all items other than those of administration are omitted:

	Ratio of salaries to income.	Ratio of other expenses to income.	Ratio of total expenses to income.
Foreign Mission Board of S. B. C.,	4.8	4.9	9.2
Baptist Missionary Union	8.0	3.6	11.6
Congregational Board	6.2	4.1	10.3
Northern Presbyterian Board	5.1	3.1	7.0
Southern Presbyterian Board	5.3	3.1	8.4
Average	5.8	3.5	9.3

These figures show that the salaries paid by our Board are the lowest in the list, and the other expenses are slightly the highest, while its ratio of total expense to income is a shade below the general average.

It would seem that more convincing proof could hardly be needed to assure all candid inquirers after truth that the affairs of our Board are as economically administered as those of other similar organizations, especially when it is borne in mind that the income of each of the bodies embraced in this comparison, except the Southern Presbyterian Board, is many times greater than that of our Board, which fact would justify the expectation that the ratio of expense to income would be smaller in their case than in ours, upon the general principle that the larger the volume of business the smaller the ratio of expense of administration to income.

Our Treasurer's figures for 1893 are as follows: Income from all sources, $154,686.28; home expenses, $11,678.26. This gives a ratio of expense to income more favorable than that of last year. Had the asked $425,000 been realized, the expense would have been no more, and the per cent. much less. Enlarged revenue is the best method of diminishing the percentage of expenses, when those expenses are the least sufficient for effective service. The Board is ever desirous to reduce expenditures to the minimum consistent with fidelity to their trust. The churches, however, do not seem so deeply impressed; for they insist upon the Board paying heavy interest as the price of their delayed offerings, the interests this year being $1,638.44, paid on $73,965.31 borrowed money. On the last day the Board received $28,428.45; on the last four days, $34,223.41. Is such delay wise economy on the part of the stewards of the Lord's money, given to extend the realm of "the King of Saints?"

A resolution was adopted reaffirming opposition to the liquor traffic or license for the liquor traffic in any form, and expressing adherence to prohibition as the proper method of dealing with this evil.

After adopting the usual resolution of thanks for hospitality, for the use of the various houses of worship in Nashville, to the press and railroads, and singing and prayer, the Convention adjourned to meet in Dallas, Texas, on Friday, May 11, 1894.

Let the Brethren Judge—Finally.

I honor Bro. J. H. Mills for all the good he has done. Very few men among us have been so useful or have done so much, and for him personally I have nothing but the kindest feelings, and for his work have done and will continue to do whatever is in my power. I have not knowingly written an unkind word, and will not now or in the future write or say an unkind word about all these things. With me there is nothing personal to myself, or towards Bro. Mills, in all that I have written. Men in the employment of the denomination, like Bro. Mills and myself, both in most difficult positions to fill and continued hard and perplexing work to do, should not, in my opinion, be the makers of discord among the brethren; but, if possible, the healers of divisions and the hearty supporters of each and every department of our denominational work. By the help of the Lord, this more and more shall, in all things, be the position and work of the writer in the time to come.

I thought the editorial in Charity and Children of April 14th would do harm to our mission work, and that it was my duty to get the facts, all the facts, the whole truth. I knew the author, whoever he was, was mistaken, misinformed, or imposed upon; and if my inquiries had been met in the spirit sent, good might have resulted. But Bro. Mills calls our courteous inquiries "a personal attack on him," "war paint on both cheeks," and designed to "nose up something against him."

If the President of our Baptist State Convention will appoint W. T. Faircloth, T. H. Pritchard and C. E. Taylor, or any other three brethren; and, if after looking over the entire correspondence, they shall say there was "a personal attack," "war paint," or "nosing up" anything against Bro. Mills, or if there is, in their opinion, anything of a bad spirit, or discourtesy, in said correspondence, or in my reply in BIBLICAL RECORDER and Charity and Children, I will gladly do anything this committee shall say I ought to do.

In Charity and Children of April 21st, in making an excuse for going beyond the scope of the paper, as he acknowledged, in the publication of the editorial of April 14th, Bro. Mills said:

"Many of our friends were in distress, and said other papers were closed against them."

This statement in its connection seemed to mean that the missionaries were neglected by our Board when it was in its power to help them, and that they were prevented from stating the facts to the denomination through the papers. To know the facts from the missionaries themselves, I prepared a brief letter, given below, and, because of great pressure in my work, had Edwards & Broughton to print it, paid for it, at the time, out of my own funds, and in envelopes unsealed, with one cent stamp, sent them to the missionaries of our Board:

"RALEIGH, N. C., April 25th, 1893.

My Dear Brother:—In Charity and Children of April 21st, Bro. J. H. Mills, in making an excuse for his editorial of April 14th, reflecting on our Board, and speaking of its missionaries, says: 'Many of our friends were in distress, and said other papers were closed against them.'

Please answer on this slip at once the following questions, and greatly oblige,

Yours, etc., C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec.

1. Have you, while a missionary of our Board, ever said to J. H. Mills, or to any other person, that, in making public your views about State Missions or the policy of the Board in this work, 'Other papers were closed against you'?

2. If so, to what paper or papers did you refer?

3. If any paper has been closed against you while a missionary of our Board, when was it? ——— ———, Missionary.

Date ———

P. S.—It is very important that we have at once an answer to the above from every missionary of our Board."

I then sent the following:

"RALEIGH, N. C., May 4th, 1893.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—In Charity and Children, April 21st, in giving reasons for his editorial of April 14th, Bro. J. H. Mills says: 'Many of our friends were in distress, and said other papers were closed against them.' The connection seems necessarily to imply that the BIBLICAL RECORDER and the North Carolina Baptist have closed their columns against some of our missionaries when they wished to publish their views of State Missions or the policy of the Board in this department of its work.

Have the columns of the BIBLICAL RECORDER, so far as you know or believe, ever been closed against any missionary of our Board? I do not, of course, think they have been thus closed, but should be very thankful to have you answer the above.

Truly yours, C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec."

I received the following as Bro. Bailey's reply:

"RALEIGH, N. C., May 4th, 1893.

"The BIBLICAL RECORDER has never been closed against any missionary of our Board, but, on the contrary, every line and word, so far as I know, written to me for the RECORDER by them, have been published; and no words of complaint of the Board or its policy have come to me.

C. T. BAILEY, Ed. Bib. Recorder."

The same letter, with change of names, &c., was sent to the Editors of the North Carolina Baptist, and Bro. John A. Oats, Jr., on May 5th, wrote:

"I understand the object before you in making the inquiry about our columns being closed to missionaries. It is not my opinion that Bro. Mills had the Baptist in view when he wrote the article, for it is well known that our journal is open for free discussion (within the bounds of reason) of any question that would advance the cause of Christ among us. So far as I know, the columns of the Baptist have always been, and always will be open for a discussion of any part of our denominational work."

On May 10th, Rev. W. B. Oliver wrote:

"I am positive that during the time I had direct control of the North Carolina Baptist, no brother—missionary, or not—was ever denied free use of its columns, except in two instances where brethren desired to discuss the political situation, and once when another reflected strangely and unkindly upon the RECORDER."

On April 26th, Bro. Mills, referring to giving the names asked for, wrote to Bro. J. C. Scarborough, saying:

"I am waiting to see if Dr. D. will do me the justice to have my three remarks inserted in the RECORDER."

I had the "three remarks" inserted in the RECORDER the next week, and understood that was to secure the names.

On April 19th, Bro. Mills wrote me:

"You call on me to deal fairly with you in giving names."

What I asked, therefore, in the opinion of Bro. Mills, is only calling on him "to deal fairly" with us "in giving names."

Then, too, when some writer in the North Carolina Baptist, last February, found fault with some things at the Orphanage and signed "Uncle Toby," Bro. Mills replied in Charity and Children of Feb. 17th, 1893, as follows:

"We are sorry for Uncle Toby. He thinks it is polite to stand in the dark and shoot a man who is compelled to stand in the light. He has never heard of the rule of genteel newspapers, that one who attacks another by name shall sign his own name."

Then in the issue of the same paper of March 3d, under the heading, "Farewell, Uncle Toby," Bro. Mills said:

"In a newspaper, you made a groundless attack on the Manager of the Orphanage, and screened yourself behind a fictitious name. He replied, and called on you for charges over your own name. This would have been fair and honorable.

* * * Stop all mean insinuations, unless you have the courage to stand by them."

I give these extracts to show that the position of Bro. Mills, when he thinks the Orphanage work is misrepresented by some one over a fictitious name, and my position, when I think our mission work is misrepresented by some one over a fictitious name, are the same. Now, I do not know who these persons referred to by Bro. Mills are, but he knows, and the denomination has a right to know them.

Capt. S. A. Ashe keeps standing at the head of his leading editorial column the following:

"Correspondents of the Chronicle will please bear in mind that no communication will be published except over the author's real name."

If this correspondence shall help Charity and Children, the North Carolina Baptist, and the BIBLICAL RECORDER to adopt the same wise and honorable course, much friction in all departments of our denominational work will be avoided and much good accomplished. This has been a principal object in keeping these matters before the public; and if the papers mentioned shall adopt the course of Capt. Ashe mentioned above, I shall be content even without the names asked for so many times.

C. DURHAM.

The Approaching Commencement.

Dear Recorder:—The commencement exercises of Wake Forest, to begin on the 29th inst. and end on June 1st, will be, it is hoped, the most interesting and enjoyable in all the history of the College.

The mere mention of the names Daniel, Dixon and Hiden is sufficient to inform the public that a rare treat is in store for all who are fortunate enough to hear the addresses and sermon.

The banquet on Wednesday night promises to be a great success. Every mail brings to the committee the names of the sons of the College in all sections of this State, and even in other States, who are coming to this banquet given by the Wake Forest Local Alumni Association. Like loving sons, they are coming back to their Alma Mater, rejoicing in her progress and eager to form plans for the advancement of her interests. The banquet will be under the control of Mr. A. Dugh of Raleigh, and everything will be in first class order. All Wake Forest men, whether graduates or not, are cordially invited. Let everybody come.

Questions of great importance to the welfare of the College will come before the Alumni at their business meeting on Tuesday night. Every loyal son of the College is urged to attend. J. B. CARLYLE.

Let Brethren Remember.

The Southern Baptist Convention, instructed the Boards to push the Centennial collection to completion. Much has been pledged which is still to be paid. Several States have, by vote of their Conventions, protracted the time of raising their quota, and in other ways partial work has been done. The Boards will, as instructed by the Convention, put some man in the place of Bro. Powell. It will take a little time for the Boards to act. The proper man must be secured. Who is he? is the question to be decided. Meantime, let our brethren everywhere push forward the work as planned and ordered by the Convention.

The New England Conservatory of Music.

The New England Conservatory of Boston, Mass., stands deservedly at the head of American Schools of Musical Training. During the life-time of its founder, Dr. Tourjee, it had already won the confidence and support of the American people, and since his death the acceptance of the directorship by the scholarly musician, Mr. Carl Faelten, has given the institution an impetus and standing second to none in this country.

A careful investigation will quickly convince any one that nothing is left undone for the highest intellectual improvement of its pupils, and that the moral influences thrown around them are far reaching and in every way beneficial. The Conservatory is ever ready to please the lazy or frivolous, but to those who desire the highest attainments and are willing to devote the necessary amount of study and investigation of minds of exceptional ability, this Conservatory offers inducements and privileges unattainable in America.

A Brief Synopsis of Some Thoughts Concerning the Future, as Entertained by Geo. C. N. and Many Other Christians.

BY SCATTERHEAD.

Our duty as Christians is to be constantly occupied with Christ and his work, and to be waiting and hoping for his return, having his blessed and precious promise that he will come quickly, knowing that the Lord is true to his promises, and that the reason why he has prolonged the dispensation of grace, is that he is "longsuffering to usward, not willing that any should perish but that all should come to repentance." 2 Pet. 3: 9.

1. The first resurrection or resurrection of life. In a former article we stated that the Lord's descent in the air would not likely be public, but will be for the purpose to bring up to himself the dead and living saints with glorified bodies to be perfectly like him and to be with him forever, which is the first resurrection. 1 Thes. 4: 16, 17, Jno. 14: 3, 5, 29; 1 Cor. 15: 52; Tit. 3: 13; Heb. 11: 5; 1 John 3: 2, 3; and Rev. 20: 5.

One thousand years intervene between the resurrection of life and the resurrection of damnation, which is the second resurrection.

2. Some things which happen between the two resurrections. Soon after the saints are caught up with their Lord they appear before the judgment seat of Christ. 2 Cor. 5: 10.—We all know the question of their salvation will not be brought up, for judgment in regard to the believer's eternal deliverance from sin and hell is forever passed, and will be just as reasonable and possible for Christ, the Great Head, to come into judgment as for Christians, who are the members of his body. Christ bore all that was due to us on the cross; was made sin for us; stood in our place and died as our substitute; therefore believers, who are a part of him, cannot come into judgment or condemnation. John 5: 24. At the judgment seat of Christ Christians' works will be judged, and "every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labor." The Lord will reward the Christians according to their service. 1 Cor. 3: 8–15. Christ appears as the "Morning Star," as the bridegroom for his bride, the church, and an interval of one week occurs, Dan. 9: 25–27, perhaps about seven years before he reveals himself from heaven to take vengeance upon his enemies, as the "sun of righteousness," and which time the first resurrection is finished up with the saints killed by Antichrist.

3. During this period of one week a beast is seen to come up out of the sea—Rev. 13, —and the same is described in Daniel. This beast represents the Roman empire; comes forth in a new and fearful state, Rev. 17; we find the mystic woman called Babylon riding upon the beast, and from the description given in verse six as being "drunken with the blood of the saints and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus," we may rightly conclude that this woman is none other than the Roman Catholic church. As previously stated, the beast is the Roman empire, and we know that papal Rome "arose out of the ruins of Rome, pagan and secular." During this time of tribulation Rome secular will be revived, when the beast has thrown the woman from off its back, and will stand up in its wicked form. In Rev. 17: 16 we find the destruction of the great whore or apostate church by the ten kingdoms, and which give their power to the beast.

4. About the time the people get well drilled under Satan, for he will certainly manifest great power on the earth during this short time, another beast comes up out of the earth, Rev. 13: 11, and which we think represents the "man of sin" or Antichrist, termed the false prophet. His coming up out of the earth shows that his beginning is rather obscure, and that he is an insignificant and vile wretch. The earth at this time will become awfully corrupt, as the salt of the earth will have been removed. But during the great wickedness prevailing over the earth God will raise up an elect company to be his witnesses during this trying time. Antichrist will likely be a Jew, and set himself up as the Messiah, and many of the Jews will receive him as such. John 5: 43. The old rascal will be the very imp of Satan, and will come in a mighty flattering manner, Dan. 11: 32, and Satan will give him great power do that he will perform powerful "lying wonders with all deceivableness of unrighteousness" so that he will cause fire to come down from heaven in the sight of men and deceive them that dwell on the earth, and the old fool will get so puffed up with fiendish gas and hellish pride that he will "exalt himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped, so that he as God will sit in the temple of God showing himself to be God." 2 Thes. 2: 3–8; Rev. 13: 13, 14. The beast worshippers will receive his mark upon their persons, and many of God's witnesses will be slain because they will not worship the beast and receive his mark upon them. God will pour out the vials of his wrath upon the earth on account of the enormous wickedness of the people. Rev. 13: 12; 16: 10, 11. About the time the old fellow is making big preparations to slay the balance of God's servants, Rev. 19: 19, the Lord will come in the clouds of heaven in power and great glory, and "every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him, and all kindred of the earth shall wail because of him." Rev. 1: 7.

The persecuted saints will exclaim when the Lord Jesus is revealed from heaven, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." Isaiah 25. We [illegible] the Lord Jesus comes to the [illegible] the living nations that it will [illegible]ment, and that some shall wail [illegible] when the Lord Jesus [illegible] from heaven with his [illegible] flaming fire taking vengeance [illegible] know not God and obey [illegible] Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power: when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe." "Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints to execute judgment upon all." 2 Thes. 1: 7, 8; Jude 14. He comes to the earth where all the quick or living will see him. "And his feet shall stand in that day upon mount of olives which is before Jerusalem." Zec. 14. "The morning cometh and also the night." Isa. 21: 11, 12. "Behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea and all that do wickedly shall be stubble, and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of Host, and it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings." Mal. 4: 1–3. This shall be "a morning without clouds" to the groaning world when the blessed Son of God reveals himself, but an eternal night begins with Antichrist and his worshippers. This burning up is a temporal judgment. Like Sodom and Gomorrah their bodies are destroyed to be raised at the judgment of the "great white throne," and their souls sink to hell. No food in this for materialists. Sodom and Gomorrah's judgment was a type of this, and we know they were not annihilated, for they are still suffering "the vengeance of eternal fire," Jude 7, and their judgment still in the future. Matt. 11: 23, 24. No annihilation of the wicked, but eternal anguish will prey upon their souls, "to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness forever." Jude 13. For a complete picture of the Lord's return to the earth in glory, read Rev. 19: 11–21.

5. At this time the judgment of the living nations takes place. Matthew 25. A great many think that this alludes to a general judgment. But we now understand it to be the judgment of the quick, the living nations. 2 Tim. 4. And there is nothing said about the resurrection at this judgment. The scene does not apply to the Jews, for they are not numbered among the nations. Numbers 23: 9. Neither does it apply to the church, for it is taken out from among the nations. Col. 3: 11; Acts 15: 14. These nations are Gentiles, and the sheep are Gentile nations who have befriended the Jews, Christ's brethren, who have not had "special gospel privileges, and their blessing and cursing seems to depend on the manner in which they have treated the Lord's little ones during the great tribulation." We find it is not a judgment of individuals, but nations, previous to the opening of the millennial kingdom.

6. The millennium. "They lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years." Rev. 20: 4. "But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished." Rev. 20: 5. "And the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom." Dan. 8: 22. "There shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a branch shall grow out of his roots, and with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked." "The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together, and a little child shall lead them, and the cow and the bear shall feed, their young ones shall lie down together, and the lion shall eat straw like the ox." Isa. 11. Animals were not created to eat flesh. Gen. 1: 30. "Behold a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment." Read Isa. 25: 32. And many of the psalms as well as the prophets refer to this glorious reign. Christ and the heavenly saints will reign over or above the earth during the millennium, as some able writer says was prefigured in the transfiguration scene. Elijah represents the changed saints, and Moses the risen, enter into the same cloud of glory with Christ, while the disciples represent the Jewish saints on earth. 2 Pet. 1: 16–19. A righteous prince will reign on earth during the millennium, and he will be a descendant of David. Ezek. 24: 25. Sin will be in the world during this happy period, but it will keep a mighty low head, and the enemies of the Lord will act powerful nice and render a kind of obedience to the Lord. Psalms 66: 3. At the close of the millennium the devil is loosed for a "little season," and gathers up a wonderful big army, and this plainly teaches us that all will not be the Lord's servants. Man will not prove a failure in heaven. Fire will come down out of heaven and destroy this vast army of rebels.

7. End of the world. "And the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in which the heavens will pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burnt up." 2 Pet. 3: 10.

8. Judgment of the great white throne and second resurrection, or resurrection of damnation. All the wicked or unsaved appear at the judgment of the great white throne. All the wicked dead will be included in the second resurrection, the resurrection of the unjust. "I saw a great white throne and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away," and "I saw the dead, small and great, stand before the throne." Read Rev. 20: 11–15.

Brethren, search and see whether or not the foregoing thoughts agree with God's word. In consideration of the solemn future, "what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness. Therefore, beloved, seeing ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace without spot and blameless." "Therefore, let us not sleep as do others, but let us watch and be sober." "Behold, I come quickly."

Type-Casting Machine.

A key-board similar to that of a typewriter fronts the machine. There is a key for each letter of the alphabet. The operator sits in front of the key-board. Let us suppose that he wishes to set the word "new." He touches the key n. The touch on the key releases from a magazine in the rear of the machine a mold, technically called a matrix, which is of brass, slides down into a receiver near the key-board. Next the operator touches the key e. A matrix for the letter e is released, and slides down alongside the letter n. A matrix for w comes down and ranges itself alongside e. Now, in the receiver we have, what?—the word new in type? No, nothing of the kind. We have three little brass molds standing side by side, from which, if we poured molten metal into them, we would set the word new in a solid cast. But there is no type. The machine knows nothing of type whatever, though, for convenience sake, we are calling it a type casting machine. But the time has not come to put molten metal into the three little molds or "matrices." An entire line should be set, not merely a word. Suppose the line is to be, "new things come to pass." The operator proceeds to touch key after key for the successive letters until the matrices for the whole line are ranged side by side.—Popular Science Monthly.

Ventilation of Bedrooms.

The proper arrangement of draughts for the ventilation of sleeping-rooms has perplexed all. One thing, however, is certain. It has proved by actual experiment that a layer of air lies against the walls which is subject to very little movement, even when there is a strong circulation in the middle of the room. It is, therefore, important that a bed should not be placed close to the wall. If kept there during the daytime, it should be moved at least several inches out into the room at night. Alcoves and curtains should be avoided. In an alcove inclosed on three sides a lake of air forms, which may be compared to the stagnant pools often observed along the margins of rivers. A few yards away a rushing tide may be moving swiftly along, but these placid pools are unruffled by the current.—Boston Watchman.

About the House.

To clean nickel on stoves, wet soda with ammonia, apply with an old toothbrush, and rub off with a woolen cloth.

New tins should be set over the fire with boiling water in them for several hours before food is put into them.

Do not weary of the repetition of the caution to drop a tiny bit of soda into milk that is to be boiled. It arrests the acidification which is hastened by heat.

Kid gloves which are to be laid away for weeks or months before they are worn, should be wrapped up closely in oiled silk or paper, to prevent spotting and stiffening.

A Paris journal of hygiene warns housekeepers against the use of a feather duster, which simply chases the particles from the furniture into the air, where they are inhaled. A dampened cloth or chamois skin is better.—Exchange.

"The Missionary Call" and Other Things.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I was delighted with the general trend of your editorial in January 18th RECORDER on "The Missionary Call." I hope you will receive a general response from missionaries. I am specially delighted to see that you and Bro. J. R. Pace express strong dissent from Bro. J. E. White's article on the Call to the Ministry. Both my faith and experience on that subject are totally different from his. I believe that God does distinctly and specially call men to preach, and for my part, I should shudder to advise any one to enter the ministry who did not believe he had such a call. I do not believe my North Carolina brethren are yet ready to accept Bro. White's view of the subject, and may the day be far distant when they will incline to such a view!

I believe also in a distinct separate call to do foreign mission work. It will not be exactly the same with every one any more than each one is called into the ministry in exactly the same way. But I believe the Holy Spirit should impress and lead one to this work. I believed in such a call before I came to the field. I believe more strongly in it now. With the advice often given, and sometimes taken, that young men, who are in doubts about religion, the Bible, &c., should go to a foreign field and enter work to drown such doubts, I have no patience. To pursue such a course I believe to be hurtful to the young men and to the cause at home and on the field. Men in foreign fields need the constant realization that they are doing God-appointed work in order to be able to stand up under the many and varying discouragements such as are not met at home.

I believe the call to do foreign mission work generally succeeds, though it may synchronize with or even preceed the call to preach. I believe it is possible for God to call a man to this work and then call him away from it during his life-time by some providential dealings. I believe such calls include laymen as well as Godly women. In my own case, I felt impressions to do this work, years before I decided, just as I felt impressed to preach sometime before deciding. The almost overwhelming impression came to me at Greensboro during the State Convention in 1888.

Both my former and my present wife believed they had a special call to this work—and to this field of China, and they did not feel they would ever have been fully happy in the work at home. To both of them the impressions came quite early in life. Indeed they scarcely remembered the time when they did not have such impressions. The first Mrs. Bostick told it to her mother at twelve years of age and to her father at about twenty.

I know three other lady missionaries in our North China mission, who believe that they are specially called to China.

I tremble for those who come to China for the romance of it or just as they would decide between entering the law or the medicine at home. To most such, I think life would be a disappointed failure. I do think that all persons should refrain from urging people to enter mission fields on any such slim grounds. For this reason I am strongly opposed to the "volunteer movement" with its accompanying "pledge"—not that I think too few of those who take the pledge will enter the field, but that I fear too many will enter it. Better far, I think, get our workers according to Christ's excellent plan as given in Matt. 9: 37, 38. God knows the fields better than any of us, and he can choose the workers always suited to the field. Oh! that God's people would spend much of their time, now spent in pleading for men and money, in crying mightily unto the Lord of the harvest for these!

And this leads me to express my sorrow at, and strong protest against, the "honor roll book" which our North Carolina sisters have published. I do feel that we are treading on dangerous ground, when we appeal to any other motive for giving to the Lord's cause than that of love to him "who loved us and gave himself for us"—especially do I think such appeals hurtful for the children, who are to be the men and women thirty years hence. I express this protest with a profound regard for the Baptist women of North Carolina, but with a profounder love to Christ my Master.

We are all pretty well in this part of the moral vineyard. The good Lord blessed us on the 9th instant with a lovely little girl whom we call Bertha May Bostick. None can know how I appreciate this "little blessing," who has not been compelled, like me, to be separated for nearly three years far from his only darling child. My father-heart leaps for joy and thanks the God of all mercies.

Bro. Pruitt and family arrived at Hwanghien—twenty miles west of us—on the 16th instant.

We are hoping and praying for more laborers.

We are now in the midst of a beautiful spring and we will soon be scattering in every direction, telling the story of our crucified Lord to these benighted people.

There are some very hopeful and encouraging signs of growth and development in this field for the future.

"Our Miss Knight" was bright, well, happy and busy in Pingtu the last time we heard—a few days ago.

I thank you very much for the continued visits of the RECORDER. I have enjoyed many things in it recently more than usual.

God bless you and your work. Greetings to all my brethren and sisters in the Lord in the Old North State. Will they pray for the work we are trying to do for these people in the name of the Master?

Fraternally, G. P. BOSTICK.

Chefoo, China, March 29, 1893.

P. S.—To-morrow is the forty-first anniversary of the arrival of Dr. and Sister Crawford in Shanghai. They are well, happy and busy, about the Lord's work. G. P. B.

An avoidable absence from the house of God is a sure sign of spiritual decay.—Sel.

Union Meetings.

WARREN UNION.

This body met with Gardner's church on Friday before the fifth Sunday in April, 1893, at 11 a. m. The introductory sermon was preached by Rev. G. W. Harman of Weldon.

At 1:30 p. m. the Union Meeting was called to order, N. L. Shaw of Warrenton in the chair. Roll of churches was called and most of the churches were represented. Reports from the churches showed them in good condition both spiritually and financially. Rev. N. B. Cobb, D. D., of Raleigh, pastor of the church, delivered the address of welcome. Rev. T. J. Taylor of Warrenton, by request of the moderator, responded. All business pertaining to organization, &c., being transacted, the Union proceeded with the program.

Sunday-school Literature. Discussed by T. J. Taylor, N. B. Cobb and Jas. R. Rodwell.

What Constitutes a call to the Ministry? Discussed by G. W. Harman and N. B. Cobb.

It was ordered by the Union that Bro. Harman be requested to prepare and have published in the RECORDER said address before the Union.

The time for adjournment being at hand, the Union adjourned until Saturday morning. Benediction by Rev. L. C. Perkinson.

SATURDAY.

9:30 a. m., prayer-meeting conducted by G. W. Harman.

10 a. m., the Union was called to order by Moderator Shaw. There being no business before the Union, the regular program was taken up.

The RECORDER as an Exponent of North Carolina Baptist Work. Discussed by W. E. Bowers, N. L. Shaw and T. J. Taylor.

New Testament Methods of Missions. Discussed by G. W. Harman, N. L. Shaw, T. J. Taylor and N. B. Cobb. After which a collection for Foreign Missions was taken amounting to $2.96.

The Union then adjourned for refreshments. Prayer by Bro. Harman.

Immediately after adjournment, the Executive Committee held a meeting.

SATURDAY EVENING.

At 2 p. m. the Union was called to order by the moderator. Some of the delegates having arrived since the roll call, the roll was called and their names recorded. The Union then proceeded with the program.

Our College—its Work and our Duty to It. Discussed by N. L. Shaw, W. E. Bowers and G. W. Harman.

The Orphanage. Discussed by G. W. Harman and T. J. Taylor. A collection for the Orphanage amounted to $3 08.

The question box proved very interesting. The moderator in a short but eloquent speech thanked the church for the hospitable manner in which the Union had been entertained.

The business being finished, the Union adjourned to meet again Friday before the fifth Sunday in October. Prayer by Bro. Harman. N. L. SHAW, Mod.

J. M. COLEMAN, Clerk.

TAR RIVER UNION.

The Fourth Section of the Tar River Union Meeting was held with the church at Sandy Creek, commencing Saturday before the fifth Sunday in April, 1893. Bro. J. D. Ricks was appointed moderator, and Bro. W. H. Gupton clerk.

First question taken up: Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works. The question was very ably discussed by Rev. J. W. Sledge and Bro. Geo. May.

Answer to first question: Let each member study how to reach each other's condition and help him out of every trouble.

Second question taken up: Is church membership essential to the full enjoyment of Christian work?

Answer to second question: It is essential to a full enjoyment of the Christian work.

Meeting adjourned until to-morrow at 9:30 a. m.

Sunday morning the meeting met according to adjournment. Praise and prayer by Bro. Geo. May. After which was taken up a Sunday-school Mass Meeting, which was discussed by Bro. Geo. May and Bro. Wesley Burnette.

The Aged Ministers' Relief Board was discussed by Rev. J. W. Sledge.

After the sermon, a collection was taken up amounting to $2.86.

On Sunday afternoon the question, How may we have conversions all the year around? was taken up, and discussed by Bro. B. B. Collins, Bro. Geo. May and Rev. J. W. Sledge.

Bros. Jas. Brewer and Wesley Burnette were appointed to arrange a program for the next meeting in October.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

A Brighter Outlook for China.

We have repeatedly referred in recent numbers to Chou Han, the leader of the band in the province of Hunan, which has issued a vast amount of vile literature against foreigners, inciting the people to riot. His headquarters were at Changsha, the capital of Hunan, and Chou Han had an immense following among the people. A letter written to the English Independent from Hankow July 1, by Rev. Dr. Griffith John, says that a great change has taken place, that Chou Han has been degraded, and the publishing firms have been closed, so that the vile stream of anti-Christian prints has been dried up at its very source. Dr. John reports the baptism at Hankow of two Hunan men, one a native of Changsha, and the other formerly a cook of Chou Han. This Changsha man returned to his native city amid a storm of excitement, for the news of his conversion went before him. On his arrival the clan to which he belonged met him; he was seized and dragged to the ancestral temple, was reviled and beaten, and told that having renounced his ancestors he must be dealt with according to clan law. Through the intercession of one of the company the convert was allowed to write a paper withdrawing from the clan and promising never to enter its temple again. This young man bore these indignities with patience and firmness and a forgiving spirit. A younger brother of his has recently been baptized at Hankow, and in writing to him the young man says: "You and I, together with our children and grandchildren, can never again enter the ancestral temple. As for me, I am quite willing that it should be so. Not only do I not regret the step I have taken, my joy is greatly increased and my heart is full of gladness. Now that you, my worthy younger brother, have joined the church, you will not be displeased with me on account of what I have done. . . . Though our clansmen, together with our relations and friends in Changsha, despise us, and though many hate us and revile us, it is for us to manifest patience and avoid all wranglings and disputings. Being the disciples of Jesus, we must carry the cross. Consider the apostle Paul. He was at one time a persecutor of the church, and afterward he was called upon to endure persecution. Paul endured joyfully the bitterest trials. Shall you and I then not willingly endure this trifling persecution?" In connection with the degradation by the officials of Chou Han, Dr. John comments on the complete control the central government has upon the people and scholars of China. No doubt there was a great popular uprising last year in Changsha and that the sympathies of the local magistrates were with the mob and against foreigners, especially against Christians. It seemed for a time as if Chou Han and the populace would succeed in their plans. But the moment that the government at Peking, under the influence of the foreign powers, took the matter in hand, "Chou Han and his clique collapsed." Dr. John adds: "Everything in China depends upon the attitude of the government. In this case the government has shown itself all-powerful. The pity is that it did not move sooner and that its action has not been spontaneous."—Selected.

(KING'S ROYAL GERMETUER.)

Is a Unique, Peerless Preparation, which embodies the best and latest fruits of medical research, and differs radically from ordinary medicines in a number of particulars:

It is as Pleasant to Take as Lemonade
Harmless, may be given any child.
And makes an Elegant Summer Drink.
It Destroys all Germs, and is Refreshing.

Jas. M. Rollins of St. Louis, Mo., says:

"I have used KING'S ROYAL GERMETUER and can testify to its wonderful merits in the cure of indigestion and dyspepsia. It is a certain remedy for burns and bruises. One or two local applications generally relieve a severe burn. For stupid physical depression it brings marked relief, and as a household medicine K. R. G. is a blessing."

TESTED AND PROVED FOR YEARS.

TERRY, Miss., April 21, 1893.

We have been using Dr. King's Royal Germetuer for several years in our family, and have recommended it to many others. It has always done what we hoped for it, as far as tried, and I regard it as the best medicine we have ever had in our family. MRS. J. J. HALBERT.

This great remedy presents an array of testimonials absolutely without a parallel in the history of medicines either as to character or number. These statements show that it cures Nervous Disorder, Stomach Troubles, Bowel Derangement in old or young, whether recent or chronic, Kidney and Bladder Troubles, Debility.

Give it a fair trial, and you will be convinced. $1 per bottle; 6 for $5. Free information.

A Strong Endorsement.

The St. Louis Trade Review and Export Journal in its issue of February 7th, 1893, has this to say:

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.

One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B. Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

Mr. Willis P. Barnes,

ONE OF ROBERSON COUNTY'S STERLING CITIZENS SAYS:

LUMBERTON, N. C., February 13, 1893.

Dear Sir:—I should be ungrateful if I delayed longer to say a good word for the Electropoise. For the last fifteen years I have been a great sufferer from rheumatism in its most violent type. Tried every remedy, to no purpose, found no relief, had given up all hope of recovery. While lying in bed looking over a newspaper I saw the picture of the Electropoise, saw the words "cures without medicine" and saw some names recommending it that were responsible men. I ordered one from you in May last, used it carefully according to directions from you, and the wonderful curative effects from its use seems almost impossible to believe by any one not sick. I am now nearly free from all aches and pains, I have gained in solid flesh, 21 pounds, sleep as sound and sweet as I did when a child, my appetite is good as it ever was, digestion good and I am 61 years old but feel young as a boy, it would be impossible for any amount of money to get the little Poise from me. I can cheerfully recommend it to the afflicted, I hope every person afflicted will try one and get well. Very truly yours,

WILLIS P. BARNES.

At present no active measures have been taken to enforce the Chinese exclusion act. The matter has received the attention of President Cleveland and his cabinet. The sum of money ($100,000) appropriated by Congress is not sufficient to enforce the act, and it is probable nothing will be done in the matter until the meeting of Congress next winter.

Ten Days at Randleman.

Dear Recorder:—Randleman is a combination of towns on Deep river in Randolph county. There are located here four large plaid factories and each is in a town of its own name. There is Powerhatan, Naomi, Randleman and Plaidville, with a place called Jerusalem thrown in. There are living here about 2,500 people, all under one town government known as Randleman.

I visited this place on Monday, May 1st, to assist Bro. G. M. Webb in a meeting of days. The Union Meeting had just closed with a fine spiritual effect upon the community, but as the congregation is a night congregation owing to the running of the factories, a rain very materially interfered with us for three nights in succession. I almost despaired of doing any good, but the weather changed, and Thursday night we had a very good attendance. The weather, however, alternated through the entire meeting, very much damaging the congregations. However, we had the witness of the Lord's presence from the beginning.

When I left on Wednesday night, there had been eleven accessions for baptism, and a large number asking for the prayers of Christians. Bro. Webb was to continue on the night following.

The Baptists have struggled here against odds and poverty. The Methodists are largely in the ascendancy here, having two churches and over 350 members. The Baptists have now about fifty all told. I was informed by an old citizen that the Methodists were not as strong numerically as ten years ago. A number of their members complain very seriously at the lack of spirituality among them, and the recent large number of professions was largely inside the fold of the church. A number of those who professed in our meeting were church members. This was a serious hindrance in the work, and hard to overcome. The Baptist church has the respect and confidence of the community, though I am afraid has some dead-heads as most churches have.

Bro. Webb is doing a good work here, and I found him a man after my own heart as a Baptist. He is solid and straightforward in the proclamation of the Word. He believes in a converted membership and in the Bible as the rule of faith and practice.

I received many tokens of kindness in the community and was glad, notwithstanding all the drawbacks, that I visited Randleman. A number of the Methodist brethren gave me tangible evidence of their appreciation of my visit.

I was sorry Sister Webb was debarred the privileges of the meeting by feeble health, but I will ever remember the pleasant time I enjoyed at their little home.

Bro. Webb has done a fine work in this county for the Baptists, and Randleman church has need to rejoice that they can have such a man for their pastor.

I regretted very much to miss the Convention, but as the missionaries must go unpaid, I was too poor to go.

Fraternally, S. F. CONRAD.

The Leaksville Woolen Mills, Leaksville, N. C., need no introduction to the public in North Carolina and adjoining States. This is simply to remind you that they are still "in touch" with the people, working up their wool into various forms of finished product at satisfactory prices. A handsome catalogue containing samples of their new and attractive styles of Fancy Cassimeres and All-Wool Flannels, together with all other goods made by them, is sent to any address on application. Besides an interesting article on "Wool on How to Handle It," the catalogue contains full particulars in regard to shipping wool. If these details are carefully followed, we guarantee prompt return of goods.
Write to Hiram Foard, Sec'y, Leaksville, N. C., for catalogue, before disposing of your wool.

DIED.

HESTER—Sister Alifair Hester, wife of G. W. Hester of Richardson, N. C., April 30th, 1893, in the sixty-first year of her age. She leaves a devoted husband and ten children, six sons and four daughters, to mourn her loss. But they sorrow not as those who have no hope. She was a faithful member of Clarkton Baptist church, and died in the triumphs of a gospel faith. She will be greatly missed among her many friends and relatives.

The funeral services were conducted by Revs. Haynes Lennon and R. M. Sessoms.

H.

TAYLOE—Died in Bertie county, on May 9th, 1893, Mrs. David E. Tayloe, in the sixty-seventh year of her age.

Mrs. Tayloe was Miss Elizabeth Outlaw, the oldest daughter of Dr. Joseph Outlaw, and the granddaughter of Gov. Dav. Stone. She leaves a sister, Mrs. H. O. Biddle of Bertie county, and a niece, Mrs. Ida Pearce of Franklin county. Her connection is large, and her relatives are among the leading people of the South. For more than fifty years she was the faithful, loving and tenderly devoted wife of David E. Tayloe, who preceded her to the bliss that awaits the faithful. Mrs. Tayloe was all her life a zealous member of the Baptist church. She was a constant attendant on its services, a firm believer in its teachings, and above all, a true Christian. Hers was a gentle, loving faith in him. Her aim in life was to serve him. She did good according to her strength. Her neighbors and friends put her body to rest by her husband in the Baptist church yard. Mr. A. J. Cobb read appropriate Scripture and prayed a touching prayer.

A good woman has gone out from us. The sweet influence and memories of her life will not fade from the hearts of all who knew her.

DAUGHTER.

SANDERS—Wm. H. Sanders, aged eighty-seven years, departed this life on Sunday evening, April 10th, 1893, at 8 o'clock, at his residence in Johnston county. He has been afflicted for several years and a great sufferer, but always hopeful, bright and cheerful, submitting without a murmur to his lot. About fifty years ago he professed faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and united with the Smithfield Missionary Baptist church, but afterward removed his membership to Shiloh, where he remained until transferred by death to the church triumphant. For forty years he was a deacon of his church, to which he was specially devoted, ever actuated by the spirit of the Master; a source of help and encouragement to his pastor; and having "used the office of deacon well, he purchased to himself a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus." He was an affectionate husband and father, a kind and obliging neighbor, a sympathetic and helping friend, and a true Christian citizen.

No one, perhaps, enjoyed reading the BIBLICAL RECORDER more than he; and his love for Wake Forest College was without mitigation.

He made the things of the world secondary and subservient to the interest of his soul and the glory of God. He was social in his nature, and ever found delight in the company of his friends; much beloved by his brethren and sisters in the church, and was held in the highest esteem by all who had the pleasure of knowing him. He leaves a devoted wife, two children, several grandchildren, and a large number of relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

Tribute of East Durham Baptist Sunday-school:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to visit our Sunday-school and take from our midst Miss Hattie Brown on April 20th, and Mrs. J. P. Scoggins on April 21st, by death, two of our faithful attendants and much loved classmates; and, whereas, they can no more fill their places among us as pupils and co-workers, therefore be it

Resolved 1. That our school feels sorely bereaved in their loss, but cherishes a lively hope that they are both reaping the reward of their labors of love here with the redeemed in heaven.

Resolved 2. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father in taking them away.

Resolved 3. That we offer their living expression of faith as a condolence to all who are bereaved in their death.

Resolved 4. That a copy of these resolutions be placed upon our school record, and a copy be presented to each of the families of the deceased, and also be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

Rheumatic Gout.

General Colton Greene, President of the State Savings Bank of Memphis, Tenn., Leaves his Crutches at BUFFALO LITHIA SPRINGS---Value of Buffalo Lithia Water in Gout, Uric-Acid Diathesis, Etc.

BUFFALO LITHIA SPRINGS, VA., September 29, 1892.

Colonel Thomas F. Goode:

DEAR SIR:—It is now four weeks since I reached Buffalo Lithia Springs, suffering from the effects of recurrent attacks of acute articular gout in both feet, which had lasted and confined me to bed for two months. Though I had biennially, sometimes annually, suffered for short periods, the malady on this last occasion was more violent than before and threatened to take a chronic form. My digestive organs were impaired, my health was shattered, I was crippled, and calcareous deposits were appearing on both feet. Directly on my arrival I copiously used the water of Spring No. 2 conjointly with daily hot baths. A fortnight later I was in condition to walk without the use of crutches, the swelling and inflammation of the parts had measurably subsided, and my health improved. To-day my general health is better than it has been in twelve months, the deposition of uric-acid sediment is dissipated, and my feet, though sensitive to pressure, are restored to their normal condition.

Respectfully yours,

COLTON GREENE.

Buffalo Lithia Water

ITS GREAT TRIUMPH IN RHEUMATIC GOUT.

[Statement of Mr. Charles Bernaschina, of Hot Springs, Ark.]

Proprietor of Buffalo Lithia Springs, Va.:

DEAR SIR:—I cheerfully place at your disposal the following statement, showing the remarkable benefit which I have derived from the Buffalo Lithia Waters in a case of Gout. I am a resident of the Hot Springs, Ark. In October, 1885, I was attacked with Rheumatic Gout in a very severe form, being confined to my bed until the April following. For fourteen consecutive months I used the hot baths, and visited many of the noted mineral resorts of the country, and from time to time since have made use of the hot baths, but without finding any relief. Chalky deposits formed in most of my joints, I was unable to walk or to use my hands. Four months ago to day I arrived at these Springs, and was for some time after confined to my bed. At the expiration of six weeks slight improvement was perceptible, the chalky deposits began to disappear, and I have continued to improve to the present time, and to an extent that I consider, under the circumstances, almost marvellous, the chalky deposits having almost disappeared. I am now in vigorous general health, and walk readily and actively, walking often several miles over the surrounding hills, and am able to use my hands in dressing myself and at the table, which I was not able to do previous to coming to the Springs.

You are doubtless aware of the fact that my case has attracted unusual attention among your many guests from all parts of the country.

Yours very respectfully,

August 6th, 1892. CHAS. BERNASCHINA.

God Cares for Me.

I sat in the door at eventide,
My heart was full of fears;
And I saw the landscape before me lie
Through mists of burning tears—
I thought to myself, the world is dark,
No light nor joy I see:
Nothing but toil and want is mine,
And no one cares for me.

A sparrow was twittering at my feet,
With its beautiful auburn head,
And looked at me with dark, mild eyes
As it picked up crumbs of bread;
And said to me, in words as plain
As the words of a bird could be:
"I'm only a sparrow, a worthless bird,
But the dear Lord cares for me."

A lily was growing beside the hedge,
Beautiful, tall, and white,
And it shone through the glossy leaves of green
Like an angel clothed in light;
And it said to me, as it waved its head
On the breezes soft and free:
"I'm only a lily, a useless flower,
But the Master cares for me."

Then it seemed that the hand of the loving Lord,
Over my head was laid,
And he said to me, "O faithless child,
Wherefore art thou dismayed?
I clothe the lilies, I feed the birds,
I see the sparrows fall,
Nothing escapes my watchful eye,
My kindness is over all."

—Mrs. Matilda C. Edwards.

Faithful Leo.

Leo was a superb creature, and a striking illustration of the almost human intelligence sometimes to be met with among our canine friends. He was a thoroughbred Ulmer hound, a breed which is unfortunately not well known here, as it does not thrive in our climate. Taller than a mastiff, and of longer, leaner build, he was also much more quick and graceful in his movements.

He was a very dignified dog, and, though ordinarily good tempered, had not a very sociable disposition. Indeed, the only person toward whom he displayed any demonstrative affection was his young mistress, whom he adored and of whom he was almost an inseparable companion.

My nephew Archie called her the Prince, because she bore a remarkable resemblance to one of the little unfortunate princes who were shut up in the Tower of London by their inhuman uncle, King Richard III.

Every afternoon at four o'clock Archie would sit by the window, watching for the fair-haired child and the big dog and all the little dogs when they started for their afternoon walk. One afternoon, however, she did not come as usual, and after that it was many weeks before we saw her again.

The blinds of the house opposite were drawn down. Doctor's carriages were often standing in front of the door, and finally one morning Gretchen, a neat rosy-cheeked German maid, who brought us our breakfast, said in an awed voice that the little Fraulein across the way was dying. But she did not die, for the noble animal, who loved her so dearly, helped to save her life.

All through her long illness Leo was constantly by her bedside, and even when the fever was at its height she would try to stroke his great head with her feeble little hand. A time came when she was too weak even to do this, and when the dog saw her mother crying bitterly, and the doctor looking so grave as he felt the little girl's pulse, Leo seemed to understand that things were getting very serious.

There was in Baden at that time a celebrated physician, Doctor Heiligenthal, who was very rich, very learned and eccentric. He had attended to little Bertha for several years, and, in spite of his gruff manner, the child was devoted to him, but Bertha's mother did not like him at all.

With people who were not ill he was often very brusque and disagreeable in his manner, and after numerous disagreements this lady had finally dismissed him. But Leo with his wonderful memory had not forgotten how often his little mistress had grown stronger and better under the great physician's treatment.

So on this morning, having quietly slipped down the stairs and out of the house, he made straight for the street in which Dr. H. lived, who, on returning from his round of visits, found the huge brute waiting for him on the doorstep of his house.

Leo could not talk but he whined and barked, licked the doctor's hand and tugged at his coat, and the look of appeal in his brown eyes said so plainly, "Come with me," that the doctor could not help being moved.

In the sick room all hope had been abandoned. There were three doctors in consultation. Bertha's mother was kneeling beside the bed, stifling her sobs in the satin coverlid. The child lay back upon the pillows very white and still. For hours they had been unable to induce her to speak, or to swallow any medicine. She had not taken the slightest notice of anyone.

Suddenly there was a noise of a carriage tearing up the street, a peal at the bell, a sound of an animal bounding up the stairs. Stephanie raised her head and listened.

There was Leo back again at last—but who's step was that? Could it be———?

The portieres were pushed aside, and the immense figure of Doctor Heiligenthal loomed on the threshold.

"Thank God, it is you!" gasped the maid. "Perhaps you can save our Fraulein," then she led the way to the sick room where the three doctors were in attendance.

Dr. H. exchanged a silent greeting with his colleagues and went straight to the bed. He stooped to tell him what was amiss. Then he threw aside his huge fur-lined cloak, pulled off his gloves and took the child's wrist in a breathless pause. Every one looked at him in amazement. He had appeared like an apparition. Who was he? He prepared himself ately a strengthening draught, although the nurse whispered to him that she would not touch it.

"She will take it from me."

He motioned for them all to move back from the bed. Then he bent over little Bertha and fixed his strange, deepset, magnetic eyes on her face.

"Bertha," he said shaking slightly the hand that he held, "Bertha, look at me." Almost instantly the heavy eyes opened and wandered to his face. "You know me," he went on, still holding her with that deep, magnetic gaze, "now try to understand me. It was Leo who brought me here," he continued, quickly; "he came all the way to my house, because he knew that I loved you, and would want to help you."

"Leo," the pale lips murmured. It was the first word she had spoken for hours.

"Yes, it was Leo. And I came at once, and will make you well very soon, if you will do just what I say. You trust me, do you not, my little one?"

"Yes—I—trust—you," she gasped.

"Then you will take this for me."

As he held a glass to her lips one of the three other doctors started to come toward him. A fierce snarl from Leo caused them speedily to withdraw back. The huge brute had stretched himself across the floor, so as to prevent any approach to the bedside, with his head erect, and with his keen, watchful eyes, he looked like a big gray sentinel on guard.

Half an hour later the first gleam of hope and joy had come into that sorrowful house. The three doctors had gone. Bertha's mother had dried her tears. Stephanie, the Prince's maid, had a smile upon her face.

Leo, the noble dog, to whose wonderful instinct, quickened by his love for his mistress, was due all this happiness, lay stretched peacefully on the hearth rug, banging the floor contentedly with his tail from time to time, his faithful eyes turned toward the group by the bedside, where little Bertha lay sleeping in the great doctor's arms, her weary little head resting upon his shoulder and her long golden curls mingling with his long black beard. It was the first peaceful slumber she had had for weeks.

She grew rapidly stronger and well after that, and soon a time came when, to Archie's great delight, "The Little Prince" walked out with all the dogs once more. And one of her very first walks was to carry a huge bunch of lovely roses out of her own garden to her beloved Doctor Heiligenthal. Archie, to his great delight, was asked to go with her on this occasion. "For you see, dear," she said, in her serious way, "I appreciate him, and Leo appreciates him, and as you are my best friend, I want you to love him too."

For months after that Leo barked furiously at the other physicians whenever he met them on the street. And Leo wears a collar of beautiful-wrought silver on which was engraved: "Leo Fidelis, from Dr. H. as a reward for his devotion to his mistress."—Youth's Companion.

Healthy Girls.

It is impossible to imagine a pleasant home with a cross wife, mother or sister, as its presiding genius. And it is a rule, with exceptions, that good appetite and sound sleep induce amiability. If, with these advantages, a girl or woman, boy or man, is still snappish or surly, why it must be due to her or his total depravity. But as yet this soundness of body is one of the things to be aimed at and striven for, and the young girl very conscious—as she should not be—of back, and throat, and head, and nerves, wishes she knew how to be beautifully healthy. Some things she should not do; she shouldn't dose herself, or study her case, or plunge suddenly into vigorous exercises. Moderation is a safe rule to begin with, and, indeed, to keep on with. Moderation in study, in work, in exercise, in everything except fresh air, good simple food and sleep. Few people have too much of these. The average girl, at home, can find no more sanitary gymnastics than in doing part of the lighter housework. This sort of exercise has object, and interest and use, which raises it above mere drill. Add to this a merry romp with younger brothers and sisters, a brisk daily walk, the use for a few moments twice a day of dumb-bells in a cool, airy room, and it is safe to predict a steady advance toward that ideal state of being in which we forget our bodies and just enjoy ourselves.—The Examiner.

Animals and Music.

The Spectator gives an account of certain experiments made to determine the sensibility of animals to music. In each experiment the violin would first be played, at first low and soft, then gradually louder and louder; the sharp, high-toned piccolo would then follow, and then the flute. The effect was often startling. The tiger, for instance, listened intently and with evident pleasure to the violin, but when the piccolo began was filled with the wildest rage, rushed up and down the cage, or bounded across it, reared on its hind legs, shook its head and ears, and lashed its tail from side to side. The flute, however, calmed it at once, and, coming to the bars of the cage, it listened intently to it. The monkeys, who were admitted to the concert, were affected in the same way as the tiger, but were not so violent in the expression of their emotions. This music of the violin was often so agreeable to them that they would drop their food and listen very attentively, while the piccolo almost invariably aroused their anger. The elephant preferred the flute, and was enraged at the sound of the piccolo, as was also the ostrich. The wild asses and zebras left their food when the violin began to play, and ran over to hear it; the piccolo, however, soon sent them back again.—Ex.

Things I Have Learned.

That to wash irons in dish water after washing skillets, will make them smooth and prevent rusting.

That if you fold your clothes as you take them from the line they would iron much easier.

That your copper wash boiler, if well rubbed with a cloth dipped in coal oil, will be clean and bright.

That you can sweep a rag carpet much cleaner sweeping cross-wise of the width.

That if you want to keep your house free from moths, never put down your carpets till the floor is thoroughly dry.

That to keep your bedding pure and wholesome, open your beds to the air the first thing in the morning.

That in making up unbleached muslin, allow one inch to the yard for shrinkage.

That one part suet to two parts lard rendered together, is much better for frying purposes than all lard.

That to have good coffee your coffee pot must be bright and clean inside.

That to stir a little flour in when making mush, will prevent it from breaking to pieces when frying.—Household.

Look at the size of the ordinary pill. Think of all the trouble and disturbance that it causes you. Wouldn't you welcome something easier to take, and easier in its ways, if at the same time it did you more good? That is the case with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They're the smallest in size, the mildest in action, but the most thorough and far-reaching in results. They follow nature's methods, and they give help that lasts. Constipation, Indigestion Bilious Attacks, Sick and Bilious Headaches, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels, are promptly relieved and permanently cured.

"If we can't cure your Catarrh, no matter how bad your case or of how long standing, we'll pay you $500 in cash." That is what is promised by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Doesn't it prove, better than any words could, that this is a remedy that cures Catarrh? Costs only 50 cents.

How to go to Sleep.

Scientific investigators assert that in beginning to sleep the senses do not unitedly fall into slumber, but drop off one after another. The sight ceases in consequence of the protection of the eyelids to receive impressions first, while all the other senses preserve their sensibility entire. The sense of taste is the next which loses its susceptibility to impression, and then the sense of smelling. The hearing is next in order, and last of all comes the sense of touch. Furthermore, the senses are brought to sleep with different degrees of profoundness. The sense of touch sleeps the most lightly and is the most easily awakened; the next easiest is the hearing, the next is the sight, and the taste and smelling awake last.

Another remarkable circumstance deserves notice; certain muscles and parts of the body begin to sleep before others. Sleep commences at the extremities, beginning with the feet and legs and creeping toward the centre of nervous action. The necessity of keeping the feet warm and perfectly still as a preliminary of sleep is well known. From these explanations it will not appear surprising that there should be an imperfect kind of mental action which produces the phenomena of dreaming.—Am. Analyst.

A Discourse on the Apostolic Ministry.

BY REV. DR. FRANCIS WAYLAND.

Delivered in Rochester, N. Y., before the New York Baptist Union for Ministerial Education on July 12th, 1853.

Text, Mark 16: 15—"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature"

[CONCLUDED.]

But, secondly, God sometimes bestows upon individuals particular talents, which may be made the means of special usefulness. One has a remarkable capacity for managing affairs, another for mechanical invention, another for philological research, and another for the pursuit of abstract science. In such a case, it would seem that such talent is to be cultivated with special care. It is a means of usefulness which has not been created in vain, and is not to be recklessly thrown away. On the same principle, if a man has been endowed with a talent for public speaking, though employed in a secular calling, he must embrace every opportunity in his power to render this talent serviceable to Christ. Besides availing himself of every means of general culture, he should devote particular attention to the improvement of this special gift. He should give himself to the study of the Word of God, and should labor as much as may be in his power to render his instructions profitable to his fellowmen.

But, now, suppose it manifest that God has called a man to devote his whole time to the ministry of the Word; it is obvious that the obligation to improve his talent to the utmost, is specially imperative. It is by means of his intellectual faculties that he attempts to influence the minds of his fellowmen. This is the service to which they are exclusively devoted. He is laboring in the cause which employed all the faculties of the Son of man while on earth. For the use and the improvement of his intellectual powers, he must render a specially solemn account. The means of improvement which God has placed in the power of those whom he calls to the ministry, may be very dissimilar; inasmuch as they may vary with age, domestic relations, pecuniary ability, and degree of talent for acquisition. God assigns these conditions as he pleases; all that he requires is, that all he has given should be faithfully improved and consecrated to his service. From the views which we entertain respecting the ministry, it is evident that a large portion of our candidates for the sacred office must have attained to some maturity of age. It must certainly be difficult to ascertain whether or not a person in mere youth possesses the qualifications which the Apostle Paul teaches us must be required in a candidate.

If it be then our purpose to provide the means of improvement for those among us who are called to the ministry, it has seemed to me that we should bear in mind these elementary ideas of our denomination on this subject. If we are willing to follow, and not to lead, the Spirit of God—that is, if we educate no man for the ministry until we are satisfied, not that he may be, but that he has been, called of God to the work of preaching the gospel—we shall always have among our candidates a large number of those who have passed the period of youth, and for whom the studies of youth would be unsuitable, if not useless. Yet these are the very men to whom appropriate culture would be specially valuable. Others, in various degrees have been more favored with preparatory education, and the means for more extended discipline. The means and advantages of our candidates must, therefore, be exceedingly dissimilar. If, then, we would labor to give to the ministry the means of improvement, we must provide those means for them all. A system of ministerial education, adapted to the condition of but one in twenty of our candidates, commences with the avowed intention of doing but one-twentieth part of its work, and of helping those only who have the least need of its assistance. We should, therefore, provide for all our brethren whom God has called to this service, the best instruction in our power; adapted, as far as possible, not to any theoretical view, but to the actual condition of the mass of our candidates, leaving each individual, in the exercise of a sound and pious discretion, to determine the extent to which he is able to avail himself of our services. While means should be fully provided for pursuing an extended course of education, we must never lose sight of the large number of our brethren to whom an extended course would be impossible.

But in what way soever a candidate pursues his studies, whether by himself, or under the instruction of an elder brother in the ministry, or in a seminary devoted to this purpose, the question remains to be considered, to what points shall his efforts be directed. In attempting to answer this question, it is important to determine, in the first place, what object he has in view. His object is to prepare himself to be, not a teacher, or a professor, or an agent, or a philological scholar, or a popular writer, but an evangelist or a pastor. It is not by any means asserted that these various gifts are not useful, or are not to be cultivated. What I say is, that they are not particularly connected with the ministry, and therefore should be cultivated elsewhere. Least of all should a course of education for the Christian ministry be modified for the sake of preparing men for other and different pursuits. His calling is to persuade men to be reconciled to God, and to build up those who are reconciled in their most holy faith. His studies, then, must all bear directly upon this object, for which "it has pleased God to put him into the ministry." The means which he is to use in accomplishing this object are simple. He is to make known the will of God as it has been revealed in the New Testament, and to urge men to obey it.

It is obvious then, first of all, that the minister of the gospel must be, as thoroughly as possible, acquainted with the teachings of Jesus Christ and his Apostles. These contain the precise truth inspired by the Holy Ghost, which he is to communicate to others. He is authorized to make known to men as the commandment of God the whole of this revelation, and nothing whatever beyond it. It is precisely this truth, and nothing else, that the Spirit of God has promised to accompany with his almighty power. Now, I think that a man may be materially assisted to understand the New Testament by improved mental discipline. He needs to acquire the habit of continuous and abstract thought, the power of concentrating his mind upon a subject, and keeping it steady to its work. He must think through the thoughts of the Bible, that he may be able to present them clearly to others. But let me say that this is far from being a merely intellectual process. Simply intellectual power can never attain to it. There is needed, besides this, a devout and holy temper of mind, without which mere mental strength can do but little. These things are "hidden from the wise and prudent, and revealed unto babes." Of all this you are fully aware from your own experience. When you have been desirous of ascertaining the meaning of any particular passage of the Scriptures, in order to impress it more deeply on your fellowmen, in what manner have you been most successful, by turning over the works of men, or by the earnest thinking of a soul lying in lowly prostration before the Spirit of infinite wisdom? I do not stand here to disparage either human learning, or logical acuteness, but I say that these, without the aid of a holy temper of mind, will enable us but imperfectly to understand the mind of the Spirit. What we need is, to know, not the thoughts of man, but the thoughts of God, and these will be best understood by the soul illumined by the indwelling of the Holy Spirit.

Here I may however remark, in passing, that the revelation given to us consists of ideas, and not of words. These ideas may be expressed in our own language, or in the languages in which they were written. If a man have the opportunity of reading the Bible in its original languages, let him by all means learn to do it, and do it thoroughly. Let him embrace this and every other opportunity of generous intellectual culture. No man may innocently reject any means by which he may add to the accuracy of his knowledge of the Word of God. But if such opportunity as he may desire have not been given him, let him not despair, or think himself set aside as a vessel in whom the Master has no pleasure. Let him study the Scriptures more earnestly, and pray more devoutly, using every means which God has placed in his power; and the Spirit will assuredly lead him into all necessary truth.

But suppose this truth to have been arrived at; it is then to be presented to the human heart, so as to produce the effect of persuasion. Here is required a knowledge of the human mind, its moral condition, its opposition to God, its subjection to earthly affections, and of all the phases which it assumes when its chambers of imagery are illuminated by the light of divine truth. In order to acquire this knowledge, the man must become acquainted, first of all, with his own moral nature, and the modes of its operation. When he tells what he has himself experienced, he may be assured that in general he speaks the language of humanity. Here also he needs to be in the habit of personal conversation with his fellowmen on the subject of religion. Hence, it is that no man is ever an effective preacher, who does not visit his people for the sake of urging upon them personally the claims of religion. Have you never observed how pungent the preaching of a minister becomes who has spent a few weeks in the midst of a revival of religion, where his whole time is occupied in intercourse with awakened souls, and how such a minister carries everywhere with him the spirit of a revival? It is thus that we learn to apply the truths of the gospel to the minds of men.

But a minister is to teach publicly, and from house to house.

Under the first of these divisions of his duty must be placed the composition of a sermon. He whose weekly business it is to address men publicly should, if possible, understand the nature and objects of a discourse, and should learn to construct a discourse correctly. He should acquire the ability to think out a train of thought, which embodies one idea revealed by the Spirit of truth, and to lead the minds of men in the direction which he intends. Thorough, faithful and honest dealing with a candidate, may here be of eminent advantage to his future ministry.

But suppose this train of thought to be thus prepared, shall it be written or unwritten? Each has its advantages, but I am constrained to believe that the value of written discourses has been in this country greatly overrated. Speaking an unwritten train of thought is by far the noblest and most effective exercise of mind, provided the labor of preparation in both cases be the same. I cannot but think that we have been the losers by cultivating too exclusively the habit of written discourses.

But the discourse having been prepared, it has yet to be delivered. The cultivation of a clear and impressive delivery, free from awkwardness, vulgarity and oddity, and deeply imbued with the tones expressive of natural feeling, is of the greatest importance to a public speaker. It has surprised me that in seminaries, of which the object is to educate preachers, so little time should be devoted to the art of delivery. From want of attention to this subject, good and able men frequently attain to very moderate success, and are shoved aside by men, in other respects, very greatly their inferiors.

But the gospel is to be preached not only publicly, but from house to house. In preparing for this part of his duty, a young minister may receive much valuable instruction from an elder brother who has himself been a diligent pastor. The sick are to be visited, the mourners consoled, the thoughtless aroused, the secure alarmed, the convicted urged to decision, the penitent pointed to Christ, the wandering reclaimed, the feeble encouraged; and all this by personal appeal to individuals, and he who has done it successfully, may give much valuable counsel to him who is just entering upon the work. Until a minister has learned not only to perform but to love this part of his labor, he cannot hope to be a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. I do not know of a more common or a more just ground of complaint against the ministry, than that of the neglect of parochial visitation. It seems strange that a man whose sole calling it is to urge men to repentance, should refuse to perform this duty, in this particular form, especially when his people themselves invite him to perform it. They desire that he should converse with them individually on the subject of their souls' salvation, and shall he consider such conversation a drudgery and leave his people unwarned? If any one desires to see this subject treated of with great force and eloquence, I ask leave to commend him to the perusal of "Baxter's Reformed Pastor."

Such seem to me, after some reflection, to be the points to which the attention of a candidate for the ministry should be directed. To these I know many others are commonly added, and the number of additions is continually increasing. We, however, seem frequently to forget that the time is rapidly approaching every young man, when, if he would be anything but a retailer of other men's opinions, he must be a teacher unto himself; and, that the sooner he can be induced to put himself under his own instruction, the sooner will he attain to the stature of a full grown man.

It is possible, my brethren, that in the views I have thus frankly suggested, there may seem to you somewhat of strangeness; but let me respectfully request that you will examine them, not in the light of the opinions and practice of men, but in the light of the teachings of Christ and his Apostles. Believe them and put them in practice in just so far as they conform to the revealed will of God, and no farther. This I may reasonably claim of every disciple of Christ, and I have no desire to claim anything more.

At the present moment, a right understanding of the duties of the private disciples of Christ, and of the ministers, and of the relations which they sustain to the Master and to each other, seems to me of incalculable importance. Since the era of the Reformation, Protestantism has made no aggressions upon Popery, and the same geographical lines have for centuries separated the parties from each other. But now it is evident that a contest for the mastery of the world between the powers of light and the powers of darkness is imminent and inevitable. The nations in which the Bible is freely circulated, and the gospel publicly preached, are ranging themselves on the one side; and the nations from which the Bible is prohibited, and where the preaching of Christ is forbidden, are ranging themselves on the other. Within the life-time of men who now hear me, the question will probably be decided, whether the kingdom of Christ is now to proceed to universal victory, or ages of intellectual and moral darkness are again to overspread the earth. It is for such a crisis as this that the disciples of Christ are now called upon to prepare.

But more than this. It is obvious that this question is really to be decided in our own country. So long as the light of true Christianity shines brightly here, the rest of the world cannot be enveloped in darkness. Hence it is that the intention is publicly avowed of overturning our systems of universal education, and thus bringing us under the power of a foreign hierarchy. In aid of this design, immigrants by hundreds of thousands are annually arriving on our shores, who are at once admitted to all the privileges of citizenship, while they are conscientiously bound to obedience to a foreign ecclesiastical potentate. At the same time the press is scattering broadcast over our land the seeds of frivolity and licentiousness. Unbounded prosperity is providing for every class of our people the means of sensual gratification. The rise of prices, consequent upon the increase of the precious metals, is stimulating to yet greater excess the desire of acquisition already sufficiently ife amongst us. But critical as is our position, there would be nothing to alarm us, if the disciples of Christ, holy and self-denying, were, with one accord, ranging themselves under the banner of their Master, and using every means in their power to prepare for the coming onset; and the ministry, in the van of the Lord's hosts, filled with the power of the Holy Ghost, were by precept and example training their brethren for the approaching conflict.

But what is the condition of our churches of all denominations at this critical moment? The disciples of Christ seem to be fast losing the distinctive marks of their profession. Self-denial for the cause of the Redeemer will soon become the exception rather than the rule. In large districts of our country, the admissions to the churches are not as numerous as the removals by death. In the mean time, the number of candidates for the ministry is diminishing, in all denominations, not only relatively, but absolutely. Nay, it is diminishing more rapidly than the figures indicate, for of the reputed number of candidates a considerable portion never enter the ministry; and of those who enter it a greater and greater number are annually leaving it for other pursuits. And what is the remedy proposed in this unusual crisis? It has been recommended, in order to meet this emergency, to reduce the cost of ministerial education, to extend the term of ministerial study, and to increase the pecuniary emoluments of the ministry. In other words, we are told to address stronger motives to the self interests of men, that so we may induce them to enter upon a calling essentially self-denying. When the whole power of the adversary is thundering at the gates, and the crisis requires every man to stand to his arms, we content ourselves with offering large bounty to officers, and allow every citizen to retire from the conflict. Was ever a victory gained by strategy such as this?

In our own denomination, it is said that we have 4,000 churches destitute of preachers of the gospel. What is to be done to meet this deficiency? Does all that we are doing furnish us with the shadow of a hope that this demand can be supplied? Nay, multiply our present efforts to any practicable extent, and compared with the work to be done, the discrepancy between the means and the end is such as to awaken the feeling of the ludicrous. Is it not time, then, to examine the whole subject from its foundations? May not some light be derived from considering attentively the doctrine and examples of Christ and his Apostles?

Is it not evident that if we are attempting to do the work of God, we must do it in obedience to his commandments, and in conformity with the principles which he has established? Ministerial gifts have been bestowed upon the church by Christ ever since he ascended on high, and led captivity captive. He has commanded us to pray the Lord of the harvest to bestow these gifts upon men, and thus send forth laborers into the harvest. These gifts, in whatsoever manner bestowed, we are to receive and cherish and improve. By no rules of our own are we to restrict their number, or diminish their usefulness. We are to accept thankfully all the means which Christ has bestowed upon us for the advancement of his cause. And we are to cultivate a ministry after the example of the Apostles, men relying upon prayer and the Holy Ghost, and in self-denial, crucifixion to the world, its maxims, its amusements and its frivolities, setting an example to the flock, while they devote themselves daily to the work of saving souls. To every one whom Christ has thus called, let us give every intellectual advantage, which the circumstances of his individual case render suitable. Having done this, we have done all in our power for the improvement of the ministry, and we may reasonably expect on our labors the blessing of God.

But when all this has been done, but little will have been accomplished. If you, brethren, would improve the ministry, you must begin by improving yourselves. Ministerial gifts are not bestowed upon a slumbering, lukewarm and worldly church. And suppose they were bestowed, of what value would they be either to you or to others, if you are surrendered up to the lusts of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life? The ministry can only labor successfully as you labor with them. If you, then, really desire to witness the triumph of the cause of the Redeemer, you must begin to live a holy, self-denying life. You men of wealth must cease from accumulation, and devote not only your income but yourselves to the work of the Lord. You men in active business must be content to accumulate less rapidly, that you may have more of your time to consecrate to the salvation of men. Ye who, professing obedience to Christ, are yet living in subjection to the maxims of the world, eagerly chasing its frivolities, and teaching the lesson to your children, must commence a life of godly simplicity and Christian self-denial. Every disciple, by his mode of life, must show that he is not of the world, even as Christ was not of the world. When ministers and people thus begin to labor in earnest for Christ, we shall witness results such as the ages have not yet seen.

The nineteenth century since the advent of Christ is now half completed, and the world still lieth in wickedness. Is it not high time that the heathen were given to Christ for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession? Never, since the beginning, have the disciples of Christ enjoyed such advantages for the universal dissemination of the gospel as at present. Let us, then, go up and possess the land, for we are well able to overcome it. Nothing is now wanting to subdue the world unto Christ, but an universal, earnest, self-sacrificing effort of his disciples, in firm reliance upon the Spirit from on high. Thus far we have failed in just so far as we have trusted to our own wisdom instead of the wisdom of the Master. We mourn over the vices of the land. We invoke the majesty of the law, and laws are not executed. We unite in associations, and our associations are rent asunder. We join hands, now with one, and then with another struggling party, and we are sold in the political shambles like brute beasts. Let us, then, abjure all such vain alliances, and commence the work of reforming the world by obeying the precepts of Jesus. If we can convert men to Christ, the work of reformation will be done. By no other means will the flood of iniquity be stayed.

Do you not believe that if all the disciples of Christ in any of our cities or villages thus labored for Christ, they would soon arrest the progress of iniquity, and make it a garden of the Lord? Suppose that we in the same spirit undertook, in solemn earnestness, the conversion of the world; would it not soon be given unto Christ for his possession? Brethren, on whom does the responsibility for the present state of our cities, of our country, and of the world rest? Awake, then, and shake yourselves from your lethargy! Put ye in the sickle and reap, for the harvest of the earth is ripe.

That which is to be done cannot be done too soon, and if it is neglected too long, it will frequently happen that it will not be done at all.—Bishop Jewell.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 31, 1893.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

"What Baptists Believe," by the late J. L. Burrows, will be given to every new subscriber to the BIBLICAL RECORDER who will pay $3.00 in advance for a years' subscription. We will also give the book to every old subscriber who will pay his subscription to date and a year in advance.

Think of it! Your denominational paper, the subscription price of which is $3.00, one year, and a neatly bound book of over a hundred pages, containing a clear and fair expression of what Baptists believe and practice, all for the price of the paper.

Remember, this offer is to new and old subscribers alike.

THEOLOGY IN GERMANY.

We have lately read a very able and interesting article in the Seminary Magazine, published by the students of our Seminary at Louisville, Ky., by Dr. S. A. Smith, under the caption "Should Students of the Seminary study in German Universities?" We infer from Dr. Smith's article that it is rather a risky thing for them to do so, and among other reasons why he seems to think so is the rather low spiritual standard of piety maintained among German theological students with whom American theological students come in more or less intimate contact. From sundry notices we had seen of the life and habits of German students in general we were not surprised at the position taken by the writer, but we must confess that we were surprised at the following statement about German theological students, by one who knew by experience what he was writing about: "With one consent they are dissipated, reckless, Sabbath-breakers, drinkers, brawlers," &c.

Sad, indeed, that the future religious training of the people of one of the first nations of Europe should fall into such hands. In the light of such facts as the above one may well ask, "Did the Reformation reform?" When Luther and his followers went out from Romanism, did they not retain errors enough to require, that in after years, the Reformation would sadly need reforming. Among the most dangerous of these, we opine, was the retention of the idea of the union of Church and State. That union is producing its legitimate results in Germany, England, France, Spain; in fact, in all countries where it has been attempted or where it now exists. Most of the theological (?) students mentioned above were inducted, we suppose, into the State church (?) when unconscious infants. They have grown up, we fear, without piety or faith, have chosen the ministry, like one would law or medicine, and are preparing for a work for which they seem to be entirely unfit. This is a matter of such importance that we may revert to it again soon. Here we behold the fruits of the union of Church and State. Here we have a vivid picture of the state of things that would prevail in every land if infant baptism were general and Baptist principles were dead.

WE ARE delighted to hear such a cheering report from the meeting of the Chowan Association, which met last week. The showing which the churches made was excellent. The spirit was such as we hope will ever possess the meetings of our brethren. We know the results of our State Mission work must have been indeed cheering to the brethren. We hear that Dr. Taylor made one of his best speeches on education, and that Bro. J. B. Brewer's account of his work at Murfreesboro greatly encouraged the friends of that splendid institution of learning. We are profoundly grateful for the expressions of kindness from the brethren, and for the substantial evidences of their abiding interest in the BIBLICAL RECORDER. Nothing could have given us more pleasure than to have met the brethren face to face as we have so often done in the years that are gone, and to have joined with them in their efforts for the progress of the Lord's kingdom on the earth.

We regret very much to part with any of our subscribers. This we have shown by allowing many of them to get too far behind with their subscriptions. A number of our brethren will not receive their Recorder after this week. We send bills for the dues, and we hope the brethren will respond to the paper so long with at least [illegible]

THE NEW CATALOGUE OF WAKE FOREST COLLEGE

The catalogue of Wake Forest College for the session of 1892–'93 is before us. Bound neatly and securely in white, printed in invitingly clear type, systematically arranged, and admirably condensed, it presents a very attractive general appearance, and will compare favorably with any similar college publication.

Its decided improvement over former Wake Forest College catalogues is indeed an earnest of the marked progress of that institution during the past year. Among the many improvements in the curriculum, we note that the standard of requirements for admission has been raised to a considerably higher plane. Hereafter the candidate for admission will be required to show a "fair knowledge of grammar, orthography, punctuation, sentence-analysis, and the ability to write correctly and readily a short composition upon an assigned subject." This progress should be welcomed by every one. It is too often the case in our Southern institutions of learning that students enter, gain a fair knowledge of the classics, and graduate with only a textual knowledge of the English language. For entrance into the schools of Latin and Greek a fair knowledge of the forms and the general principles of syntax, and a thorough acquaintance with two books of Cæsar's Gallic War and one book of Xenophon's Anabasis are required. "The average student will require not less than two years of careful study to make the needed preparation." In addition, the applicant for admission to the School of Biology and Geology is required to show an acquaintance with the elementary principles of any one of the subjects of Botany, Physiology, Physical Geography, and Geology. While there is absolutely no preparatory department in the College, the Faculty have decided that it is advisable to arrange so that in special cases this preparatory work may be done at the College under the direction of a Professor.

SCHOOLS OF ENGLISH AND MODERN LANGUAGES.

In this School most important improvements have been made. The course will cover a period of four years instead of two as heretofore. A course of two hours a week for one year in General English will be required for graduation in any school. Rhetoric will be taught three hours a week hereafter instead of one, and English Literature three hours a week instead of two. The course in "Old and Middle English" has been made more extensive and will require three recitations a week instead of two as heretofore.

The School of Modern Languages, formerly one of the strongest in the South, has been considerably broadened. In addition to an acquaintance with the best of the French and German writers, special instruction in the Lyric Poetry of those languages will be given.

THE SCIENCES.

The department of Physics and Astronomy has been well equipped, and hereafter the pursuit of these branches will be largely practical. Applied Mathematics and Astronomy will each embrace a full year's work of three hours a week, instead of only five months as formerly. In this branch special lectures and practical work will be given in Civil Engineering and Road-making. This shows a tendency towards practicality which, we believe, has been greatly neglected in this State.

To the School of Chemistry a special branch in "Applied Chemistry" has been added, in order that the student may learn the chemical principles and processes that are used in the more important arts and manufactures—another needed aim at practical work. Mineralogy will hereafter be taught in this department, much time being given to the practical work of identification of minerals and assaying.

The School formerly known as Natural History is now called the School of Biology and Geology. A course of four hours a week through one year will be required of all candidates for degrees. Physiology and Geology are made much more extensive, covering an entire year's work of three hours a week. A course in Special Biology of three hours a week through the year has also been added.

MORAL PHILOSOPHY.

In the School of Moral Philosophy an additional course in "History of Philosophy" has been added. This is the only department in the College in which especial attention is paid to theology. To quote from the Catalogue: "While the College is in no sense a school of theology, it is pervaded in all its appointments and work by a distinctively Christian atmosphere."

POLITICAL SCIENCE.

This School has been decidedly improved. Hereafter three distinct courses of two hours each per week through one year will be given, embracing General History, Political Economy, and Constitutional Government. In every way the course is raised to a higher plane.

AS TO DEGREES.

The degree of Bachelor of Arts will hereafter allow much more freedom in choice of studies, but at the same time will require more work than formerly. For Master of Arts at least one year's post-graduate work in the Latin and Greek Seminaries, which have lately been instituted, and English and Modern Languages, is required.

Withal, Wake Forest College has raised her standard to the high water-mark of Southern institutions, and with her unsurpassed Literary Societies, of which we could not say too much, her Library, one of the best for College work that we know of, her Reading-room, unexcelled in the South, her popular department of Physical Culture, her special course in Constitutional Law, her school preparatory to the study of Medicine, her rapidly increasing endowment, easily takes rank second to no institution in the State, and is well worthy of the support of the Baptist denomination in North Carolina.

THE CHOWAN ASSOCIATION.

This Association met last week in Plymouth, and was organized by electing E. F. Aydlett moderator, and T. J. Riddick clerk. There was a good representation present, and brethren who have for a great number of years been attending the meetings of this body thought the spirit and enthusiasm of the meeting never better. All pledges for last year were paid, and a large portion of the churches will increase their contributions during the ensuing year. The reports of the various committees, as well as the speeches, made by different brethren were received with great satisfaction by the body. The satisfaction which the report on State Missions caused was specially marked. The statements by the Corresponding Secretary that more had been given by the churches in the State than ever before in the history of our work, and that all the missionaries had been paid off for the work of last year, was to many a surprise, and served as a sort of stimulant for all the exercises which followed.

Bro. McLeod from Washington was present and gave an account of his work. He realizes the true status of the situation, and is now earnestly beginning the work which the brethren have no doubt he will be able to accomplish.

Sickness in his family prevented Bro. W. V. Savage reaching the Association till Wednesday. He made a strong and feeling speech in the interest of the State Mission work in Tyrrell county where he is located.

The Association regretted that Brother Gwaltney had so little time to present the work of the Board of Education. It was not, however, for want of any interest which they felt in this department of our work. And while Bro. Gwaltney had but little time to speak, yet the churches are thoroughly interested in his work, and the pastors will keep this work well before their people.

The brethren in this section of the State are, as they have been for years, keenly alive to everything which pertains to the interest of Chowan Institute. The report, as well as the speech of President Brewer, was replete with the evidences of the growing prosperity and increased usefulness of this splendid institution of learning.

Dr. Taylor, President of Wake Forest College, made one of his best speeches on general education. If space allowed I would feel great pleasure in reproducing largely his line of thought. No more interesting or profitable pamphlet could be circulated among our people than the practical thoughts which Dr. Taylor gave out in this speech before the Chowan Association.

Dr. Blackwell, in the absence of the appointee, preached the introductory sermon on Tuesday night. Dr. Blackwell is a smooth, interesting and logical speaker. His theme was the tracing of sin in its different stages in the human life and then the turning away from the same. The Doctor, who was a stranger to many present, made a fine impression as a preacher and useful brother in all of our denominational work.

The report on periodicals, read by Bro. C. S. Vann, was in itself suggestive, and most appropriate. The writer of the report and Rev. J. B. Boone made good speeches on this subject, also Rev. E. J. Edwards spoke in the interest of Charity and Children.

Rev. C. C. Newton added interest to the meeting by some good talks on Home Missions and missions in Africa. Bro. Newton is a man of fine judgment, and is thoroughly consecrated to his work. His presence here will, we think, add to the interest of his work in Africa.

I am sorry I was not permitted to hear Bro. Mills in behalf of the Orphange, and sorry to hear that the collection was so small. Money is scarce and the Association did not seem to favor the taking of collections.

Dr. Hufham was in one of his best moods, especially when he succeeded in getting the last dollar he asked for in order to secure the completion of his work in Tarboro. Nothing, not even the mosquitoes, seemed to disturb his tranquility after he had accomplished that for which he has so earnestly worked.

The Chowan Association was never better entertained than it was by Bro. Tuttle and his brethren and friends in Plymouth. A number of the brethren put us under obligations for their efforts in behalf of the BIBLICAL RECORDER. J. C. C.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. J. T. Stephens, formerly of Sweet Water, N. C., is now at Anthony, Kansas.

....We acknowledge receipt of an invitation to the closing exercises of Apex High School, which takes place May 29th.

....Rev. Dr. J. W. Carter of Raleigh delivers the address before the Kinsey Female Seminary, La Grange, Wednesday, May 31.

....At night, on May 22d, a cyclone struck the S. B. T. Seminary, doing slight damage to the building, but no person was injured.

....We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation to attend the Anniversary Exercises of Roanoke Female College, Danville, Va., June 5, 6, 1893.

....Rev. W. H. Beamer has accepted the pastoral care of the church at Westfield, Surry county, and will enter upon his work there the third Sunday in June.

....Some men who wish to appear wise, write and speak at great length about things they know very little about.—Rev. C. C. Newton at the Chowan Association.

.....There will be a called meeting of the Baptist Historical Society at some time during the commencement at Wake Forest for the transaction of some special business.

....The closing exercises of the South West Virginia Institute, Bristol, Va., will take place June 4th, 5th and 6th, 1893. We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation to attend.

....On Sunday morning last three persons were received into the Fayetteville Street Baptist church, Raleigh, by experience. Ten were baptized, and others are awating the ordinance.

....Leaksville church has had twenty-seven additions by baptism and seven by letter since February. The Sunday school has increased from fifty to one hundred and seventy scholars.

....Rev. Dr. H. W. Battle of the First Baptist church of Petersburg, Va., is to deliver the baccalaureate sermon at Raleigh, N. C., June 14th, before the State Agricultural and Mechanical College.

....Rev. J. B. Richardson filled his pulpit at the Baptist church here last Sunday morning and night. At the morning service two members were added by baptism and four at night.—Leaksville Herald.

....Our most excellent friend, Mrs. A. J. Griffith and her son, Harry, lately presented the Baptist church at Ruffin with a bell which cost $50. Under the circumstances, this is an unusually liberal gift.—Webster's Weekly.

....The meeting at the Baptist church is still in progress, with increased interest. A number of persons have made professions, and there are many others who are becoming much interested. The pastor is being assisted by Rev. L. E. Thompson.—Louisburg Times.

... Rev. J. J. Hall, D. D., preached two doctrinal sermons to his people recently, reviewing the history of the Baptists, the persecutions they have received, their influence upon religious and political thought, and their distinctive doctrines. The sermons were greatly appreciated by his people.

....Some one shot two pistol balls into the house of Bro. E. K. Proctor, Jr., at Lumberton, Thursday night week, narrowly missing the sleeping form of his little child. The cowardly outrage was perpetrated it is thought by whisky men, as Bro. Proctor has lead the fight against the whisky traffic in his county.

....The revival services at the Baptist church, conducted by Rev. T. J. Taylor of Warrenton, came to a close last night. They have been of unusual interest and value. The sermons from night to night have been of a very high order of gospel preaching and there are indications of genuine spiritual benefit therefrom in the community. As a direct result there have been twenty-four professions.—Kinston Free Press of May 25.

....The editor of the So. Chris. Advocate recently spent a week in Kansas, and says: "I made particular inquiry, both of gentlemen and ladies, of the practical working of woman's suffrage throughout Kansas. From every source I received the information that, as a rule, the better class of women do not vote at all, but that the lower class of whites, and the negro women with scarcely an exception, are always ready to exercise this function of citizenship. As a reformatory measure, therefore, woman's suffrage is pronounced a great failure, even in Kansas; but as a political movement, furnishing the unprincipled office-seeker with a large class of pliant and venal voters, it is a great success. The politicians will, therefore, see to it that the right of suffrage is never denied the dear Bridgets and Nancys of the petticoat persuasion."

....Rev. Mr. Lamberth continues to preach in the Baptist church twice a day. His sermons are fine and all pronounce him a preacher of great power. A number of conversions have already blessed the work and many more are interested.—Scotland Neck Democrat.

....Bro. T. C. Walker writes from Randleman May 23d as follows: "Rev. S. F. Conrad has just concluded at this place a most glorious meeting. The number of converts is not so noticeable as the soundness and apparent genuineness of the Spirit. Bro. Conrad preaches in demonstration of the Spirit and with power. It comes from the heart and reaches the heart. Oh, for more reapers like him for the ripening harvest. By his stay among us many souls have been converted, the church edified and strengthened, and the cause of the blessed Master advanced."

....Rev. C. W. Blanchard, East Durham, May 26th, 1893, writes: "We closed a few weeks ago one of the best meetings we have had with this church (East Durham). We have given the right hand of fellowship to more than twenty members, and more follow at nearly every meeting.——The infant child (one week old) of Mr. E. D. Yates of Cary died on the morning of the 19th inst. Our sympathy extends to the bereaved father and mother.——We are arranging to organize a Local Alumni Association of Wake Forest College in the Mt. Zion Association in the near future."

....Rev. Baylus Cade who was here on a visit, was called to Richmond on Monday evening by a telegram which brought the sad news that his little baby boy—Clinton Malone—was dead. The remains were brought to Louisburg for interment on Wednesday evening, accompanied by Mr. Cade, his wife and two of his children. They were met at the train by a number of friends and accompanied to the cemetery where the funeral services took place, conducted by Rev. W. B. Morton, pastor of the Baptist church. The bereaved have our sympathies.—Louisburg Times, May 26.

....We note that Mr. J. D. Rockefeller has given an additional $150,000 to the University of Chicago. We think a favorable impression was made on the brethren of the Southern Baptist Convention in regard to this great institution of learning. And while we may not at this time in its history endorse all of its plans for the future, yet we congratulate Dr. Harper, the president, and the friends of this great enterprise on the phenomenal success they have had thus far. We are especially pleased with the good sense which they have shown in keeping separate the college and university departments of the institution.

....Those who have been attending the protracted meeting in progress at the Baptist church this week have listened to some of the best gospel preaching that has ever been given to the people of High Point. Rev. C. A. G. Thomas of Greensboro, the brother who has been doing the preaching is a consecrated Christian worker and we have never known a minister who could put the truth any plainer and with as much power. He studies the needs of the people individually and collectively and feeds each one according to his or her needs. The congregations have been large and some interest has been manifested by the unconverted there being two professions up to last night.—The Enterprise, May 26.

State Missions.

All balances due our missionaries in the State department on last year's work have been paid, and this, too, with interest at eight per cent. per annum from Jan. 1st, 1893.

These balances on the year ending Nov. 1st, 1892, were not so large, and were paid sooner than the balances paid off last May and June for the year ending Nov. 1st, 1891.

The following, taken from the Treasurer's books, will show the amounts received and acknowledged by the Treasurer in the RECORDER for

State Missions,	June 1st, 1892....	$1,519.53
" "	June 1st, 1893....	2,633.50

Up to last year the Convention was held in November, but last year in December, so that with one month less time this year in which to make collections, and with an unusual winter which prevented many of the congregations from meeting for months, more has been received for State Missions and acknowledged in RECORDER by the Treasurer this year than was received last year.

It should be remembered, however, that very little has been paid to our missionaries on this year's work, and many of them are in need and ought to be paid. This is now the time to begin collections in all of the churches for State Missions.

Will not the pastors please see to it that these collections are made as early and as large as possible, and forwarded at once to the Treasurer?

Let no one suppose that because I do not put before the public pitiful statements about the trials and sufferings of our missionaries, I am, therefore, not in the deepest sympathy with these struggling and devoted men. I do not believe such statements can be a substantial foundation for any department of mission work. Let us all be thankful that we are doing so much better in State Missions this year than ever before, and see to it, as best we can, that these men on the mission fields, in our own State, are paid the small amounts promised them by the Board as promptly as possible.

Ministers' Relief Board.

I recently had published, in the RECORDER, a letter from an aged and needy Baptist minister, addressed to me, and asking for aid from our Board. The brother that wrote it, is one of our beneficiaries, and it had been so long since we had made him a remittance, that he felt constrained to ask for help before we made the next appropriation to him, and to the others whose names stand on our list, I was hopeful enough to believe that such a letter, from such a man, would move the hearts of our people and that we would soon have a good many responses from brethren and sisters in different parts of the State. One sister enclosed a contribution to me, (better send to our Treasurer, T. E. Cheek or J. D. Boushall,) and there have been a few responses noted in the RECORDER, in all not amounting, since that letter was published, to more than $25.00.

This state of things is indeed depressing, but what can the Board do? The Convention has asked our churches to contribute to this work regularly as to any other claiming our attention. I have sent personal letters to many of the leading pastors of the State; I have offered to visit any church, in the interest of our Board, if the pastor would hint the propriety of my coming; I have published letters from some of the old veterans in Christ's army, that seemed to me would touch any heart; and yet, there seems to be a strange indifference among our people as to supplying the wants of the aged men and women we are aiding. We honestly fear that many of our pastors have failed to inform themselves, or interest themselves, in this work. One reason why I think so, is to be found in such letters as this, addressed to one of the prominent ministers of our State, and forwarded by him to me. I am sure I betray no confidence in publishing it. It was written by a worthy layman whose pastor ought to have informed him:

"———— ————, April 17, 1893.

Rev. ————, Raleigh, N. C.

Dear Bro:—Old Bro. S————, whom you know, is hopelessly afflicted, and in needy circumstances, having worn himself out largely in the ministry, with almost no remuneration, wishes to obtain some help from the Ministers' Relief Board, and does not know to whom to write. Will you please inform me in the interest of an old worn-out afflicted minister? Please write at once.

Yours in brotherly love,

Blanks were promptly forwarded to this old brother; and we are expecting every day that his papers will be returned properly endorsed, when we will promptly send aid if we have the funds. By the way, why are the dear brethren so slow about returning the papers of these applicants for aid? Please be prompt, if you are willing to endorse. The brother that sent me the above letter, wrote at the bottom of the page, over his signature, "See Ezra 10: 4." On turning to Ezra 10:4, I find these encouraging words, "Arise for this matter belongeth to thee; we also will be with thee; be of good courage and do it." I thank the brother for these words; they sound like a trumpet blast. I have arisen; the Board is awake; oh that our people would say by their acts "we also will be with thee; be of good courage, and do it."

At the last meeting of the Board, we received another worthy man among our beneficiaries; others are applying. Brethren and sisters, we wish to do this work; will you help us, and help us now? We have not the funds to meet the wants of our beneficiaries. If the brethren need our address see the RECORDER. Thanks to the RECORDER for publishing a list of the Boards of Convention.

C. A. WOODSON, Cor. Sec.

Three Remarks.

1. I am truly grateful to Dr. Durham for giving me the privilege of reading my own obituary in the last issue of the RECORDER. His word "finally" gives great comfort to me; for now he can neither preach my funeral, nor "add a few further remarks," when I go "where the wicked cease from troubling." And now at last

"There is peace between the Ogilwaye
And the tribe of the Dacotahs."

2. I have never desired to be consistent. I wish to make each day an improvement on that which went before it. Consistency is called a jewel; but I am not fond of jewelry.

3. All friends of the Orphanage have a standing invitation to come at any time and see it for themselves. Improvements are constantly going on. The annual meeting occurs July 26, and a good sermon, as well as an eloquent address may be expected.

J. H. MILLS.

Meeting at Roberdel.

Dear Recorder:—Last night I closed a good meeting at Roberdel, Peedee Association. Bro. T. S. Wright preached to us a week. He is evidently one of the most practical preachers I ever heard. His preaching God's word with so much spiritual power and pathos captured my people and all who heard him will ever be proud to welcome him to their homes and hearts.

Not less than twenty professed faith in Jesus. Will baptize a goodly number soon.

Sincerely, I. S. BOYLES.

Rockingham, N. C., May 20, 1893.

Read the advertisement of the Mechanics and Investors' Union for Savings and Loans, which has just been organized in this city. The names of the gentlemen who compose the directors of this company are a guarantee of the merits of the interest they represent. Mr. Allen, the Secretary, is a man of fine business qualities, and we take pleasure in commending him to our readers and the citizens of our State.

Antioch Church and Death's Doings Among its Members.

This church was organized in June, 1889, under the ministry of Rev. W. B. Knight, a missionary of the State Board, and who at that time labored in the northern part of the Eastern Association. Before Bro. Knight came into these parts there had been very little preaching by Baptists for a long time, and this unoccupied territory extended from Neuse to the Tar river, and from Goldsboro to the Sound.

More than a generation ago there were some Baptist churches in Pitt county. Among them may be mentioned Handcocks and Red Banks. Some of the members of Handcocks church are still living. These, with a few others, were more than eleven years ago organized into what is now known as Antioch Baptist church. This church stands about three miles from the old Handcocks church (which fell into the hands of the Hardshells and since has died) and was organized with about fifteen members. They were weak numerically, and were not strong financially. However, they managed to build a house in which to worship. This house was opened for service in the fall of '89, and during that same fall a Sunday-school was organized and a prayer meeting started. In these, there has been no stop since their beginning. During the last eleven years there has not, I am sure, been eleven Wednesday nights upon which there has not been prayer meeting in this church. The Sunday-school has never failed to meet, unless it was raining or snowing very hard at the hour of meeting.

During Dr. Knight's (for he was an M. D.) ministry down here a work of grace seemed to be continually going on, for at almost every meeting (which was monthly) some one would make a profession of faith and unite with the church. And the brethren seemed to have everything quiet and peaceful among themselves. Soon, however, opposition of various kinds sprang up, and the little church did well to maintain its strength and standing for a year or two.

Dr. Knight's health failed, and the church was without a pastor. Arrangements were made, and the services of Rev. Thos. Carrick, who then lived in Greenville, N. C., were secured, and he preached for the church on Saturday and Saturday night, once a month, for more than a year I think. During his ministry only a few united with the church, but this was no fault of his. People would come to hear the gospel preached, but only one now and then would act upon the truth.

Rev. W. J. Fulford succeeded Bro. Carrick to the pastorate of this church, and did faithful preaching and earnest work among the people. The gospel was being preached, and the people were being indoctrinated, and now and then one would accept the truth and unite with the church.

Rev. C. S. Cashwell was the next shepherd of this flock. He, like his predecessor, did faithful preaching, the effects of which eternity alone will reveal.

During the ministry of these faithful men of God the truth was being planted in all this community. But visible results were not very numerous.

Beginning with the last year of Bro. Cashwell's pastorate, and for three years after, this scribe was not associated with this church, and so is not familiar with its history during those years.

However, Bro. Cashwell was followed by Rev. T. J. Baker, and he served the church as pastor awhile. The church was increasing numerically all the while, but very slow.

More than two years ago Rev. A. D. Hunter was called to the pastorate of this church to succeed Rev. Mr. Baker. Bro. Hunter lived in Greenville, and was more closely identified with the members of the church than any of its former pastors. During his pastorate of two years about twenty were added to the membership.

Two branch Sunday-schools were organized and are now being operated with some degree of success. Once-a-month preaching is being kept up at each of the points where these schools were organized, and the congregations are good and listen attentively, generally. At one of these points—Hopewell—a meeting was held last November, and eight or nine professed faith in Christ, and the work still goes on with bright prospects for the future.

Antioch is the mother of a preacher, Rev. J. W. Nobles, who is now preaching in Onslow and Carteret counties. For two years this brother did some good preaching in this part of Pitt county.

At Ayden, the point where our other branch school was organized, largely through the instrumentality of Bro. Nobles a church was organized more than a year ago. The Sunday-school at this place numbers about seventy-five. A house of worship is in course of erection there. It is not completed yet, but is being used for worship.

The work at Antioch, Ayden and Hopewell is moving, and the interest deepening all the while.

The brethren ought not to faint, for "in due time they shall reap."

This little church at Antioch is yearly dividing more than $50 between the different objects of the Convention. Now I am not going to say that the brethren here have done all that they might have done, for I do not believe that any set of Christians have ever done all that they might have done for the cause of Christ.

Rev. J. W. Nobles, whose name is mentioned above, is the first preacher to go out from this church; but it is hoped that God will call other young men into the ministry from its membership. There are some who are already thinking seriously about the matter. It is the Lord's work, and he must find the men and prepare them to do. May the Lord send more of his own ministers down here, for "the field is already white unto the harvest."

among the members. For almost eleven years there was not a death in this church. The work went on, and some were added to the church from time to time, without the loss of any by death. But during the last two months two of our number have been called away. The first of these—Miss Emma Jackson—was a young lady of about twenty summers. She united with the church in August, 1891, during a protracted meeting held by the pastor, Rev. A. D. Hunter. For some years previous to her conversion she had been a member of the Sunday-school. The work of grace in her heart seemed to have been thorough, and the effects of it were seen in her daily life. She hardly ever failed to be at church when any kind of meeting was held. After her conversion she was more diligent in searching the word, and would not read trashy literature. She was more earnest about her Sunday-school lessons, and tried to get the main truths and leading thoughts out of each lesson. Both parents and seven brothers survive her. She was the only daughter, and is sadly missed by every member of the family, especially the dear mother. The community, Sunday-school and church have all lost one whom we hoped would have been spared for greater usefulness. She was taken away when to us it seemed she was most needed. But the Lord only came into his garden to pluck a flower, and he took one of the fairest. Just as the personal traits of Christian character were beginning to be more richly seasoned by sanctifying grace, the Master called and she went, to become a jewel in his crown. A lamb has been taken to the green pastures, fertile plains, gladdening streams, living fountains, and glory-bedecked mansions of paradise.

God does not drive, but he leads. Strange ways of love, you say. It is better that our sister is gone. The other members of the church have felt a more profound need of living nearer to their Saviour, and of being more diligent lest he call them when they are not aware. Her departure is a reminder to us all, that we too must follow on soon. And then, while their bereavement is sore and grievous, her mother and other loved ones are saved from a life of trouble and anxious care, so far as dear Emma is concerned, while she is free from the sins and troubles of the world. It could have been so much worse had she not been prepared to die. She had given her heart to the Lord, and expressed herself as being willing to go when he called.

Soon after the death of Sister Jackson, another of the lady members of our church was called from the sorrows and troubles of earth to the joys and glories of heaven. This was Miss Sarah R. Harper. She was about twenty-six years old, and had been a member of the church about four years. She died on April 15th, 1893. Thus Antioch's number is beginning to decrease.

This is a brief outline of the history and workings of Antioch Baptist church in Pitt county, N. C., and of death's doings among its members. R. D. CARROLL.

Sunday-school Board of the S. B. Convention.

Dear Bro. Editor:—If there lingered in the minds of any of the brethren doubts as to the wisdom of the Convention in establishing its Sunday-school Board two years ago, all such doubts must have vanished when they heard the report of the Board made to the Convention, and listened to the addresses of Drs. Kerfoot and Ellis on that report.

If you will allow me, I will quote a few passages from the report of the Committee of the Convention, to which was referred the report of the Board.

Under the head of "A Business Enterprise," that report says: "The report of the Board shows that as a business enterprise, more has been realized during this the first entire year of its operation than its most sanguine friends could have expected. It has done a business of more than $40,000." It has made "a donation of $1,000 worth of literature to needy schools, and a contribution of over $3,000 in money to the cause of missions (Sunday-school missions) within the bounds of the Convention." Of the literature of the Board, the Committee says: "In variety and worth it has been equal to any and all reasonable demands," and "it is greatly to be hoped that the schools within our bounds can see their way clear more and more to use the literature of our own Board, especially since by so doing they will put it in the power of the Board greatly to enlarge its work and usefulness."

As an agency "for fostering and strengthening the Sunday-school interest, and thereby all other denominational interests," the Committee thinks that a wide open door is before the Board for the doing of a great work. That there is serious need for some work in this direction, and a great deal of it at that, no one can doubt who has ever looked into the Sunday-school statistics of our denomination. "Hardly more than half the churches within our bounds have Sunday-schools, and many existing schools are sadly in need of strengthening." As nearly as it has been possible to find out, this expresses the truth in regard to our churches. This Board can, to say the least, be a great helper in the way of improving such a condition of things. The Committee says: "The motto of the Board should be 'A Sunday-school in every church; the best possible Sunday-school in every church." But even if this could be attained, the mere fact that there was a Sunday-school in every church would fail to express the full value of the work to be done by the Sunday-school Board, for it must be remembered that everything done for Sunday-schools, is something done for every kind of Christian enterprise."

The Committee suggests that "if the Sunday-school Board has such large possibilities for usefulness, there would seem to be no good reason why some plan should not be devised by which direct contributions may be realized for this work." This suggestion is made in connection with the idea of "Children's Day"; but that is a thing to be considered in the future. I may say that the Board is going to lend its assistance to the Woman's Missionary Union in Baltimore, in getting up a Children's Day for Home and Foreign Missions, some time during the fall.

It is the earnest desire of every member of our Board that this body shall be, in its work and influence, helpful in every department of religious work. This is our ambition; this shall be our effort.

Yours truly, T. P. BELL, Cor. Sec.

Baltimore Letter.

I received a letter from one of my friends in North Carolina recently, saying that he heard that I had left Baltimore, and accepted the First Baptist church of Chrisfield, Md.; and lest others of my friends should be under the same impression, I would like to say I am still at Broadway, and if the brethren and sisters continue to treat me in the future as well as they have done in the past, I don't know when I shall leave the Monumental City of a half million of people, many of whom belong to the class composing the salt of the earth.

This is my third year with the Broadway church, and on last Sabbath I gave the hand of fellowship to nine, and at night I baptized two others, making 112 who have been added to the church since I became pastor, April 1st, 1891. Peace and harmony pervade the entire membership, and it is a joy to be with such good people—how they delight in making their pastor and family happy by "pounding with presents."

One day last week my wife and I had been married twenty years by that now sainted, lovely old brother, Rev. Josiah Bailey of Greensville county, Virginia, and my people said we should have a china wedding, and that night the china came, and it kept coming until we had enough to last us forty years unless some of our half dozen children break them into pieces, as they often do our other crockery.

With all the kindness and friends I have here, I still love to think of the dear Old North State, and the many warm friends I still have there. It was my privilege to preach in six towns in North Carolina—Columbia, Creswell, Plymouth, Hertford, Roper City and South Mills, and I can bear testimony now that, as a whole, these churches are as consecrated, God-fearing, God-loving and God-serving, as the churches of larger towns with trained choirs, fine organs, cornets, timbrel and harps.

Doubtless the many friends of Capt. John H. Bogart of Franklin, Va., who died here at the City Hospital, will be deeply grieved to hear he is no more among the living. He was a man of sterling worth and had a host of friends in North Carolina. He came here two weeks ago and underwent an operation on the 14th, and since that time grew weaker and weaker, and yesterday breathed his last. His wife was summoned to his bedside a few hours prior to his death. While her grief was extremely great, yet she said there was much to comfort. He had been one of the best of husbands, and before dying, he repeated "Jesus, lover of my soul." He entered the 12th Virginia regiment at eighteen years of age and was soon promoted to a captaincy for his bravery as a soldier, and led his company with Gen. Lee to Appomattox C. H. After the surrender, he located at Franklin, Va., and became the superintendent of the Albemarle Steam Navigation Company, which position he held until his death on yesterday. While he was never an applicant for public office, the people of Southampton county, Va., sent him as their honored representative to the Virginia Legislature several years. His remains left Baltimore, accompanied by Mrs. Bogart, her children, Bro. and Dr. Bryant, this evening for Franklin, and will be buried there to-morrow. R. B. COLLIER.

Liberty Union—The Randleman Revival.

Dear Recorder:—The Liberty Union Meeting that met with the Randleman church on Friday before the fifth Sunday in April was a grand success. Every preacher in the Association was present, and many others. The queries were ably discussed. The preaching was splendid; everybody enjoyed it, and it gave our cause a good send off.

Monday Bro. Conrad came and preached ten days; and in spite of the rain and mud, we had a splendid meeting. Bro. Conrad did some of his best preaching. He left on Thursday.

The meeting continued until Sunday night. Sunday and Sunday night the house was packed. At the close of the meeting Sunday night, twenty or twenty-five stood up for prayer.

Thus closed one of the most successful meetings ever held in Randleman. I don't know how many conversions there were during the meeting; but eleven joined our church, and on last night I baptized them in the presence of a crowded house. Every one said it was the most beautiful baptism they ever witnessed. This makes nineteen baptisms since January and six by letter, making twenty-five.

Our cause is on a grand boom. At this time a great many persons here are seriously considering the question of following Christ in baptism.

The longer I live, the more convinced I am that if all the preachers in the world would preach the truth as it is in Jesus, and stand square on the Bible teachings, it would not be long until the world would be taken for Christ.

I shall hold meetings at Worthville, Central Falls and Liberty during the summer. I and wife expect to attend the commencement at Wake Forest.

To God be all the praise for his manifold blessings. G. M. WEAR.

Minutes.

The minutes of the Southern Baptist Convention held in Nashville, Tenn., May 12–16, 1893, are now in the Mission Room at Raleigh. These minutes are most valuable to all who wish to be informed about the work of the Southern Baptist Convention. The postage on each minute will be four cents. If you wish a copy, send us the four cents in stamps, or, if you wish a number for distribution, order them by Express, and you shall have them. C. DURHAM, Cor. Sec.

Walnut Cove and Ruffin.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I have held a protracted meeting at each one of these places this spring. I had Bro. O. L. Stringfield with me at Ruffin from Sunday until Thursday night following the third Sunday in April. Bro. Stringfield is a brother who has peculiar methods of his own. He did some of the best preaching I ever heard, and the meeting was honored by the Lord. As a result of the meeting, five have been baptized, and two others approved for the ordinance, one of which will probably not materialize. Ruffin is a promising field, but the work is peculiarly hard. There are many dead-head Christians in the community who are in collusion with whiskey and the Devil, which makes the work hard as to reaching the unsaved.

Bro. Tucker, who is our Sunday-school superintendent and an earnest, active Christian, has had to submit to public abuse on different occasions, growing out of our work. I had my first experience at my last appointment of taking abuse publicly and being called hard names, because of my efforts to maintain order in time of worship. The Devil seems to have arrayed all of his imps against us. The community is cursed by a number of scalawags and ruffians, who think they can bully and overawe us in our work, but I am determined to preserve order if there is any law to do it. They may kill me, but they shall not deter me from my work.

It was very touching to my heart soon after I was publicly assailed when a highly esteemed lady of another denomination pointed to her Bible and said, "I knelt with my face upon my Bible and prayed for you that God might protect you, for I knew you were going to be attacked." I think the best people of the community will stand with me, and I here ask all who love the truth to pray for me that God may maintain the right and that his cause may triumph over every foe at Ruffin. With God and 300,000 Baptists in the State behind me, and thousands of other Christians who believe in law and order, I shall try to hold up the banner of God's truth in the face of every foe.

At Walnut Cove I have had also a hard battle with the whiskey devil and dead head Christians, and our work here is also on the up grade. I had Bro. Haymore with me five days, following the first Sunday in April. We had several converts, and the church was very much revived. Bro. Haymore is my old ally in the work, and has done as much for the Baptist cause as any man in this part of the State. Eternity alone will reveal the good work he has done over many counties in this section. Our Sunday school now numbers about one hundred.

I have a debt on the two churches of about $1,500, which hangs as a heavy weight upon me. I am hoping to get out this year. More anon. Fraternally,

S. F. CONRAD.

Messrs. Scott and Bowne, Manufacturing Chemists, have removed from 132, South Fifth-Avenue, New York City, to their new building, corner New Chambers, Rose and Pearl Streets. The new Scott and Bowne building is twelve stories high and is said to be the best structure of its kind in the city. This splendidly equipped building is the direct result of the public appreciation of Scott's Emulsion. While the proprietors naturally think that their great success would not have been possible unless Scott's Emulsion possessed superior merit, they do not underestimate the value of advertising and would suggest to every business man that in advertising he finds the best and quickest way to public favor. The new home of Scott's Emulsion undoubtedly testifies to the value of advertising a praiseworthy preparation.

The Sunday-school Board of the Southern Baptist Convention has an attractive advertisement in this paper. Read it, and you will find that the Board offers to the Sunday-schools of the South a series of Sunday-school helps specially adapted to their needs. The Sunday-school lesson helps of the American Baptist Publication Society are having a remarkable circulation. The Society publishes fourteen periodicals adapted to six grades. See advertisement elsewhere in this paper.

Baptists South and North.

They are alike, Baptists. They hold to the text, "One Lord, one faith, one baptism." Bishop Fitzgerald on being introduced to our Southern brethren the other day said that he could go with them (the Baptists) "even to the margin of the river," but Baptists South and North can go and will go hand in hand through the gates of everlasting day. When a Southern pastor settles in the North he at once affiliates with the societies which hold their anniversaries together each May, and does this at once, and without reserve; and when a Northern pastor settles in the South he is found in the convention of the South with the same spirit of loyalty that characterized him when on the floor of the Northern convention. Thank God we have the same Lord, the same faith, the same baptism, the same aim and purpose, the same hope and work.

The writer could say much more of our oneness, and say it with gratitude, love, and with denominational self respect which borders upon pride, but it is of some few contrasts of methods of organization and of manners that we speak now. These contrasts are not written in a critical spirit, but with love and admiration alike for North and South, believing that we are indeed "one in Christ Jesus."

The study of these contrasts has a charm and is suggestive. We can learn much of each other; certainly the North can learn of the South. But it is our aim to call attention only to the facts of contrast without suggesting the lessons. A few only are given. They could be multiplied.

The Southern Convention is an organization of boards, the Northern is a meeting of societies. In the South there are three boards and one convention, in the North three societies, and hence three conventions in one. The South has one presiding officer; the North one for each society, or three in all. The South is made up of delegates, the North of delegates, life members and yearly members. That body is deliberative and hears patiently from the rank and file from the floor; at the North there is a regular program with prepared addresses and less extemporaneous discussion. The convention there controls the boards, here the societies are permitted to more largely direct or suggest the methods of procedure.

The Southern Convention has the larger constituency, the North raises much more money. The South has its Powell of Mexico, and its Diaz of Cuba; the North its Clough of India, and its Ashmore of China. The Southern gives the widest and freest and fullest entertainment to all its delegates in the homes of the people; in the North reduced rates are obtained at the hotels. At the South the social spirit abounds; in the North it is business, business. Their meetings call out the rank and file of the ministry, the anniversaries rather a more representative class. South, in business, only men are seen on the floor of delegates; with us women vote as well as men. Women never address the Southern convention; at North they may speak and pray. Southern women hold separate meetings at which the men may not come. Our women hold very few secret meetings. In the South, every visitor, however humble, or of whatever color, is introduced in name, asked to rise, and is greeted by the Convention standing; at the North, visitors are asked to select some one to address the Convention a few words for all. Applause is out of order there, and if it bubbles up, it is quickly suppressed; here, it is often prolonged and tremendous. They are more parliamentary, we more rapid. Their nominations are made from the floor with eulogies and speeches; ours are presented by a committee on nominations.

These contrasts might be pressed even further, as for instance, as to habits, mannerisms, expressions. They talk of the authority of the New Testament; our people are more inclined to speak of the Bible. They are never troubled with so-called higher criticism; we hear of it once or twice at least in every Convention. Down there you find the old, old hymns still abound, here we hear more new songs. Among our brethren of the sunny land there are many pastors who do not smoke; with us there are a few who do. There the habit is slowly but surely waning; here it is slowly increasing, at least so it seems to one who travels.

And does the reader look up and ask which is best? Both, both, we answer. The Southern Convention is the best—for the South. Our great societies—the Missionary Union, the Home Mission Society, and the Publication Society—are best for us. We do not write of the National Baptist Education Society as that represents both North and South.—Indiana Baptist.

The Recorder—Dr. Wayland's Sermon, &c.

Dear Editor:—Perhaps no class of your readers appreciate the RECORDER so much as those who have removed from the State. It comes as a welcome weekly message from loved ones. Usually I devour first the "Personal and Other Items" column. But this week I did not. My eye first fell on the second installment of Dr. Wayland's sermon. I at once read it, and then re-read it. He has always with me stood first as a writer of good English. He selects just the right words, and arranges them just in the right order. His sentences, thus formed, are then spoken so as to carry conviction to the heart of the reader. I know no better model for preachers. Allow me to thank Dr. Taylor for this sermon. The fit conclusion of this discussion of the "call to the ministry" of the young brethren will be hailed with joy. Some may say Dr. Wayland never "went to the mourners' bench." But after all, he clearly makes his point, and fitly closes the argument in the case. The sermon throws a flood of light on this much discussed subject. He lifts the veil and removes the mystic film that has so confused the minds of many. I am satisfied, and again thank you for it.

In three weeks more my school work will end here—end, possibly, never to begin again. I feel very much impressed to devote the remainder of my life to the pastorate.

I am preaching to three small country churches, but they cannot give me adequate support. Thus I may return to North Carolina, or I may take work in this State. "He leadeth me." Certainly I wish it to be so.

I hope to see you in July. Maynard is dead. Pace is dead, and other dear ones are gone. How sad that I shall see their faces no more. J. M. WHITE.

Secret Organizations.

Dear Recorder,—I feel very much impressed to say a few words through your columns. Heretofore I have been contented to wait for others to speak for me. To-day I feel that danger stares us in the face. It may be that it has appeared to me in a clearer light than to others; though if I be mistaken in the manner in which I view the state of the church and society to-day, I want the true light turned on, and am open for correction. I will not fight for or advocate the wrong if I know it. My whole desire is to see right and to do right.

I find in my judgment, while society seems to be at its highest, and while we hear it proclaimed almost daily that the people are growing better, I am surrounded with what I conceive to be communists and anarchists, who seem to be well organized and are daily at work it seems through secret orders which have been let to grow until they are mighty giants, and have, I fear sapped the very foundations of the true church of Christ, on which rest all civil liberty and every institution for the good of society. On this foundation rests the right of free government, and guarantees freedom of the worship of the holy and righteous God. Am I mistaken in this revelation? Have I caught on to the wrong idea? If so, I pray that the brethren, by the help of God through Christ Jesus our Lord, may help me to see right. If I am not blinded, brethren, we are drawing near the whirlpool of destruction. Let us wake up now, or it may be too late to save many of our dear brethren and our beloved church of Christ. Our prayers and earnest co-operation are necessary now in this matter. Let your name be Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, or matters not what, if you are a child of God, wake up! The enemy is at the door in stronger array than ever before in the history of this great country. Let us move in concert, that the evil one may be checked, and the tremendous hold he has upon many of the brethren and the visible church may be broken. The truth, brethren, as I view it, is, that secret organizations are gotten up by the evil one to overthrow the church of Christ. This evil teaching is leading our brethren away from the truth by the power the evil one has over them in these secret organizations. They are led captive at his will. Their teaching is not of the truth, and the Bible is not the foundation in its true light. It is the spirit of covetousness. This unholy doctrine has been driven into them by scientific communists and anarchists who go abroad free throughout our land teaching in secret. Many of our dear brethren are being led to believe this erroneous teaching, and are ready to laugh at us and say we are in the dark and they are right. Are they not now ripe for persecuting the true church and the true follower of Christ? It seems to me they are only waiting for orders from those who have them blinded and led captive. How far this unholy spirit will lead our bretren we can't tell. It is fearful now in the land. Some one may say that I am scared before I am hurt. That is the time to get scared if you are going to be. I can sincerely hope there is no good reason for my fears.

Brethren, by the will of God, through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and his teaching of the New Testament, his death, burial and resurrection, all of which we do believe, with his love shed abroad in the hearts of men, our forefathers were able to set up a government which has set an example before all nations, of individual power, of local self-government, by engrafting in our fundamental law of the land the right to worship God according to the dictates of our own consciences, the right of free speech, and the freedom of the press. But is not the devil with his great ingenuity about to step in and destroy those great bulwarks of liberty which were given by God to our forefathers and handed down to us? I must say it looks that way to me. Men moved by a rebellious spirit against God and truth can tear down nations when that spirit gets the predominancy, but they never will re establish a civilized republic.

Brethren, are we to set still and allow our brethren to be led astray by these evil ones, under cover of secret organization, which seems to-day, in my view of the matter, destructive to the true church, and say nothing? Or shall we buckle on the armor of the Lord and attact the great giant? Now, let us not tarry. If by past experience and the histories of countries rising and countries falling, the Christian religion being persecuted in every conceivable way by those who claimed to be in the right themselves, and thousands doubtless who thought they were doing God's service, like Saul of Tarsus did, suggested to our forefathers the idea of the freedom of worship as a protection to the true believer, that the true religion of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ might never be overthrown and error and wrong take its place, and so considered it the foundation of liberty, even those who professed no religion, how much more should we who profess to have the true religion, the love of God in our hearts, be struck when we see, as I think I do to day, the fundamental principles almost undermined by error and wrong through secret organization.

Brethren, it was the persecution of Roger Williams for his idea of the freedom of the worship which prompted him to declare in his constitution at Providence, Rhode Island, the right of every individual to worship according to the dictates of his own conscience; and it is my own experience prompting me, through the love of God, to write this, I do trust and believe.

Two-fold Operation of the Gospel.

"For the word of the cross is to them that are perishing foolishness, but unto us which are being saved it is the power of God." 1 Cor. 1: 18. When the gospel is preached to men and the truths therein contained are pressed home to their hearts, the issue then is, that it turns unconscious disobedience into conscious and willful disobedience. When Christ and the world have been presented to a man and he has chosen the world, he knows that he has rejected Christ. Rejection of Christ strengthens all the evil motives for rejection. The reception of the world's sacrifice brings with it all good, happiness and a sense of mercy, pardon, peace, justification, sanctification and makes for the first time man as God would have him be, in all the enobling and elevating of his character.—Rev. A. M. Croxton, in Texas Baptist Herald.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Woman's Missionary Department.

President Woman's Central Committee of North Carolina, MISS FANNIE E. HECK, Raleigh, N. C.; Secretary, MRS. J. A. BRIGGS, Raleigh, N. C.

The Southern Baptist Convention at its late session in Nashville, Tenn., extended the time of the Centennial of Missions until the close of this year. The Centennial Record Book will also be kept open until that time. It is hoped that renewed efforts will be made for this work, and the Woman's Central Committee of Missions will gladly supply Centennial Missionary Literature, Centennial Chapel Cards, Centennial Day Programs, and Centennial Certificates, free. All who are already entitled to Centennial Certificates can obtain them at once on application. If after application the Certificates are not received within a reasonable time, please renew your application, as some loss may have occurred in the mails. Address Miss Fannie E. Heck, Pres. Woman's Central Committee of Missions, Raleigh, N. C.

The Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Union.

The fifth annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Union, auxiliary to the Southern Baptist Convention, met in the First Baptist church in Nashville, Tenn., while the Southern Baptist Convention met in the large Tabernacle some two squares away.

At the first glance this, to one unfamiliar with the relations of the two bodies, might seem a division of interests. It would hardly be called a division of interest if it was found in a cotton mill that by adding the power of a small engine to the large one certain spindles that needed turning might be turned. Such is the relation the Union bears to the Convention, and whatever force or strength it gains is so much added to the strength of the Convention.

In its work the Union is guided by the Boards of the Convention, recommendations from the Home and Foreign Boards of Missions being each year the basis of the work for the coming year.

This year the recommendations were as follows:—

FOREIGN BOARD.

1. That Woman's Mission Societies aim to raise the sum required to support our women missionaries in foreign lands.

2. That the object of next Christmas Offering be the work in Japan.

3. That Woman's Missionary Union (seeking from the Sunday-school Board in Nashville their co-operation, which, we understand, will be cheerfully given) aim to introduce the observance of "Missionary Day" in all our Sunday schools, prepare programs, attend to the distribution and do all else that is possible to make the occasion a success.

HOME BOARD.

1. That the Woman's Missionary Societies make moneyed contributions to the Board, especially for the support of missionaries and their families on the frontier and elsewhere, and that as heretofore they send boxes of clothing and other useful articles to aid in their support.

2. That the societies be requested to aid in sustaining our teachers and schools in Cuba, where we have an average of seven hundred and fifty pupils, and could easily have many times that number if the proper facilities were afforded.

3. That mission work be further prosecuted among the foreign population, especially those arriving on our shores, the Germans in Baltimore, the Chinese in our cities, and the Cubans in Florida and other States, and particularly the vast number of colored women around our homes.

4. That the observance of an annual Mission Day by our Sunday-schools be commended as very desirable, and we earnestly request that the Union take such steps as may lead to its universal adoption.

These were the skeletons on which the meetings formed and rounded themselves into shape.

Here we can only note general characteristics, and touch lightly on a few salient points. Among the most striking characteristics of the meetings, the moving undercurrents that swayed and moved the whole, yet could be felt rather than seen, were earnestness, personality, punctuality, prayerfulness and harmony—earnestness in purpose and belief in the great importance of the Union's work, personality in desire to know what each could do, punctuality at each meeting in spite of other attractions or wind and weather, prayer for the meeting, in the meeting and through each meeting, and finally a harmony growing out of thorough union of aims and desires, compatible with free discussion of questions of expediency.

Never have the ladies in attendance on the Union been made to feel more welcome than by the ladies of Nashville. The very flower-scented atmosphere of the church was a welcome, and the many-hued flowers banking the speakers stand looked day by day an unfading welcome. The possible number of delegates to the Union is eighty-one. There were between fifty and sixty delegates in attendance, but to these were added a large number who, irrespective of such appointment, had come to be present at the meetings, and a very full attendance of Nashville ladies were at each session.

In the beginning of the meetings the interest centers around the report of the Corresponding Secretary of the Union. Each delegate comes from her own State well posted on what has been done there, but eager to know what has been accomplished by all.

Miss Annie Armstrong, who from the beginning of the Union, has been its indefatigable Corresponding Secretary, and to whom in a larger degree than will ever be known the Union owes its marvellous progress, has never had to report anything but rapid progress, each year being a long advance from the year previous.

This year, although the gifts of the women to Home and Foreign Missions, through their Woman's Missionary Societies had, in spite of the "hard times" which first effect the womans ability to give, increased eighteen thousand dollars, there was no spirit of exultation in the report, for the Union had hoped for better things during the Centennial year of Missions and, although the usual position of giving one-fifth of all given to the Boards had been maintained, there was disappointment that both the Convention and the Union had not risen to the full measure of its undertakings.

The feature of the work which bore the largest promise for the future was the immense increase in correspondence and mission literature sent from the headquarters of the Union in Baltimore, which cannot fail of fruitage. The marvels of work were how so much had been done and at so small a cost.

The Treasurer's report has a quiet way of its own of making figures speak, giving the results of each year's work in contrast to the previous year. A certain prominent Southern Governor, hearing a part of these figures given in the Convention in the report on Woman's Work, was so impressed that he put them down in his note-book, and from time to time drew them out to consult them with astonishment and to call the attention of others to them. We think them worthy of such note.

	1888.	1889.	1890.	1891.	1892.	1893.
Foreign Missions,	$14,316.06	$15,716.98	$21,222.01	$23,761.81	$25,040.97	$36,052.78
Home Missions,	$ 6,720.10	$12,057.41	$10,014.85	$15,229.03	$19,242.53	$20,283.97
Total,	$21,036.16	$30,778.09	$31,236.76	$38,990.84	$44,283.50	$56,336.75

Though these reports brought something of disappointment, there was no tone of discouragement to be heard. Every State Central Committee, as it in turn reported, told of hard and earnest work for the Centennial of Missions, and through all the meetings ran a determination to hold the advance gained this year.

After these reports, the attention of the sessions of Friday and Saturday were given to the recommendations of the Foreign and Home Boards, the discussion of the former being opened by Dr. H. H. Harris, President of the Foreign Mission Board, and the latter by Dr. I. T. Tichenor, Corresponding Secretary of the Home Board.

The ladies were very fortunate in having with them Miss Lottie Moon of China and Mrs. Brunson, late of Japan. The bright, earnest face of "dear Miss Moon" was known to many of the ladies, as she had been with them in Atlanta, but her never-lagging energy, her ever-increasing earnestness brought new inspiration to each meeting. Again and again she plead for deeper earnestness for missions. The year she had spent in America had struck a sense of cold to her soul as she felt the deep underlying apathy of the Christians of America to the dying heathen of China. She told the brief life story of one and another of the missionary women who had come to their work—bright, beautiful, beloved—to fill in a few years their lonely Chinese graves. She plead in the name of these graves for young women to take the places of those who had fallen. She asked for no one to sacrifice herself to this work. It was no sacrifice, nor was it possible for any Christian to sacrifice anything for Him by whom we were already bought with a price. Going to China, giving up all for Christ in any way, was a reasonable service, and for those who would perform such service, she plead in Christ's name.

Mrs. Brunson is gifted above most women in descriptive powers, and her earnestness lent strength to her word pictures of Japan. With forceful words she tore the vail of romance from the "Sun-rise land," and showed under the fair exterior, which so charms the careless sight seer, the moral blackness enshrouding the Japanese people. She pictured in this land—where, of all heathen lands, woman is most independent and happy—the subjection of the women to the will of their husbands, fathers and brothers. But saddest of all—brought out by strong contrast to the work of the missionaries—was the wickedness in high places, aided and abetted by the so-called Christians who filled government positions, and, like fatal upas trees, taint all who come in the baneful shadow of their influence with western scepticism and doubt. She plead for our missionaries (four among six millions), and gave a most graphic picture of one of the many thousand heathen temples with its endless stream of worshipers. What were four among so many! She pointed Christian women to the piles of rope of human hair, tall as herself, which she had seen coiled in the greatest and newest of the Japanese temples, as examples of self-denial. Examine them closely and you would see them woven with the jet locks of youth and the bleached locks of old age. Hundreds of thousands of Japanese women had sacrificed their crowning pride and glory to make the rope with which to safely lift into position the great beams in the temple erected to their god. Belief in idols was not dead in Japan. It was a living belief, and must be met by a church alive to the necessity of immediate and vigorous action.

In reference to the recommendations of the Home Board, Dr. Tichenor especially commended the work already done by the Union in sending out boxes of clothing to the frontier missionaries, and urged its continuance. He, like Dr. Harris, highly recommended the observance of a Sunday-school Mission Day in all our Sunday-schools. The Centennial Mission Day, observed in the past year by so many of the schools, had proved beyond a doubt the manifold benefits, both of education and revenue, which would accrue to the work of both Boards from such a day.

Mr. Cova of Cuba felt the time allotted him too short to speak of all the Cuban work, so confined himself to the importance of the schools, in which we now have nine hundred scholars, and might have many thousand if their accommodation were possible.

Mr. Diaz dwelt too upon these schools, which none of the missionaries give a second place in their work. He reported as a new feature free hospitals for women. Such hospitals he had seen in St. Louis, and had thought that here was a power for good to be utilized in Cuba. These made the poor their friends, while the high schools gave them great influence among the rich. Last year 161 were baptized, making the membership of the churches 2,500.

Other features of the work were taken up in a paper on "Work Among Colored Women," by Mrs. Gambrell of Mississippi, "Need of Work in New Orleans," by Mrs. I. D. Purser of New Orleans, and a talk on the "Need of Work Among the Germans," by Mrs. J. L. Burnham of Missouri.

Much interest and sympathy was awakened by a statement of the distressing condition of two of our home missionaries in Indian Territory, whose homes had been wrecked by a recent cyclone. A touching letter from the wife of Mr. Corn telling of their loss and of her husband's serious injuries, yet breathing a spirit of thankfulness that things were no worse with them, left no room for appeal in their behalf, and more than a hundred dollars was raised for them.

Sunday afternoon is often spoken of as the heart of the meetings. It is always given to the missionaries who may be in attendance. Easily and gracefully presided over by Mrs. F. H. Davis of Texas, the afternoon on this occasion was shared with the Sunday-school children of the various Baptist Sunday-schools of Nashville, who built before our very eyes a miniature chapel, the exact counterpart of the one made so familiar on the mission card.

In addition to Miss Moon and Mrs. Brunson, Miss Alberta Newton of Africa, and Miss Susie Taylor of Rome, were present. Miss Newton plead for the women of Africa, while Miss Taylor in a few words, not as a missionary, but as a missionary's daughter, spoke of the many discouragements met in the work in Italy, and begged that the work there might be remembered in love and patience.

The recommendations of the Executive Committee were:

"1. That an acquaintance with the facts of missions be regarded as essential to an interest in missions; therefore that effort be made to secure subscribers and readers for the Foreign Mission Journal, the Home Field, the publication of the Sunday-school Board at Nashville and of the Maryland Baptist Mission Rooms, also for State publications.

2. That the young people be the peculiar care of Woman's Mission Societies, each organization considering itself responsible to secure, when practicable, if not already accomplished, the formation of a band for the special training of young people and children in missionary intelligence and service.

3. That the need for greater efficiency and enlarged numbers interested in mission work be recognized as a call to constant prayer. Also that the first week in January, 1894, be set apart as a time for special prayer. The Mission Card is commended as an aid to daily prayer.

4. That the increased interest and enlarged contributions obtained through the Centennial effort be cherished and sustained, effort being made by societies to retain all centennial contributors as regular members and subscribers."

Monday was given largely to the consideration of the Executive Committee of the Union, the election of officers, and the reports of committees.

Each recommendation was followed by a paper full of truth and suggestiveness and general discussion.

Miss Juliet Pollard of Virginia spoke of the necessity of the wide dissemination of missionary literature, and made a strong plea for the organs of the Boards.

Miss Budd of South Carolina spoke feelingly of the necessity of gathering the children into mission bands, and strengthened precept with instances of example.

Miss Wright of Georgia, who has voluntarily given her time to prepare a most excellent missionary calendar, giving each day a missionary for special prayer, coupled with some interesting mission fact and an appropriate text of Scripture, spoke modestly of the calendar, her very modesty and want of self-laudation bringing from a large number of ladies an expression of their high appreciation of the calendar and of the service Miss Wright had rendered to the Union.

Miss Aldridge of Virginia reminded the ladies that, though the Centennial had indeed passed, as many heathen would die in heathen lands this year as last. As much need existed this year for mission effort as last. If we did not continue our efforts year after year, our grandchildren would have little to celebrate at the next Centennial.

The election of officers, which is more than usually hedged about with formalities, resulted in the unanimous election of the old officers: Miss Fannie E. Heck of North Carolina, President; Miss A. W. Armstrong of Maryland, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. F. M. Ellis of Maryland, Recording Secretary; Mrs. M. E. Oliver of Maryland, Treasurer. A Vice-President is nominated by the delegation from each State and elected by acclamation. Mrs. J. A. Briggs was re-elected as Vice-President from North Carolina.

The hour of parting came. Miss Lottie Moon, whose presence had been a joy and inspiration to two of the annual gatherings of the Union, was called to lead the closing devotional exercises, and to take a long farewell of all, as ere our next meeting she would be in the far land of China. She called for four young women who had offered themselves for China, Brazil and Japan, and with outstretched hands called upon God to guide and bless the Union, and to go with them as they went forth at his bidding.

Thus the fifth annual meeting stood adjourned to meet next May in Dallas, Texas.

A Strong Endorsement.

The St. Louis Trade Review and Export Journal in its issue of February 7th, 1893, has this to say:

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.

One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B. Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

Craven County Mission.

I came upon this work the first of this year. I have held fifty-four services, supplied eight places with preaching, made sixty religious visits, traveled 750 miles, and distributed about 1,000 pages of religious literature.

There is much destitution within the limits of this field. There are only two Baptist churches in this county—one in Newbern, and one eighteen miles in the country. These two churches together have a membership of about 350.

This county has a population of over 30,000 people. Supposing half to be colored, there would then be over 10,000 white people. There has been but very little Baptist preaching in this county in the past, with any special effort to establish churches. But the Newbern Baptist church has taken hold of this work, with the purpose to develop this field for the Lord according to Baptist belief of the truth. The Newbern church is wholly sustaining this "Craven County Mission," and will give this year $125 to Associational Missions outside of this county. They also contribute liberally to the other objects of the Convention.

We are doing what we can in this much-destitute field. The work is promising. The people receive me very cordially. But there is one great obstacle in the way of our success, viz., we have no houses on this field in which to hold services, except as we borrow or rent them. We are trying to remove this difficulty as fast as possible. To this end, we are arranging to build at Core Creek, one of our mission points. Core Creek is a little town on the A. & N. C. Railroad between Newbern and Kinston. There are eight Baptists there, and the nearest Baptist church is nine miles distant. We have an acre lot, and are gathering the material for the building.

We are greatly in need of help to build this house for the Lord. Brethren and sisters, you have helped me in the past, will you be so kind as to help me in this present need for the Lord, by sending me ten dollars, five dollars, two dollars, one dollar, as the Lord has prospered you. Please don't wait for me to visit you: it would be a very great pleasure for me to do so; but I have not the time nor the means. I am too far back in the interior of destitution now. It would cost too much to visit you. Just take up collections in your Sunday-schools, prayer-meetings or church services, and forward the amounts to the undersigned, with the prayer to God that the gifts and the givers may be used for the building up of his kingdom. I will acknowledge all moneys received in the BIBLICAL RECORDER. Your prayers and contributions God will answer and bless, and we will all rejoice together in the future.

My address is Newbern, N. C., Box 491.

Yours for the Lord,

J. W. ROSE.

No Doctor or Medicine.

FOR TWO YEARS A FAMILY OF TEN PEOPLE HAVE SAVED THIS EXPENSE BY USING THE ELECTROPOISE.

Dear Sir:—I have had an Electropoise in use in my family, of ten persons, for two years. I have not had a doctor in that time or used any medicine, and would not be without the Poise, for I use it for every thing, from being tired as a housekeeper to any sickness we have had. My husband was restored to health in three months' treatment, although he could not be induced to use it until he was so reduced in strength. It was his last hope. He had had several attacks of La Grippe, and besides being so weak, the least exercise would cause the limbs to swell to twice their natural size. Three months' use of the instrument cured him, and he has not had any swelling or pain in his limbs since.

I treated my little boy, twelve years old, with best results, when I felt sure he would have Pneumonia. I think his general health is even better than before for he was not a strong child. I cured "poison oak" eruption just with the Poise by plain directions. My cook had had Rheumatism in her arms, from a child, sometimes could not grasp anything with her hands, not even knit. I treated her with the plain directions, and she is so much benefited she thinks it the greatest thing in the world, would not leave me, though she has been offered double the wages I pay. My eldest son came home last winter, after being at work for three years, the doctors said his liver was torpid and would swell up. I treated as you directed for three months. He is now in perfect health and says, he don't expect to take any more medicine. After the good it has done in our family no one can wonder at our being so loud in the praise of the Electropoise. Yours respectfully,

MRS. JOHN B. SMITH.

Our Missionaries.

I suppose there is not a more devoted, self-sacrificing band of men to be found anywhere than those who are laboring under the appointment of our Board, but it seems to me the present system of management is grievous to very materially damage the work. The Israelites were required to make brick without straw, and our missionaries are required to live without bread. The Convention ought to avoid this long continued [illegible] from a lack of faith, or [illegible], our loyal and generous [illegible] could not use their credit [illegible] to pay the missionaries [illegible] were due. Would it not [illegible] our honored Secretary [illegible] with the missionaries [illegible] At Goldsboro his [illegible] was all paid. At Raleigh, he had received about $1,400, according to the Treasurer's report. His house-rent, as I learn, is paid beside. Nearly seven months of the present year is gone, and a large number of the missionaries have not received a cent. Has our Secretary lived seven months without pay?

I am not criticising the amount of the Secretary's salary, for I think he ought to be paid well for his services; but I think if he were made to feel as keenly as the missionaries the lack of means upon which to live, there would be pursued a different line of tactics in the work.

For my part, I do now and here say that if the denomination proposes to continue this iron-clad, oppressive policy, I shall never receive another appointment under the Board. There has not been a year that I could not have gotten a good support from churches and my salary enlarged by several hundred dollars, but I have loved the work I have done and love to work on North Carolina soil, but I cannot continue the work longer under the present management.

If this present Board can't obey the instruction of the Convention, I am in favor of wiping them out and putting in somebody who will try, at least. There has grown up in a number of places a feeling of resentment at the present management, and I think it is time a change of policy be made. In my judgment, our Secretary would have all that he can do to raise the State Mission money, without having the responsibility of Home and Foreign Missions on his shoulders. This is a free country, and Baptists believe in the freedom of speech, so these are my sentiments publicly expressed.

Literary.

The Story of Diaz. A Marvel of Modern Missions. By Geo. W. Lasher, D. D. 64 pages, beautifully bound; illustrated; with Map of Cuba. Published by Geo. E. Stevens, Cincinnati. Price, 25 cents.

This account of the wonderful work of God in Cuba is a notable contribution to the missionary literature of America.

In these days of many books, purposeless and vapid, it is refreshing to meet one that has a valid claim upon public attention. Such a book is "The Story of Diaz." The subject is fresh, the treatment skillful, the facts astonishing, and the narrative full of interest from beginning to end. This modest booklet will have a thousand readers where a ponderous volume would have ten.

Wherever the book goes, it will stir the Christian heart. The missionary in far-off lands, as he reads it, will pursue his work with new zeal, while the toiler in the work at home will thank God and take courage as he reads chapters which bring to mind those which narrate the work of Paul, Barnabas and Philip in the first century.

What an inspiration to a Pastor, to read Rev. R. B. Montgomery's simple record of the baptism of Diaz and his sister in the Gethsemane church in Brooklyn in 1882! How little could that faithful pastor see how glorious would be the display of divine grace in the life of that humble convert, in after years!

Therefore I would say to the bereaved, "Let us not sorrow as those who have no hope." Her body was laid in Cool Spring cemetery May 10th. The burial service was conducted by the writer.

L. R. DIXON.

BUNCH—Bro. Willis Bunch departed this life March 24th, 1893, aged eighty-two. A good man has fallen. He became a member of the church while young. He was faithful to his promise to his church—he loved his church. Through all those years never did he give trouble or hinder her progress. The plain, old-fashioned worship was his delight. He enjoyed talking about Jesus and his love. And though his voice is heard no more, his influence will live. All who were acquainted with the dear old saint loved him for his oneness of purpose. The day of his funeral will be long remembered by the large number who were present. The writer read and talked, and Bro. J. F. Tuttle offered some appropriate remarks. A deep feeling pervaded the large congregation. All will miss him. His church at Sandy Cross and his home are robbed of his presence. An aged wife, two brothers, relatives and many friends are left to mourn their loss. God bless the aged wife and the aged brother, is our humble prayer.

JOSIAH ELLIOTT.

COOKE—Died on Sunday morning, May 14, 1893, at the family residence in Franklin county, N. C., in the fifty-first year of her age, Josephine Miriam Cooke, oldest child by his last marriage of the late Jones Cooke, a cherished and honored name in Franklin county, and sister of C. M. Cooke of Louisburg, N. C.

Her pathway over more than half life's journey lay within the vale of tears, for in the bloom of womanhood pneumonia, with its wasting fever, shocked the frame that had been strong and left the spirit's earthly house a fragile tenement. But as pure gold emerges purer from the fiery test, so at the journey's end this child of God, whose faith, more precious far than gold, was always beautiful, was fully trusting in her Lord. She shuddered not at death's cold stream. The shadows darkened not the face of him on whom she leaned. Painful it was to those bereft to have their loved one go, but not for her was aught of grief, for well they knew she had longed for home, and that the coming of the King was to her soul thrice welcome.

W. B. R.

ROGERS—Thos. B. Rogers departed this life Nov. 27th, 1892. He professed religion in early life and lived a consistent member of the M. P. Church at Orange Chapel, Orange county, N. C. In his death the church has lost a faithful and loyal member, his parents an affectionate son, and his State a true and honest citizen.

He leaves a wife and seven children to mourn their loss, but they mourn not as those who have no hope, as their loss is his eternal gain. He told the writer that his way was clear. To know him was to love him. He was kind to the poor and the sick. He was at his best in his home. There he was known and loved and reverenced as few men are. He was possessed of that winning freedom of love that drew all closely to him. As a church member he was ever ready to do for the church that which would make the membership one great loving people. He devoted his life as far as able as a teacher in the Sunday-school. His example and life go to make up that which constitutes the true man, and we shall ever point to it with pride.

Brethren, the lesson cannot be misunderstood. As he was true and faithful, loyal and loving, patient and forgiving, so let us be. Above all, let us imitate those characteristics which he possessed to such an eminent degree of charity, benevolence and faith.

REV. P. A. FERGERSON.

Tributes of Respect.

Mrs. Sallie A. Herring, a member of Lisbon church, died Sept. 22d, 1892, in the sixty-eight year of her age.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Merritt, a member of the same church, died Nov. 6th, 1892.

Whereas, the Great Ruler of the universe has in his infinite wisdom removed from our midst our esteemed sisters, therefore Resolved 1. That the interest shown by their pastoral attendance on Saturdays as well as on Sundays is commendable to all Christians, and will ever be remembered by us.

2. That with deep sympathy for the afflicted relatives and friends of the deceased, we express our earnest hope that even so great a bereavement may be overruled for their highest good.

J. O. HERRING,
DALLAS HERRING,
W. B. LAMB,
Committee.

The Morrisville Baptist church has adopted this tribute to the memory of the late Rev. J. R. Maynard:—

Whereas, Our wise and loving Father saw fit to call very suddenly from earth to heaven, on March 28d, 1893, our much beloved brother, Rev. John R. Maynard, therefore Resolved 1. That while we so sadly miss him, and it seems so hard to have to give him up so unexpectedly, yet we humbly submit to his will who doeth all things well.

Resolved 2. That this church has lost a worthy, zealous member, the churches to whom he preached a faithful, untiring pastor, his family a kind, indulgent husband and father.

Resolved 3. That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathies, praying that the Holy Spirit may comfort their sad hearts and guide them all safely home at last, where sickness, sorrow and partings will come no more.

Resolved 4. That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the church, a copy sent to the family of the deceased, and also to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

Beautiful Things.

Beautiful faces are those that wear—
It matters little if dark or fair—
Whole-souled honesty printed there.

Beautiful eyes are those that show,
Like crystal panes where hearth fires glow,
Beautiful thoughts that burn below.

Beautiful lips are those whose words
Leap from the heart like song of birds,
Yet whose utterance prudence girds.

Beautiful hands are those that do
Work that is earnest and brave and true,
Moment by moment, the long day through.

Beautiful feet are those that go
On kindly ministries to and fro,
Down lowliest ways, if God wills it so.

Beautiful shoulders are those that bear
Ceaseless burdens of homely care
With patient grace and daily prayer.

Beautiful lives are those that bless—
Silent rivers and happiness
Whose hidden fountains but few may guess.

Beautiful twilight at set of sun;
Beautiful goal, with race well won;
Beautiful rest, with work well done.

Beautiful graves, where grasses creep,
Where brown leaves fall, where drifts lie deep
Over worn-out hands—oh, beautiful sleep!

The Fairy of the Window.

Softly Aunt Dean opened the door of the little white room where Agatha and Muriel slept. It was the prettiest room in the great, new house, at least the little girls thought so. Aunt Dean thought so, too, as she stood in the doorway, gazing into the softly lighted, snowily draped chamber; but it was not the white and gold wall, or the white enamelled furniture, nor the glistening, gilt-framed mirrors that brought that soft glow to the kind old eyes, it was the sight of the two little girls themselves, in the white bed, sleeping and dreaming like two tired cherubs. But suddenly some disquieting thought seemed to trouble the watcher; she came up to the sleepers, and gazed intently into their faces—the flushed faces—around which the damp curls clung. While she stood over them, Agatha moved, and turned restlessly on her pillow; presently Muriel tossed the down quilt off, and then threw out her arms.

"No wonder," murmured the old lady to herself, "no wonder Agatha hates her breakfast, and Muriel feels too tired to go to school; this hot, close room is wilting my pretty plants."

She stole softly to the end of the little chamber, and, like a burglar for carefulness, raised the wide sash a whole foot; then tip-toed out, leaving it up.

There was a row in the little white chamber next morning; two small, shivering figures dressed hastily in the rather chill air, wondering, loudly, who had left their window open.

"I did, posies," owned Aunt Dean, "I left it open for the fairy."

"What fairy!" cried the children.

"I can't tell you her name just now; it's a secret; she comes to little girls' windows with presents for each one; she comes every night, but, of course, if the windows are shut she can't get in, and so she flies away. Now I want to make a bargain with you. I am going to Edgehill to day, to stay a month. I want you to leave your window up that much every night, and if the fairy don't bring you the presents I spoke of, I'll bring you each a new doll."

It was a bargain—the old auntie went off on the long journey, and the window staid up a foot every night. But no fairy gifts did Agatha and Muriel see.

"So you think my fairy is a humbug!" said Aunt Dean, when she got back from Edgehill, "big box, little box, band-box, bundle." "Now I see several things she has brought while I was away."

The children looked around the room with wide open eyes.

"In the first place," said auntie, smiling, "Agatha ate three rolls and a piece of steak for breakfast; so the fairy has brought her an appetite."

"Oh—oh!" cried Agatha.

"In the next place, Muriel skips like a rubber thing, and hasn't said 'tired' once, so the fairy brought her some strength for her muscles."

"Oh—oh!" cried Muriel.

"And, besides, you have each bunches of red roses in your cheeks, instead of pale lilies."

"Oh, Auntie, how funny!" exclaimed both laughing little maids, "what is the fairy's name?"

"Fresh Air, of course," answered Aunt Dean, "blessings on her; I hope you will never shut her out again."

But the new dolls were at the bottom of the trunk, all the same!—Selected.

Sunshine comes, no matter how dark the clouds are, when the woman who is borne down by woman's troubles turns to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. If her life is made gloomy by the chronic weakness, delicate derangements, and painful disorders that afflict her sex, they are completely cured. If she's overworked, nervous, or "run down," she has new life and strength. "Favorite Prescription" is a powerful, invigorating tonic and a soothing and strengthening nervine, purely vegetable, perfectly harmless. It regulates and promotes the proper functions of woman-hood, improves digestion, enriches the blood, cures aches and pains, brings refreshing sleep, health and vigor. For "female complaint" and disturbance, nervousness, sure and satisfying remedy. In every case you have your money back.

How the Polar Bear Gets Food.

Of all the curious ways that the polar bear has of securing his food I know of none more strange and interesting than that related by Captain Hall and Dr. Ray, two trustworthy travellers in this country of strange sights.

They have known the polar bear to take a stone or a huge chunk of ice in its fore paws, and from a favorable height, as a cliff or precipitous ice-hummock, hurl the missile against the head of a walrus—an enormous brute twice the size of the bear on an average—and so stun him that Bruin could rush in and complete the destruction at his leisure, and thus secure a month's rations at a single coup.

Many of the Esquimaux of my acquaintance also spoke of this curious but effective way the polar bear uses when circumstances are favorable.

The most common food of the ice bear (as the Germans very appropriately call this beast) is the common seal of the Arctic regions. This latter brute is the wariest animal of the North, and Esquimaux and polar bear have to display their keenest strategy to catch it.

In the summer when the snow is off the ice of the ocean's shore and inlets, the seals can be plainly seen as black dots on the level ice, probably asleep, but always near their holes, which lead down through the thick ice to the water below, and into which they can throw themselves by the least movement. Bruin, seeing one afar, walks up as near as he deems it safe, and then begins crawling on his wary prey. The seal, if it be sunny and pleasant, takes short naps, relieved by shorter moments when it is scanning the vicinity for signs of any enemy's approach. During these times the bear is very quiet and resting still as death itself, with eyes apparently closed, though really a corner of each is kept open, and in this way he hopes the seal will take him for a hummock of snow, an appearance which his white coat readily helps him to assume. During the naps he hitches forward with greater or less rapidity according to his nearness to the seal and consequent fear of being heard or seen. When quite close to his prey his approach is very slow, and when but ten or twelve yards away, and Mr. Seal is in the depths of a good nap, Bruin makes a rush and with a single stroke of his powerful paw knocks the smaller brute senseless and so far away from the hole in the ice that it cannot escape by that way, even if the blow is not fatal at once.

In the winter time the ice is covered with snow and this is "hollowed out" by the seal into a little snow-house covering the hole through the ice, and connecting at the top of the dome with an aperture about the size of a silver quarter, called the "blow-hole," for it is through this that the seal breathes when in want of fresh air. Here the polar bear watches for many a long hour if necessary, and when the first few puffs or snorts of the seal are heard he crushes in the fragile dome of the seal's snow-house with his paw, impaling the creature on his curved claws, and proceeds to show how polar bears, at least, can subsist in the Arctic winter.—Ex.

Five Cents' Worth of Travel.

We know a bright boy whose great longing is to travel. His parents have no means with which to gratify him in that respect. He occasionally earns a few pennies by selling papers and doing errands. Instead of spending his money foolishly, he carefully treasures it in a small iron box which he calls his safe. One day after earning five cents, he dropped them into the box in the presence of a companion of about his own age, and exclaimed, "There goes five cents' worth of travel!"

"What do you mean!" asked the other boy. "How can you travel on five cents!"

"Five cents will carry me a mile and a half on the railroad. I want to see Niagara Falls before I die. I am nearly four hundred miles from them now, but every five cents I earn will bring them nearer, and a great many other places that are worth seeing. I know it takes money to travel, but money is money, be it ever so little. If I do not save the little, I shall never have the much."

Some boys squander every year the cost of a coveted trip to some point of interest. Let them remember that every five cents saved means a mile and a half of the journey. Small amounts, carefully kept, will foot up surprising results at the end of the year, and almost every doctor will testify that five cents' worth of travel is better for the health of the boy than five cents' worth of sweets.—Wide Awake.

The Deadly Cigarette.

A leading chemist, one whose name is widely known in this country, recently took pains to analyze a number of cigarettes produced by the best factories, and after doing so gave utterance to the following remarks: "There are five ingredients in every cigarette, each one of which is calculated to destroy human life. First, there is the oil of tobacco; next, the oil in the imported paper, which is nearly as destructive; third, the arsenic introduced to make the paper burn white and add a peculiar flavor; forth, the saltpetre put in the tobacco to prevent it from moulding; and finally, the opium that is sprayed on the tobacco to give it the insidious influence which it possesses over the brain. Can you wonder that the animal life of a young man is killed with such a disease! In the cigar or pipe we have but one poison—nicotine—but it is not inhaled."—Raleigh Advocate.

A constant complainer is bad company.

Spare the Old Orchard.

Some fruit growers cut down the trees when they cease to bear, and it is not a wise practice. While there is life there is hope. Do not cut a fruit tree down unless it is stone dead, for it takes too long to grow new ones. Hundreds of old orchards are destroyed every year, which with some trouble could be improved and brought into bearing. It seems like base ingratitude to let orchard trees go on year after year, bearing plentifully perhaps, until they have exhausted the soil, and then because they cease to yield fruit to be cut down by the owner, who has never supplied to the soil in any way that which the trees have taken from it.

If the old trees have been badly neglected, trim them well. Cut out all brushy, crowded limbs, and thin the trees toward the center. Paint the wood, that it may not decay. Let the bark be cleaned, and the old rough surface may be scraped off. At the right time let the whole ground be well harrowed, but without mutilating the roots, and fertilize heavily. The soil should be kept loose and free from weeds, and in good time the trees will bear again. Unleached wood ashes make an excellent fertilizer. Let the soil be made as rich as possible. It can hardly be overdone.—Exchange.

R. C. Taylor, Murfreesboro, Tenn., writes: "I have used the Japanese Pile Cure with great satisfaction and success." Sold by John Y. MacRae, druggist, Raleigh, N. C.

Edward Everett Hale once said to a friend: "Never bear more than one kind of trouble at a time," and added: "Some people bear three kinds—all they have had, all they have now, and all they expect to have."

THE NEW STYLE

pill is of Dr. Pierce's invention and is full of improvements. They are used by everyone—high livers, bad livers, those whose livers are sluggish—all find relief in Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

TO REGIN WITH, these "Pellets" are the smallest, and easiest to take. They're tiny, sugar-coated, anti-bilious granules that every child takes readily.

SECONDLY.—They're perfectly easy in their action—no griping, no disturbance.

THIRDLY.—Their effect is lasting.

FOURTHLY.—Put up in glass—always fresh.

FIFTHLY.—They're the cheapest, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for the good you get.

LASTLY.—They absolutely cure Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, Sick or Bilious Headaches, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels.

EPILEPSY OR FITS

Can this disease be cured? Most physicians say No—I say, Yes; all forms and the worst cases. After 30 years study and experiment I have found the remedy.—Epilepsy is cured by it; cured, not subdued by opiates—the old, treacherous, quack treatment. Do not despair. Forget past impositions on your purse, past outrages on your confidence, past failures. Look forward, not backward. My remedy is of to-day. Valuable work on the subject, and large bottle of the remedy—sent free for trial. Mention Post-Office and Express address.

A Call to the Ministry.

In the beginning let us emphasize two points; first, that there is a distinction between gospel ministers and the great body of Christians; and, secondly, that a call is prerequisite to the ministry.

1. That there is a distinction between official ministers and the great body of disciples is evident from the following considerations: that they have peculiar qualifications, rights, duties, responsibilities, and relations to God. They are stewards and ambassadors of God, specially entrusted with the gospel, and speaking as his messengers; they have the care of the churches; it is theirs to admonish, reprove, rebuke and exhort; to feed, oversee and lead; as ministers, they have a right to a support; and the Scriptures set forth their official qualifications. They are officially distinguished from other Christians. They are, first, among equals. Personally, they stand with others; officially, they are distinguished from them. They have authority—the authority of a shepherd over his flock; of an overseer over his workmen; of a guide and leader. They have an authority, bounded, it is true, by the Word; and as they exercise that authority, it is the duty of Christians to submit, "to obey." The ministerial office has been misused and perverted, and seeing this, there is danger that we shall recoil from one extreme and rebound to the other. If the minister is not a despot to lord it over God's heritage, let us not deny him the authority to which he is entitled. Let us not lose sight of the fact that he is in some respects and in some measure distinguished from the great body of Christians.

2. That a call is prerequisite to the ministry, may be argued from reason, the Bible, and experience. A man has no right to step to the high position of the Christian ministry, to stand within the ministerial circle uncalled. A steward receives a trust, an ambassador must be sent. Under the old dispensation the severest censures and woes were denounced against those who ran without being sent, and prophesied lies in the name of the Lord; and under the new dispensation, ministers are the gifts of the ascended Lord to the churches, and are duly called and sent forth. Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah and Amos were called. See Isa. 6: 8, 9; Jer. 1: 4—10; and Amos 7: 14, 15.

The twelve apostles and the seventy disciples were appointed and sent. Matt. 10: 5, and Luke 10: 1.

Paul and Barnabas, Timothy, Archippus, and the Ephesian elders were called. Acts 26: 16; 20: 24; 13: 2—4; 20: 28; Col. 4: 17, and other passages.

I believe, then, in the light of God's Word, corroborated by my own experience and that of others, that men should enter the ministry only as impelled by a special, personal, divine call.

Now, what constitutes this call? It does not consist in visions and voices. It is not seen with natural eye, nor heard with natural ear. It does not consist simply in the possession of natural capacity, talent, or mental acquirements—in inclination or taste, nor alone in the possession of moral qualifications; but it is a deepening, growing, abiding conviction that it is God's will that one should devote himself to preaching the gospel as a life-work.

Speaking more particularly of this call, it may be said,

1. That it is from God. It comes not out of the depths of the human soul. A minister is not self-called. The ministry is not a profession which one chooses for himself because he likes it, nor indeed because he thinks he can do most good in it.

Nor does the call come from one's parents. Because my father and mother wish me to preach is not sufficient reason why I should enter the minister. The late Henry Ward Beecher said that he had no choice about it; that he was brought up to it; that his father had eight sons, six of whom went into the ministry as naturally as they went into manhood. Ah me, it is to be feared that others have no higher call.

Nor does the call come down from the hall of some great college or theological seminary. These are useful as places of training, but are unauthorized to extend a call.

The call does not come from the church as its source. Nowhere in God's Word do I find the churches empowered to put into the ministry any save those divinely called. The churches may hear the call, but they do not originate it.

God calls, and qualifies, and sends his own ministers.

2. Again, this call is heard. When the Spirit calls a man from nature to grace, from death to life, that call is effectual—it is heard, and when the Holy Ghost calls to the ministry, that call is heard and recognized, and the obligation which it imposes is felt. A conviction is wrought that one must preach or incur guilt. To do something else would be wrong. At first there may be doubt; the way may not be plain, the voice may not seem clear and distinct; but as a result of careful thought, earnest prayer, and a growing willingness to do the will of the Lord, one reaches the settled conviction that to preach the gospel of Christ is his God-given work. Furthermore, this conviction of duty, this consciousness of a divinely imposed obligation is necessary to give courage and boldness in delivering the message, and to inspire for the toils, and to sustain amid the trials of ministerial life.

3. The call implies the essential qualifications. God does not call unconverted men into the ministry. He first saves them, and then puts them into the ministry.

The call implies adequate mental capacity. He does not send idiots and fools. He calls many of ordinary ability. There are few extraordinary men in the ministry or anywhere else. He may choose the uncultured and uninformed, but he does not choose those who are incapable of mental effort and devoid of capacity for knowledge. A minister must be able to think and acquire.

Again, a call implies at least an ordinary degree of wisdom, prudence, and common sense. I do not believe the Lord sends men utterly wanting as to these qualifications.

Another necessary gift is "aptness to teach." God commits his Word "to faithful men who shall be able to teach others also"—to men "apt to teach." Great ability and learning will not suffice; there must be the power to gather interest and hold the people. God's servants may not attract great crowds of the giddy, gay and godless world, but they will so speak as that some will be drawn, saved, and edified. The Lord makes no mistakes. He does not call men who cannot preach, and when one is called to preach, others are called to hear.

4. How does God call? (1) Directly through the Spirit. Primarily it is a matter between man and God, as regeneration, repentance and faith. It is a matter of individual, personal experience. God through his Spirit impresses the mind, moves the soul, and inworks a clear and positive conviction that it is one's duty to devote himself to the work of saving souls. He lays the burden on the heart and holds it there until the man cries out, "I yield, I yield, I can hold out no more," and making a full surrender, and laying head and heart, body and business upon the altar, says "Here am I, send me."

(2) Again, the call comes through the Christian brotherhood. If you are the only one who thinks you ought to preach, be slow to enter the ministry. Usually there is a concurring, corroborating conviction in the minds of other Christians. If God calls you, some one else will hear that call. Pardon a personal allusion. When the writer was nineteen years of age, he professed conversion and was baptized. Very soon he felt that he ought to preach, but for many reasons shrank from the great work. The impression deepened, the burden grew heavier, the conviction strengthened, until one day turning his back on his plow, and mounting his horse, he rode away to call on his pastor, the late honored and beloved William Turner of Forsyth. Never will he forget the words of the man of God, who, after hearing the story of the young inquirer, laid his hand upon him, and said "I thought so." For some time he had believed that the writer would hear and obey the call to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ. Thus it has been with others, and so it will usually be. Other Christians will hear the call which comes to you, and will bid you God speed in the blessed work before you.

(3) Then, too, God calls through providential circumstances. The way will open up before you. Sometimes a man is led gradually along. A Sunday-school is left on his hands, a prayer-meeting is languishing, a pastorless church is near him, and he is thus urged on in Christian endeavor and usefulness. For a time the way may be dark; you may seem hedged in; but before prayer, faith and effort, barriers will be removed, and the way made plain. Are you poor and uneducated, an unexpected offer of aid may come to you as it has to others, and open before you College and Seminary where you you may get needed training and instruction. If God has called you by his Spirit, you will find in his providence a confirmation and endorsement of that call. God calls through his Spirit, his people, and his providences.

5. The call is to a life-work. I have conversed with many and have never found one who felt that the Lord had called him for ten, twenty, or thirty years, but that the call was for life; that so long as health and strength were given, he must here, or there, or yonder, preach the gospel. The need of preaching abides, right is disregarded, truth ignored, souls are perishing, God is dishonored, the kingdom of heaven is not yet established, much remains to be done, and I believe that it is ours to press forward until death shall set us free. Ours is a life-work.

6. Finally, the called find their highest enjoyment in the discharge of their duties. They may feel weak and unworthy, and may go with fear and trembling, lightly esteeming their best efforts, but in the sweet consciousness of having tried to do their duty, they find an ample reward. Moved with compassion for perishing souls, constrained by the love of Christ, impelled by a deep, abiding, divinely-wrought conviction, sustained by the grace of God, and animated by the hope of a blessed immortality, they press on through privations, toils and hardships to finish their work, and obtain the crown.

Are Baptist Preachers Sure They Preach the Pure Word of God?

A brother a short time since in lecturing on the ordinances, after preaching a pure gospel sermon, as I thought, said that there was no proof in the Bible of any one ever having been immersed (baptized) in apostolic times. Now did this brother tell the truth? If he did, you Baptist preachers are certainly preaching a falsehood when you say there is proof. Of course, I think there is an abundant proof, but I am no scholar—just have to form my conclusions according to the reading of the Book. The brother said "going down into and coming up out of the water," meant being at or near by the water, and not necessarily in the water. Now if this is so, the Bible would denominate you Baptist preachers as the blind leading the blind. The brother said that sprinkling, pouring and baptism were all the same. If the brother is right, you Baptist preachers ought to preach it that way. You know what the Book says in regard to taking from the Scriptures—that whoever takes away from the Book, "their part shall be taken from the Book of Life." But if believers' baptism alone is Bible baptism it was ignored by the brother and his creed, he substituting the ordinances of his creed. The Book says, "The plagues written therein shall be added unto them." Not only so, but if this addition has truly been made, with all its attendant evils, they are the blind leading the blind, causing many of their followers to despise the doctrines and commands of the Bible—yea, also the true Bible minister of Jesus Christ, and even Christ himself.

"He that heareth you heareth me; and he that despiseth you despiseth me; and he that despiseth me, despiseth him that sent me."

To the Readers of the Biblical Recorder.

Dear Friends:—I never had the privilege of hearing the old negro brother of Richmond, Va., preach on his noted subject: "The Sun do Move," but I believe the subject might be fittingly applied to Shanghai, and the entire Chinese empire. In an experience extending over a period of less than five years this may be seen.

What are some of the forces that can, and do, move China? Let us briefly consider some of them.

1. Christian civilization: We must not forget that the Chinese have a civilization, and that any nation may get valuable suggestions from them on that subject; but what does Christian civilization teach the Chinese? Our application of the forces of nature impress them. The steam hips we come here in, the telegraph lines, the telephone, the general use of gas, electricity and of machinery, these impress the Chinese. They connect these things with the fact that the makers and users of them are the people whose God is the Lord.

The women of Christian civilization impress the Chinese. They read books and are the companions of their brothers and husbands. How strange, but where is the harm? Last week a brother, Mr. Leu, was married. Brother and Sister Bryan, Mrs. Tatum and I were invited to dinner the following day. Sister Bryan did not attend. The others of the above named, with the bride and groom and our evangelist and his wife, sat down to one and the same table, and after returning thanks, actually partook of the same meal together. Nothing very strange to us, but in the eyes of an average aristocratic Chinaman some of us were guilty of the very grave charge of having eaten with women. While we were eating, the evangelist's wife expressed the Chinese idea when being helped by a brother she said: "It is a sin for me to allow you to do that." Christian civilization demands that women shall be unfettered in more ways than that of unbinding the feet. It demands that her mind be set free and cultivated, and that her sphere of action be extended from that of a slave to that of a Christian woman.

2. Christian missionaries: In a place like Shanghai where there are four or five thousand foreigners, the missionary is frequently not distinguished from the foreigner in general. We are all regarded, tolerated and hated alike by many of the thinking Chinese. But the day has come when many here are able to see the difference in the missionary and the man of the world. In many interior places they know nothing of the foreigner except as they have come in contact with the missionary. These hundreds of men and women who are seeking every opportunity to do them good and are learning better how not to seem to do them harm, are exercising an increased silent influence that indicates a movement towards the coming of the kingdom.

3. Christians: Then there is the influence of native Christians. In time past he was often regarded by his fellow countryman as one who was two politic to undertake to eat the foreigners rice without professing his religion; but time has gone on. Christians have shown themselves to be interested in other things besides that of eating rice. Rice, position and reputation have been given up for Christ's sake. Those of us who are most intimately connected with the lives of Chinese Christians often fail to appreciate what persecutions they endure for Him. These individual lives come in contact with other lives and tell for good and for eternity.

4. Christ's spirit: Last, but in and through it all is the moving power of the Holy Spirit. Let all the praise and glory be given to God. More than a year ago the native Christians of this place agreed among themselves to pray for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. I need not say that the prayer was heard. The promise was kept in this case just as it has always been done.

You have had some account of a late general meeting in Shanghai, and of the meeting that followed in our church. This meeting continued for six weeks. On the last evening of the meeting the brethren one after another spoke of their Christian experience. One brother said: "I thank God my father and mother never led me to a temple to worship dead idols." There is an encouraging thought in that for us. His father and mother were of the first generation of Christians in China. He is of the second generation that numbers in the thousands. The third generation, many of them born now, will be a host that no one man can number.

Another brother told how he attended a Christian school for years. In this school he was made familiar with the plan of salvation, but did not accept it. His parents threatened to punish him if he did. He left school and went into business. Last winter he attended that general meeting in Shanghai. He heard the Word. Two passages laid hold of his mind and heart: "Repent for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," and "To-day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." He perceived that he was lost, he trusted Christ for salvation and found peace and joy. When this young man applied to our church for membership, he was put on the list to wait a while as usual, but he remained on that list only a week. He gave such satisfactory evidence that he was a Christian and seemed so anxious to obey Christ in baptism, we did not dare hold him back. We accepted him. Many make it convenient to be baptized in the summer. On being asked why he want to wait for anything when he was doing the business of the Lord. So Bro. Bryan baptised him in that cold weather you have read of. Being about his Father's business is a characteristic of his. He attended our six-week's meeting and was a leading spirit in it. He was ready to ring the bell or to preach, to converse with the well dressed man or the beggar about salvation. This brother, Nye, is a printer by trade. Though he earns only eight dollars a month, he has given up three weeks work and is absent now on a journey of two hundred miles as a delegate to the Chekiang and Kiangsu Baptist Association.

I will not speak of experiences given by other brethren. Suffice it to say the Chinese have Christian experiences and they can tell them in a hurry when the time is limited to five minutes.

We are not gathering great numbers into the church. I expect to baptize one brother next Sunday. We confidently expect that others will follow soon. And we have come to a point where we may expect to see "greater things." "The Sun do Move." God's children move. Good reports come up from Christian and heathen lands. One spy reports that a great volume of prayer is going up to God daily for the missionaries. Friend's don't stop. Do Southern Baptists move? Difficult to say from our distant standpoint. (I skeak with regard to China.) God's spirit moves. Let us not resist his movings. Where he leads we shall be happy in following. Yours fraternally,

E. F. TATUM.

From Kinston, N. C.

Dear Recorder:—It affords me pleasure to say that some of the churches of Kinston have not been dead or asleep during the past two months. At the close of an interesting meeting conducted by the Rev. Mr. Rose, an evangelist of the Presbyterian church, the pastors of the Methodist and Baptist churches united in a series of prayer-meetings, rotating among these two churches. A very pleasant harmony among Christians was apparent, and the Christians who attended had a feast of fat things. Then followed a protracted meeting in the Methodist church. The pastor was assisted by the Presiding Elder and the Rev. Mr. Broom from La Grange. The gospel during the Presbyterian and Methodist meetings was presented in the perfection of simplicity and with a wonderful charm and earnestness. Few unconverted people were reached. Notwithstanding the people had been going to church day and night for many weeks, I received many urgent requests to commence a meeting in my church.

I brought the matter before my members met in conference, and it was unanimously decided to commence a meeting as soon as assistance could be obtained. Having known Rev. T. J. Taylor as a preacher for twenty-seven years, and having labored together in sixteen successful revivals, I felt that I could safely recommend him as a suitable man to assist me. I was made exceedingly happy when he yielded to the solicitation of the church. He preached with great power and tenderness. His whole soul was in the work. There is no undue excitement, no sensationalism in his meetings. He uses the Bible freely, and with earnestness preaches the simple Word. His familiarity with the Scriptures is remarkable. He knows just where to find the passage needed at every turn. Is it any wonder, then, that his work stands the test of time, and that is, a ruin, those converted under him become consistent church members? Genial in manner and tender of heart, chaste and attractive in language, so evidently sincere, that his large congregations never grow weary of hearing him. Twenty-four made a public profession. Ten were received for baptism. Others will soon follow. Several applicants were advised not to apply for baptism until we have another interview with them. This church has a standing rule for applicants for baptism to come before a committee consisting of the pastor and deacons.

Our church is in fine working order. The members at the very beginning of the meeting were stirred to their duty, and labored for the unconverted. The meeting closed without any abatement of interest. I am exceedingly happy to see my church in such fine working order. God be praised.

"And the ark of the Lord remained in the house of Obed-Edom the Gentile three months, and the Lord blessed Obed-Edom and all his house." 1 Ch. 13: 14. It has been seventy years since the ark was captured by the Philistines. During the entire time of their possession it was a source of evil and utter destruction to the inhabitants of every city and place whither it was carried. Whosoever placed his hands on it or looked into it prompted by curiosity was stricken by the Lord. But its presence was a blessing to "Obed-Edom and all his house." Obed-Edom approached the ark from the opposite side to that of the Philistines. He was no idolater in his house. The ark was the symbol of the presence of God to many idol infidels of [illegible] He worshiped God.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

"What Baptists Believe," by the late J. L. Burrows, will be given to every new subscriber to the BIBLICAL RECORDER who will pay $2.00 in advance for a years' subscription. We will also give the book to every old subscriber who will pay his subscription to date and a year in advance.

Think of it! Your denominational paper, the subscription price of which is $2.00, one year, and a neatly bound book of over a hundred pages, containing a clear and fair expression of what Baptists believe and practice, all for the price of the paper.

Remember, this offer is to new and old subscribers alike.

CONVENTION AFTERTHOUGHTS.

After a great deliberative body, such as our Southern Baptist Convention, has adjourned, there is always room for afterthoughts. Take it altogether, the last session of our Convention was one of the largest and most enthusiastic, if not one of the most important, in its history. The Baptists are becoming a great host, and how to reduce the delegation to one great annual gathering is becoming an important question. Dallas, Texas, is so far southwest that the delegation next year is apt to be considerably smaller than it was at Nashville. The necessity of reducing the number of delegates, however, is quite apparent; and yet, how to do it, is indeed somewhat a perplexing question; and it is to be hoped that some feasible solution may be offered by the committee appointed.

The Convention is to be congratulated that the report of the committee on the retirement of missionaries, and that on "mission methods," did not excite the "acrimonious debate" that many of the brethren doubtless feared might be excited by them. Of all people on the globe, Baptists have least to fear, we think, from a free discussion of doctrine, plans of work, methods of Boards, &c. We are certainly no advocate for sudden changes of plans of work which have been adopted, after prayer and free discussion in our deliberative bodies; but there is no harm in an occasional overhauling of plans or methods that are not claimed to be perfect.

The reports of the Foreign, Home and Sunday-school Boards were encouraging. The total contributions for these Boards show a healthy advance over last year. The contributions for the Centennial Permanent Fund are not as large as many of us had hoped, but as the time has been extended, we hope our great brotherhood may yet come nearer to the measure of duty and ability in this line of work. The Centennial Committee deserve the thanks of our people for the zeal with which they prosecuted their work. They are not to blame because the amount thus far collected has fallen below the expectation of many who at the outset were quite sanguine of entire success in this effort within the time first specified.

In the opinion of many, "the speech" of the Convention was made by Dr. B. H. Carroll of Texas on Papal Fields. If his arraignment of Catholicism is just, we have much food for thought when we read of the conduct of some of our representatives at Washington who knelt to kiss the ring on the Pope's legate Satolli, when he, like any other prominent foreigner, is only entitled to that respect which free-born Americans are in the habit of showing to even titled foreigners. The day for big speeches at our Convention has not passed. Give us a great subject, a great occasion, and we will listen patiently to the man that is equal to both of them. Lest this remark should be misunderstood, however, by some of our aspiring brethren, let us add that only a few such speeches are needed at our annual meetings. The days of misplaced oratory have about passed; and much of the matter that claims our attention in our annual gatherings is quite matter-of-fact, and there is too much business for much oratory.

We forgot to say in the proper place that the Convention sermon by Dr. W. E. Hatcher [illegible], Va., was first-class in every [illegible] that sermon moved others as it [illegible] of this, it has carried com- [illegible] many hearts. The days for [illegible] will never pass until the angel [illegible] there "that time which was [illegible] How different the effect [illegible] upon a jaundiced au- [illegible] on a day dispen- [illegible] on dead or living issues! Give us more gospel and less philosophy and science!

The Convention, we think, pursued a wise course about "Young People's Societies" in our churches. It is often the case that something is started among our brethren that the churches comprising our Convention, with their well known conservatism, are rather slow to adopt. In that case, some of our zealous brethren try to get our representative bodies to commit themselves by endorsing the movement, or by recommending certain things to our churches. We do not blame the brethren for making the effort; but if they are disappointed, let them accept the situation cheerfully.

Well, we might say much more; but this will suffice for the present. God be thanked for this great gathering, and for the harmony and brotherly love that marked its proceedings. Now let us with hope face the duties and responsibilities of another year, praying that the Lord of Hosts may go before us.

SINGING AGAIN.

The prime idea in making singing a part of our public worship is that we may honor, praise, or worship God. Subsidiary to this, and in connection with it, is the plan of using song in public worship to comfort the saints and warn the sinner. One other very important idea involved in using song in our public worship is that it is more properly a means of accomplishing good which ought to be under the direct control of converted men and women. Bearing these general statements in mind, some very important and suggestive questions may be asked about the singing we now have in our churches.

One is, do we, as a rule, keep the primal idea of singing in our minds, even when we are singing hymns or psalms that are devoted to the direct praise of Jehovah? We fear that much of the singing we now hear is not such as Paul speaks of when he says, "I will sing with the spirit and with the understanding." We verily believe that there is much power in sacred songs to quicken the spiritual warmth of God's people and to secure spiritual manifestations of God's presence in our assemblies, when our singing is such as the apostle describes. Would it not be well for us, then, to give more attention to the spiritual part of singing? Would it not be well for us to study more carefully ways and means by which our singing in public worship may be carefully guarded against a manifest modern tendency to make it a mere display of musical talent, or a bid for the encomiums of those who study taste and æsthetics, more than they do religion? One can but wish that we had now the notes of that song led by Miriam, the sister of Moses, in which she and the daughters of Israel chanted the praises of Jehovah for delivering them and their people from Egyptian bondage; or the song of Deborah commemorating a later deliverance of her people from a bondage almost as cruel as that of Egypt. Such singing as that would honor God more, and help more speedily to win this world to Christ our Saviour.

And again, if song in our worship is intended to comfort God's people, or warn sinners, ought we not to be more careful about the doctrine of the hymns we sing? It requires no expert in hymnology and Bible doctrine to notice that the doctrine of many hymns that are now quite popular is not at all sound, from a Baptist standpoint. One reason why many hymn-books, containing hymns that embody questionable doctrine, are to be found in many of our churches, is owing to the fact that they are published in cheap form, and hence the masses will buy them. But why cannot our excellent Publication Society at Philadelphia, the Baptist Book Concern at Louisville, Ky., and others that are trying to supply the wants of our churches, keep pace with any reliable publishing house in supplying our people with cheap hymn books? The masses of our people will not buy costly hymn-books; and the sooner our publishers find that out the better it will be for all concerned. According to our observation the "Baptist Hymnal" is the best hymn-book yet published for Baptist churches. Oh, for a cheap edition of the same, or one like it, that could be placed in the hands of the rank and file of our people!

And further, is it best after all, to encourage or invite a general and indiscriminate participation in our singing on the part of the unconverted? Some may say, "By all means encourage them to take an active part in the song service, if in no other part of the worship." But, then, are we not accountable to some extent for the assertions we make, even in song. The Bible teaches us to worship God in song with the spirit and with the understanding, and if we sing in that way we cannot well afford to make assertions that are not true. We somewhat doubt the propriety of the Christian who is cold and careless in God's service, singing, for instance, the hymn commencing with the words:—

"I love thy kingdom, Lord,
The house of thine above;"

because he must be conscious of uttering words which are not true when he comes to the verse that runs thus:—

"For her my tears shall fall,
For her my prayers ascend;
To her my toils and cares be given,
Till toils and cares shall end."

If the point made is well taken in regard to the professor of religion, is it not equally pertinent as applied to the sinner. If we hear of a song that the angels cannot sing, would it not be well for the minister, at times at least, to say, when he announces a hymn, "This is a hymn that my unconverted hearers cannot truthfully sing, and hence they can be silent while it is being sung." It would require tact, great kindness, and real love for the sinner, for the preacher to do this without giving offense; but the unconverted would, after reflection, admire his candor, and realize more fully the gulf that is between the saint and the sinner.

WAKE FOREST COMMENCEMENT.

The fifty-eighth commencement of Wake Forest College was opened by the Class day exercises which took place in Memorial Hall at eight o'clock on Monday night. This has come to be one of the most interesting features of commencement. The program was opened by an address by D. M. Prince, the president, after which the secretary announced that Stephen McIntyre, the orator, would address the audience upon the subject, "Where are We?" The speaker at once went to his subject which consisted of a review of the present situation of politics, finance and religion, closing by an earnest exhortation to his class mates to greater efforts in their chosen life-work.

This was followed by an address by the historian, J. W. Bailey. The address was unique in style and showed the genius of its author from first to last. The enthusiastic account he gave of the athletic record of the Class, and the remarkable progress of the College during the last four years, were received with boundless applause by the audience.

Mr. Wilson, Class poet, was in no way deterred by any such dogma as poeta nascitur non fit, but went on to make just such poetry as suited the occasion and delighted his audience.

Mr. J. C. Kittrell established his claim to a place well up among the minor prophets, as he humorously predicted what would be the careers of the different members of the Class of '93.

At the conclusion of the exercises, the Class repaired to the residence of Dr. Taylor, where an elegant banquet had been served especially for the members of the Graduating Class. We suppose a modest postscript might have been added to the history which had just been recited.

Quite a number of visitors are coming in on every train. To-morrow, Dixon, Daniel and Hiden will be here to take their places in the exercises as they proceed from day to day. The Trustees—a number of whom are already here—will meet to morrow at 10 a. m.

TUESDAY EVENING.

The weather is lovely, everybody seems to be happy in the midst of stirring music, beautiful girls, and the greeting of old friends who assemble in Memorial Hall to listen to the Alumni address, which was delivered by W. E. Daniel of Weldon, N. C. Many of us who knew the speaker here twenty years ago, and since in his successful business career, were prepared to appreciate the good things which were in store for the audience. After being introduced by Dr. J. B. Powers, the president of the Alumni Association, the speaker announced as his subject, "The Duty of a College Graduate to the People." The speaker said he wished he might speak some word that would encourage the sympathy that ought to be felt by each one for his neighbor. We know too little of, and care less for, him who is a stone's throw from us: that this is true is partly owing to our system of education. An alumnus ought to know the people, their thoughts and their lives, not as the demagogue, but know them to benefit them, to elevate them, and to do them good. Various reasons were given for the wide-spread distrust and agitation which existed among the people. It is the duty of the educated to study and investigate the causes of this distrust and agitation, in order to help the unfortunate and oppressed.

The speaker said with emphasis that a College education ought not to remove a man from one who is not so highly favored. There ought to be a connection between all men—so linked together that the lifting of the one would lift the other. Any other sort of education was in a great measure a failure. Ignorance is not always a sign of weak-mindedness, but a condition from which many are not able to rise. We should study the people if we would overcome the demagogue.

Having done this, it is the duty of an alumnus to take an intelligent interest in the politics of his country. I have only space to note the last point made by the speaker: that we should at all times and under all circumstances stand for justice and for the interest of our alma mater. [I should be sorry to present such a meagre report of this excellent address, but for the fact it will appear in the Wake Forest Student just as it was delivered.]

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

This, to many, is the favorite day in the commencement. To day we have the literary address, and to-night the sermon before the graduating class.

At 11 o'clock Memorial Hall is full with people eager to listen to the address to be delivered by Dr. J. C. Hiden of Richmond, Va. After prayer by Dr. Thos. E. Skinner, the speaker was introduced by Dr. Thos. H. Pritchard. Time has been kind to the Doctor in adding some additional pounds to his weight of some years ago, and the luster of his keen black eye has been in no way dimmed. A few introductory sentences in which sparkled the characteristic wit and sly humor of the speaker, brought him to his subject, the "Life and Literary Works of Edgar Allen Poe." The learned Doctor did not attempt to discover anything new in the life of Poe, but took some incidents in his life, using them as hooks upon which he hung all sorts of wise observations on life and literature, anecdotes of literary men, and witty jokes. The Doctor declared that the poetry of Poe was superior, when only twenty years old, to Pope and Byron at their best.

After reciting, with fine effect, some extracts from Poe's works, which he claimed were unexcelled, he declared that his prose was even better than his poetry. His poetry, said the speaker, had no tendency either to make men better or worse; that it was without moral effect, and was in no way influenced by local habitation. The Raven might as well have been written in India as in Richmond.

The address was just such a production as might be expected from Dr. Hiden. His advice to literary aspirants was, if not encouraging, wise and timely.

The sentiments of the audience were truly expressed by Dr. Taylor, who said Dr. Hiden had not brought us an attempt at oratory, but had given us the pure gold and beaten oil, the thought and labor of a lifetime.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

The baccalaureate sermon was preached by Rev. A. C. Dixon of Brooklyn, N. Y., from Rev. 5: 12, "Worthy is the lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory and blessing." The text was discussed under two main divisions, the standard of worthiness and the extent of the same.

The sermon was from first to last full of the pure gospel, full of love. When God shuts out earth, he opens heaven. The strength of the Christian is in his lamb-likeness. Jesus is worthy. Jesus is God. Christ on the cross, not on the sea, reached the climax of his glory. The woman who gave all, has been praised through the ages. He who grasps, is despised. A railroad king died some months ago, and not a newspaper in all the land had a complimentary notice of him. Worthy is the life spent for others. The sacrifice on the cross is the measure of the adoration to which Christ is worthy. The word influence is mentioned only once in the Bible. All the influence on earth could not save a single soul. The word which goes hand in hand with God is power. The apostles did not possess enough influence to keep them out of jail, but they had power enough to break the bars of the prison walls. We are only stewards of wealth, not partners with God. The man who walks with God, not who wants God to walk with him, is powerful.

The sermon was truly a great one, the epigramatic style of the preacher, the pungency of his sentences, held the great audience with marked interest till the last word was said.

THURSDAY MORNING.

The weather is perfect—a typical commencement day. Twenty-three boys are to graduate. Over twenty two of these, mothers, sisters, and loved ones are rejoicing all over the State. One whose diploma was ready came not to claim it, for just a few hours after the ceremonies of his class were over, his spirit went to God who gave it. I wish I could give a brief sketch of the speeches delivered: they are all worthy of such mention, but my space is already taken up, and I can only give the following program of the exercises of Thursday, the addresses and orations being interspersed with music:

Salutatory Address. Charles P. Sapp, Concord.

Oration—Jefferson Davis. E. Yates Webb, Shelby.

Oration—The Modern Sphinx. Josiah C. Kittrell.

Oration—Our Southern Sister. Samuel J. Porter, Orton.

Oration—The Message of Modern Science. Rufus W. Weaver, Greensboro.

Oration—Modern Epicureanism. Isaac T. Newton, Fayetteville.

Valedictory Address. Franklin P. Hobgood, Oxford.

Thesis—Norse Mythology. J. Elbert Austin, Clayton.

Thesis—Critical Review of a Four Years' Course in Greek. J. William Bailey, Raleigh.

Thesis—Grecian Mythology. George W. Blanton, Shelby.

Thesis—A Crisis in American History. Charles H. Durham, Shelby.

Thesis—Blood. D. Milton Gaddy, Polkton.

Thesis—The Relationship between Recent Political Revolution and Industrial Strikes. William A. Jones, Hillsboro.

Thesis—Reigns of the Antoines. Everett B. Lattimore, Shelby.

Thesis—The Present Influence of Capital is Antagonistic to our National Prosperity. Stephen McIntyre, Ford.

Thesis—Martin Luther. Jesse D. Moore, Jr., Globe.

Thesis—Athletics, Ancient and Modern. David M. Prince, Goldsboro.

Thesis—Charles Darwin. George H. Ross, Durham.

Thesis—Intellectual Activity of the Periclean Age. William A. Smith, Hadley's Mills.

Thesis—Female Costume, its influence on Health. Claude W. Wilson, Ascend.

Thesis—"Watchman, What of the Night?" John A. Wray, Knoxville.

Thesis—Roman Laws: Origin and Development. Alvis M. Yates, Williams' Mills.

Thesis—Freedom of the Will. J. Judson Young, Polenta.

At the conclusion of the speeches, Dr. Taylor, in some tender and well chosen remarks, took leave of the class of '93. The address of Dr. Taylor will be published in the next issue of the RECORDER.

Hon. John C. Scarborough, who, in the absence of Dr. Marsh, acted as president of the Board of Trustees, read the report of that body. The report showed that the Trustees had determined in a vigorous and active campaign in the interest of Wake Forest College, and to accomplish this an agent is to be put in the field to assist Dr. Taylor in getting both money and students for the College.

The degree of D. D. was conferred upon H. W. Battle of Petersburg, Va., and Rev. A. T. Robinson of Louisville, Ky.

The Trustees recommend that $30,000 be raised for the endowment of the William Royall Chair inasmuch as the Educational Society offer to give us $5,000 if this shall be done.

The Trustees also decided upon the establishment of a law department here at once. A committee was appointed to take the necessary steps to secure this by the opening of the Fall session.

Also, a committee was appointed to arrange for the establishing a department of medicine at the same time.

The following Trustees were elected to fill vacancies which have occurred since last meeting of the Board: N. Y. Gulley, J. N. Holding, C. J. Hunter, E. K. Proctor, and Dr. J. W. McLendon.

W. N. Jones, Esq., was elected attorney for the College in place of W. H. Pace, deceased.

The handsomest banquet ever held in the State was given by the Local Alumni Association and prepared by the famous caterer, Mr. Dught of Raleigh. The spread consisted of eight courses furnished to 150 plates. The following toasts were proposed and responded to:

The '40's greeting to '90's. Dr. Thos. E. Skinner and W. W. Kitchin.

Wake Forest hails the public schools and pledges its hearty co-operation in the effort to secure the opportunity of elementary education to every child in North Carolina, by J. F. Spainhour and E. E. Hilliard.

Three hundred students at Wake Forest next session—J. L. White and G. W. Sanderlin.

The Students Aid Fund—It gives the young man a college training without compromising his independence and self-respect—J. B. Carlyle and D. W. Herring.

The William Royall Memorial Chair—A. C. Dixon and J. E. White.

Dr. Thos. H. Pritchard, as toast master, was perfectly at home.

At the close of the exercises, Dr. Durham gave an opportunity to those present to subscribe to the fund for the William Royal Memorial Chair, and in a few minutes $3,600 was subscribed: $175 of this amount was given by the class of '93.

We have never had a commencement equal in interest to the one just closed. There has never been an effort made for the College equal to the one which will be made during the next year. We expect to see more than three hundred students at the College next year. J. C. C.

REV. A. C. DIXON of Brooklyn, N. Y., preached in the Tabernacle of Raleigh before very large audiences morning and night on Sunday. It was a great pleasure to his many friends in these parts to greet him; and to listen to his earnest and able presentation of the gospel of Jesus Christ. The pastor, Dr. J. J. Hall, gave the hand of fellowship to seven persons, and two were received for baptism.

OXFORD FEMALE SEMINARY.

The commencement exercises of Oxford Female Seminary were begun by the sermon before the missionary society which was preached by Rev. C. C. Newton of Lagos, Africa. This was followed by the sermon before the graduating class, which was preached by Dr. T. G. Jones of Norfolk, Va.

From 10 to 12 o'clock the large and appreciative audience, which assembled in the Opera House, was highly entertained by a splendid rendition of the following program of the Annual Concert on Monday, May 29:

PART I.

Chorus—Moonlight Invitation. Veazie.
Marche. Katie Jeter, Minnie Kronheimer, Lula Knott.
When the Heart is Young—Dudley Buck. Carrie Hobgood.
Minuett—Paderewski. Lizzie Outlaw.
With the Stream—Tours. Marie Dennis and Carrie Hobgood.
Waltz—2 pianos, 8 hands—Moszkowski—Carrie Hobgood, Ella Petty, Lizzie Outlaw, Helen Cannady.

PART II.

Hungarian Dance—Brahms. Jessie Brevard and Susie Gooch.
Polka de la Reine—Raff. Carrie Hobgood.
Bobolink—Bischoff. Marie Dennis.
Overture—Euryanthe—Weber. Fannie Kronheimer, Lou Long, Carrie Hobgood, Mary Currin.
Rhapsodie Hongroise, No. 2—Liszt. Marie Dennis.
Chorus—Merry June—Vincent.
Marshals—Ora Jones, Mattie George, Lizzie Knott, Hettie Wright, Kate Montague, Minnie Bass.
Flower Girls—Annie Williams, Ella Peace, Annie Cannady.

The literary address was delivered on Monday night by Dr. W. E. Hatcher of Richmond, Va. There is no North Carolina audience which does not delight to honor Dr. Hatcher. He is no stranger in Oxford, and those who had heard him on other occasions were only the more delighted to hear him again. His subject, "The Art of Good Living," was discussed under the following heads: 1. Self Respect. 2. A Proper Appreciation of our Environments. 3. That which is in the Future. Each of these divisions was elaborated by the speaker with a skill and appropriateness which met the hearty appreciation of the fine audience to which he spoke.

Tuesday morning was a typical commencement day. There seemed to be a sort of race between the song of the birds, the fragrance of the flowers, and the joy and delight which rested on the faces of the thirteen girls who were to receive their diplomas to-day. After prayer by Rev. C. C. Newton of Africa, the young ladies mentioned in the program read essays and received degrees of graduation from President Hobgood. The following is the program observed for CLASS DAY.

Prayer.
Jubel Overture—Weber. Carrie Hobgood, Mary Currin, Lou Long, Ruth Ferebee.
Salutatory and Essay—Waiting. Eva Carlton.
Essay—Wandering Islands. Marie Dennis.
Essay—Love's Ideal. Florence Culler.
La Stella de Nevado (song)—Giorza. Marie Dennis.
Essay—What! I the Weaker Vessel? Essie Watson.
Essay—Echoes. Isabel Horner.
Essay—A Wonderful Machine. Pearl Tuck.
Capriccio Brilliante, Op. 22—Mendelssohn. Marie Dennis. Second piano, Miss Marvin.
Essay—The Soul Brothers. Ruth Ferebee.
Essay—Egotism. Lou Long.
Essay—Beyond the Alps Lies Italy. Ella Petty.
You (song)—Robyn. Marie Dennis.
Essay and Valedictory—Amplius. Stella Jenkens.
Awarding distinctions and conferring diplomas.
Marshals—Annie Gooch, Ella Montague, Mary McGuire, Susie Cowell, Lilla Shanks, Louise Sloan.
Flower Girls—Maggie Currin, Nimmie Rice, Scotia Hobgood.

I regretted to have to leave before the entire program was completed. The essays were exceptionally fine, and reflected much credit both on the young ladies and their teachers.

The Art department was superb and had a full share of the attention of all who came to enjoy the delightful exercises which were of the highest order from first to last.

We noted with pleasure the many improvements in buildings, in apparatus, and on the grounds, which will make the school even the more desirable for the next session than heretofore.

A large number of the patrons of the school from different portions of the State were present to enjoy the exercises and to give evidence of the satisfaction with the success and merits of the institution.

We regret that we have not the space to give a more elaborate and just account of the delightful exercises, but we hope from time to time to have the pleasure of commending the excellencies of this school to the people of our State. J. C. C.

....Rev. J. H. Lamberth of Greenville left on Monday, May 29th, to attend the commencements of the Chowan Baptist Female Institute and Wake Forest. Thence he goes to his old home at Roxboro to spend a short time. He will be engaged in evangelistic work in Virginia the remainder of the summer.

....Rev. Mr. Jenkins of the Baptist church preached an appropriate and excellent sermon in our Chapel last Sunday afternoon to the children. Everybody was charmed with him and his fine sermon on Samson's strength. We are glad to know that he will preach for us regularly.—The Orphan's Friend.

....Rev. Frank Dixon of Oakland, Cal., will preach in the Baptist church of the Epiphany, Madison avenue and Sixty-fourth street, during the whole month of June—morning and evening. Mr. Dixon is the youngest of the Dixon preachers, composed of the father, of North Carolina; Rev. A. C. Dixon of Hanson Place church, Brooklyn; Rev. Thomas Dixon of the Twenty-third street church, this city, and the coming Californian. He is but twenty-seven years old, two years younger than Thomas. His first pastorate was in Charlestown, W. Va., near Harper's Ferry, where he had much prosperity as a pastor, and won great distinction by his eloquence throughout all Northern Virginia and Maryland. His brothers admit that he is the brightest preacher of the family, and and the professors of Wake Forest College, where all were students, declare him to be "the brainiest;" which is not faint praise. As he has never preached in New York he will attract attention among Baptists here, where his brother is so well known, who will make their own comparisons. Our readers will remember his admirable letters from the Pacific Coast in these columns.—N. Y. Examiner.

....We greatly sympathize with Brother and Sister Gaddy in the death of their son at Wake Forest College, which occurred on the day of his graduation.

....Bro. M. P. Matheney, Lincolnton, says that his party will leave Charlotte over the S. A. L. on the night of June 22d, and will spend ten days in Chicago. The lodging arragements are all made, and the fourteen days' trip need not cost over sixty dollars. From Atlanta there will be a solid vestibule train through to Chicago without change. Tickets can be sent to persons and they can strike the S. A. L. at the nearest point. The train will pass Raleigh at 8:15 p. m., and Hamlet 11 p. m. This is a good time to see the country, and rates are not likely to be lower. The cholera has appeared in Hamburg, Germany, and may reach this country before August 1st. Write to Bro. Matheney at Lincolnton for further particulars.

Our Theological Seminary is closing its most prosperous year. The number of students (260) is greater that ever before, and it is the largest institution of the kind of any denomination in the United States.

We go to press just on the eve of commencement exercises which promise to be of unusual interest. These exercises are in the Walnut street church, the new chapel not being quite ready. Dr. J. B. Marvin delivers an address on Wednesday at 11 a. m., on "Our Secret Friends and Foes." Not "fees," as one of the daily papers got it, although it would be interesting to hear Dr. Marvin on "fees."

On Thursday at 11 a. m., there will be the delivery of diplomas to graduates in the special schools, and there will be an address from the Rev. J. T. Dickinson of New Jersey, an alumnus of the Seminary. Thursday night the full graduates will receive their diplomas. The following brethren are expected to be full graduates, although all the examinations are not concluded at the time we write:

D. Y. Bagby, Kentucky; Weston Bruner, Kentucky; W. T. Creath, Virginia; Marion Gassaway, South Carolina; W. W. Hamilton, Virginia; Grant S. Housh, Indiana; C. T. Kincanon, Kentucky; R. P. Lucado, Tennessee; W. H. Major, Tennessee; V. I. Masters, South Carolina; N. Maynard, Maryland; W. B. McGarrity, Georgia; M. E. Parrish, Virginia; J. R. Pentuff, South Carolina; J. S. Sowers, Virginia; T. P. Stafford, Missouri; and D. G. Whittinghill, Kentucky.

All these brethren have prepared addresses, but the faculty decided that time would not admit of more than seven speeches, and the following brethren were chosen to speak. We give their subjects also.

The Rev. D. Y. Bagby, "Liberality" in Religion.

The Rev. W. W. Hamilton, The Preacher's Pay.

The Rev. Grant S. Housh, Searching for Truth.

The Rev. W. H. Major, Unfinished Things.

The Rev. V. I. Masters, Convictions.

The Rev. W. B. McGarity, Efficient Belief.

The Rev. M. E. Parrish, Some Prevalent Notions about Preachers.

We give the names in alphabetical order, rather than in the order of the programme. There will also be an address from the faculty. Beside these seventeen full graduates, it is expected there will be twelve English course, and four Eclectic graduates, making thirty-three in all. Several of the full graduates will return and pursue post graduate studies, with a view to the degree of Th. D.

We hope next year the Seminary will have more than 300 students and that it will not be long until the dream of the lamented Boyce will be fulfilled, and the number of students will be 500. The idea that the Seminary should not have but 100 students is grotesquely ridiculous.—Western Recorder.

Meeting at Scotland Neck.

Dear Recorder:—We have just enjoyed a season of two weeks under the ministry of Bro. Lamberth. Though he directed his sermons mainly to the church, they reached the ungodly, too, and ten souls were added to us by baptism, while about the same number of others made profession of faith. Our people were delighted and strengthened by the pure, strong food on which the preacher fed them. I have to beg the brother's pardon for the injustice I had done him. I had always regarded him as a wholehearted, good-natured, delightful fellow, and a so-so kind of preacher. I had no idea of his power as a preacher. I also beg the pardon of the Roxboro saints, and especially of Brother and Sister Foushee, because they will think I ought to have known better. I do know better now.

We have baptized occasionally from our regular services since I came here, and trust that with the blessing of God immediate fruits from the regular ministry of the Word may yet more abound. Why not? Our three mission Sunday schools are running well, while our own school keeps at high water-mark.

May the blessing of God rest on you, dear Bro. Bailey, and may he be pleased to give you back to your work and your brethren.

Cordially yours, R. T. VANN.

Scotland Neck, June 2, 1893.

P. S. I ought to have mentioned in the proper place the presence and very valuable services of Bro. L. R. Carroll of Warsaw. He came among us a stranger to most of our people and took away the warm affection and esteem of all. Happy is the brother who has his assistance in meeting, and happier still the pastor who numbers him among his flock. We have hopes and plans concerning Bro. Carroll of which you may hear by and by. May they all mature.

Littleton Items.

Tuesday night, May 23d, witnessed one of the most interesting occasions in the history of this church.

While the work on our church is not completed, the baptistery was in a fine condition for use, and twelve candidates, eight ladies and four gentlemen, were buried with Christ in baptism. I never witnessed a more beautiful scene of the kind. It was indeed an object lesson, occurring just after Dr. Mitchell had read suitable extracts from the New Testament showing how our Lord had submitted to the same ordinance administered in the same way. Our church is on the up grade.

The ladies contemplate putting at an early day an elegant suit of furniture in the new pulpit.

CLOSING EXERCISES of LITTLETON HIGH SCHOOL.

On Thursday night, May 25th, the assembly room of the school building was filled by an intelligent and appreciative audience. At the appointed hour, the principal, Prof. L. W. Bagley, introduced Dr. J. B. Powers of Wake Forest, who in a masterly manner showed us "The Way to Fortune." His manner was earnest, and captivated the hearts of all who heard him.

On Thursday night the program was made up of chorus, declamations and orations by the students of the school. From the applause we would judge the audience were highly entertained. The judges awarded the prize for the best declamation to D. W. Newsom, which was happily presented by S. G. Daniel, Esq., a rising young lawyer of our town.

After the speaking was over, the principal informed us that the teacher in penmanship, Prof. P. B. Gibson, would spend the summer at Columbus, Ohio, in the Zanerian (Pen) Art School, the foremost school of its kind in the United States. It has been only six years since the present building was erected, but during this session the school has reached the limit of its present capacity, and it is contemplated to put up another large building which will probably be done during the present summer. Back Swamp Academy.

One year and a half ago, Mr. J. A. Barker our present principal after having taught a term of public school for us, was asked to continue the school by private subscription. This he undertook with a guarantee of only twenty pupils. Through the perseverance of our principal and the determined efforts and fervent prayers of Christian people, a growing interest in the cause of education has prevailed among us and to day the success which has crowned our school is far above the expectation of the most sanguine. Surely the Lord is blessing us profusely. With the efficient help of his accomplished assistant, Miss L. E. Marsh, together with the especial low rates of expense to students, Mr. Barker's school is fast taking its stand among the best in our county.

Now to our main object in commencing this article. That eloquent and zealous man of God, Rev. F. H. Martin, pastor of the Baptist church at Lumberton, will deliver the literary address at the closing exercises of our school, eleven o'clock a. m., June 21.

The declamation medal contest will take place in the afternoon. We hope to see a large audience to hear Bro. Martin.

King's Mountain High School.

The commencement of the King's Mountain High School came off last week, and was quite an enjoyable affair.

The literary address was delivered by Dr. Pritchard of Charlotte, and it was a rare and most unique literary production, and stamped the Doctor as a genius of marked ability and broad resources. His fund of general information is rich, varied and inexhaustible, and his address was highly appreciated by all present. The audience was cultured, refined and appreciative, and the appreciation of audience and speaker was mutual. Your church should well be proud of your gifted and venerable preacher. Long may he live to do good.

At night a spicy entertainment by the pupils delighted the very large audience. Grave and comic speeches, interspersed with vocal and instrumental music, kept the enthusiasm of all present at fever heat.

This scholastic year has been one of rare excellence and genuine and successful work, and the future is full of much promise. Mr. J. A. Monroe, the principal, contemplates enlarging the facilities for a broader and more varied work.

This is a lovely section noted for healthfulness, beautiful scenery, moral, energetic and progressive people, and this little town is booming. J. A. M.

On the night of May 31st, fire consumed the Wesleyan Female College at Murfreesboro, N. C. No one was hurt. The teachers and pupils suffered a slight loss of clothing. Insurance on building $10,000.

An Indiana Miracle.

A CASE THAT HAS ATTRACTED MUCH ATTENTION.

A WELL KNOWN CITIZEN WHOSE LIFE WAS DESPAIRED OF IS AGAIN ENJOYING HEALTH AND STRENGTH—THE PARTICULARS OF HIS REMARKABLE CURE AS RELATED TO A REPORTER OF THE CRAWFORDSVILLE JOURNAL.

Crawfordsville, Ind., Journal.

There is probably no man better known in this city than G. M. Johnson, or "Mit," as he is familiarly called by everybody. Six months ago it was the common remark that "poor Mit had but a few more days of his life," his physical condition being such that not one of his hundreds of friends had the slightest hope of his surviving the summer. He had about abandoned all hope himself, evidently, and was confined to his room and bed, unable to walk or to attend to any business whatever. A representative of this paper who has enjoyed an intimate acquaintance with Mr. Johnson for a long number of years, met him walking briskly up street to-day, and in astonishment inquired of him what had brought so wonderful a change in his appearance and condition.

"What has done all this, Mr. Johnson?" was the question put to him.

"Well, sir, four p's did it, and what I mean by four p's is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, a remedy which I consider invaluable."

Our reporter was at once interested, and asked Mr. Johnson to give him briefly the particulars of his illness and his wonderful cure. "Well," said Mr. Johnson, "for a number of years I have had a complication of troubles, the most serious being spinal and nervous trouble, which as you know brought me pretty near death's gate. My friends despaired of my recovery, and I had but little hope myself of ever being about actively again. My health kept going from bad to worse until I became perfectly helpless. I was unable to walk a step; could not sleep, had no appetite, I just lived and suffered and could not die to get relief. Physicians did me no good; neither did all the other remedies I tried, and I believe I have taken enough medicine in the last few years to stock a drug store. I was in this miserable, helpless condition when a friend called my attention to a remarkable cure through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and urged me to try them. I felt that perhaps it was a last chance, and procured a supply of Pink Pills from Messrs. Nye & Booe, the well-known druggists. That was about six months ago, and you see what they have done for me. I am a new man now. I had not been taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills long when I began to find an improvement. I saw that I had at last hit upon a remedy that had virtue in it; hope returned and I continued to use the pills and continued to improve in health and strength, and while I am not the stoutest man in the city I am a new man altogether. I feel well, eat heartily, sleep soundly, the dizzy, nervous trouble has entirely left. I can walk briskly and am enjoying life as of yore. I consider this Pink Pill remedy a wonderful one, and have recommended it to a number of my friends who have been similarly afflicted. Why, I cannot recommend the remedy too highly. Just think, for nearly a year I could not stand up to take a drink of water without getting blind from dizziness, and the most excruciating pains would seize me, and during these paroxysms I suffered untold agony. I am now entirely free from these pains, and I really have faith that I will soon be as sound as a dollar."

"Well, Mr. Johnson, your friends are gratified to see you so much better, and we hope that others may be benefited by the same means."

"Just say to any one that wants information that I will freely give them any information they may desire on the subject, and will only be too glad to see some of my friends benefited in the same way. I know some who are in need of something right now, and will urge them to try the four p's. There is nothing in my opinion to equal them, and as I said in the start, I have tried all the remedies advertised."

Mr. Johnson can be seen any day at his place of business on Green street, and any one desiring further information in regard to his case should call on him. It is surely almost a miraculous case, and one which attracts a great deal of attention.

Our reporter then called upon Messrs. Nye & Booe, the well-known druggists, who said they consider Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People a wonderful remedy. It is less than a year since they began to sell Pink Pills and in that time the sale has grown to such an extent as to be remarkable. Messrs. Nye & Booe said there were many in Crawfordsville besides Mr. Johnson who had reason to be grateful to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for restord health and strength. Indeed, every one who uses Pink Pills speaks of them in the highest terms.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not a patent medicine in the sense in which that term is usually understood, but are a scientific preparation successfully used in general practice for many years before being offered to the public generally. They contain in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood, and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexion, that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases depending upon vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood and restore the glow of health to pale or sallow cheeks. In the case of men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature.

These Pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and Brockville, Ont., and are sold only in boxes bearing the firm's trade mark and wrapper, at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50. Bear in mind that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are never sold in bulk or by the dozen or hundred, and any one who offers substitutes in this form is trying to defraud you and should be shunned. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from the Medicine Company, from whom pamphlet. The price at which these pills makes a course of treatment inexpensive as compared with other remedies or medical treatment.

Looking in the Wrong Direction.

Some one tells a story of a man, who was about to appropriate to his own use something belonging to his neighbor. He looked all around, carefully, to see that he was unobserved, when his little son, who was with him, said, "Father you are looking in the wrong direction—look up! God sees you!" This changed his mind, and his neighbor's property escaped. This anecdote leads to the inquiry, if much of the trouble, and failure of Christian lives does not come from a failure to look in the right direction. Let us see.

If there is anything clearer, in the light of Scripture, than anything else, it is that Christians are designed to be the happiest of men. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on Thee," says the Old Testament—"Rejoice in the Lord always, and again I say rejoice," says the New. With this continuous, and permanent peace of the child of God—with this perennial fountain of joy, not all the storms of life, not all the power of "the world and the flesh, and the Devil," can interfere, if he only live and walk as God designed he should. But, alas, how few do this. Instead, therefore, of finding a happy and rejoicing Christianity, we too often find a limp and lifeless thing, neither comforting to its posessors, nor attractive to others. Why is this? Is it not due to looking in the wrong direction?

In the first place, we are prone to look within ourselves for the sources of our salvation, the reasons why God accepts us. But, there are in that direction, no reasons. We are not, never have been, and never will be anything in this life but miserable sinners, wholly unworthy of the least of God's mercies. We do not deserve—the best of us—this life, and its mercies, much less eternal life, and its glories. When we look to ourselves, therefore, for conditions of salvation, the look is one of disappointment, and mortification, and despair. It is looking in the wrong direction. All God's reasons for human salvation are found, only found, in his electing love, the good pleasure of his own will—all the meritorious grounds upon which it rests, the death and merits of his Son. This is the direction to look—out of self, and to Christ. Here is peace—here is comfort—here is "joy unspeakable and full of glory."

Again, much of the failure of living useful Christian lives grows out of looking in the wrong direction. "This is the will of God, even your sanctification," says an inspired Apostle. God has "before ordained" good works for his people. The Saviour, who says, "Follow me!" set an example of "going about doing good." He invites and expects his people to follow him. Earnest consecration of heart and life, of time and talents, of influence and means, is the duty of all Christians. It is the normal law of their development, as well, and condition precedent to their happiness, as also of their usefulness. In this world of forces, physical, mental, moral, Christianity was designed to be the most forceful, the most helpful. From its very nature, from its God-given purpose and end, it cannot be a mere negation. Forever, then, must it scorn the inquiry, in determining its action, "Will it do harm?" merely. No, it has no time to waste on simple negations. More burning, far, is its inquiry, "Will it do good?" This is its measurement of duty. Its electricity is all positive, not negative. It is not enough for it that the thing proposed may not be wrong or hurtful, if it is not at the same time positively right, useful, helpful. If such act does not, positively, help it on to man's disenthrallment and the world's redemption from sin, it will none of it. Alas! how many Christians fall short of the standard here, and fail of useful and happy lives. They start out looking in the wrong direction, and feel at liberty to do anything and everything in which they can see no harm, thus wasting time, talents, influence, money, that they are under obligations, as high as heaven, as deep as hell, and as lasting as eternity, to devote to God, and to positive efforts for the advancement of his glory.

Does not much of the inefficiency of the Christianity of the present day have its source here?—this substitution for a heart-warm, blood-earnest, positive and mighty life-force, ever throbbing with the impulse of doing good, of a weak, emasculated, limp and lifeless thing, content if it can believe itself doing no harm. Ah! brother, there is no usefulness, no comfort, no joy, while you keep looking in that direction. Don't ask yourself, "Is there any harm in this?"—but the nobler question, born of a truer and grander conception of life and its duties, of the world and its necessities, "Is there any good in this?" and you will find usefulness, likewise happiness, in following where it leads. God has eternally wedded happiness to the positive, earnest doing of good. Brother, don't try to separate them—there are no divorces allowed in Heaven's Chancery. W. A. M.

From Head to Foot

you feel the good that's done by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It purifies the blood. And through the blood, it cleanses, repairs, and invigorates the whole system.

In recovering from "La Grippe," or in convalescence from pneumonia, fevers, or other wasting diseases, nothing can equal it as an appetizing, restorative tonic to build up needed flesh and strength. It rouses every organ into natural action, promotes all the bodily functions, and restores health and vigor.

For every disease that comes from a torpid liver or impure blood, dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, and the most stubborn skin, scalp, or scrofulous affections, the "Discovery" is the only remedy so certain that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

Secularizing the Ministerial Calling.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—According to promise I write you an article on the growing tendency of the ministry to secularize their calling. It is painfully evident to me that there is a tendency in this direction. The indications of this are apparent. Let us notice some.

The ministry is gravely deficient upon the point of self-sacrifice. We are living for self rather than for Christ. We preach to live rather than live to preach. These thoughts are appalling, but I verily believe them true. I gravely fear that after having preached the gospel to others I myself should be a castaway, and I fear this for others also.

We are secular. We think too much about support and too little about the lost condition of our race. We are so careful and troubled about many things that we forget the one thing needful. I don't mean that we get too much for our work, but I mean that we think too much about what we ought to get. It is my conviction if we were more interested in the spiritual welfare of the people they would be more interested in our temporal welfare. If we would give more of ourselves to them, they would give more of what they have to us. If we would live for them they would live for us.

The worst feature about this is that the young ministry is following in our footsteps. They come from school in debt, and feel that they cannot afford to take work for less than they could get in other callings, and frequently they demand more. This ought not so to be. They ought to seek the wilderness, fall back upon God and prove the reality of their calling. They can never preach till they feel their dependence upon God, and they can never depend upon him so long as they can find anything else upon which to depend. If our young men would go to school to the Master for a few years after they come out of our colleges and seminaries, they would have much more power with men. Go into the back woods, brother, where there are no schools or churches. This is the best sort of soil in which to plant yourself in the beginning of your ministry. The town and cities are not the places for our young ministers. There is no room there to take root, and you will be all top in spite of yourself.

I know some of the laity are glad to hear me speak thus of the preachers, but they are in the same boat with us, and God only knows where we shall land. I know, too, there is a better side to this subject, and thank God for it, but I have looked at the worst side as a warning and as a spur to better things.

Yours very truly,
R E PEELE.

Death of Rev. A. Stamey.

Rev. A. Stamey died April 29th, 1893, at the age of seventy one years, five months and fourteen days. Bro. Stamey had been a strict member of the church since October 15th, 1843, and was licensed to preach in the year 1851, and ordained at Yorkville, S. C., by James O. Anderson, Nov. 23d, 1856. He was a very earnest, faithful preacher, and did much for the advancement of the cause of Christ. He had been very ill for a considerable time, but on April 29th, 1893, the angel of death visited him and wafted his spirit to the realms of endless rest, "a house not made with hands eternal in the heavens," where he is now, no doubt, enjoying the rest that remaineth for the people of God. Several months ago God in his infinite wisdom and goodness laid the hand of affliction on him, which he bore with much patience. He sang that beautiful old hymn, "I would not live always," a short time before his death.

His body is now confined to the narrow limits of the tomb, but that immortal example of his lives yet. He leaves a wife and several children, with a host of friends to mourn our loss, though our loss is his eternal gain.

Bro. Stamey's sympathizing heart has ceased to beat, yet he preaches. He can't comfort his family as he once could, but his works still live.

Farewell, dear brother, till we meet
Before the throne of God above,
And cast our crowns at Jesus' feet
And sing the triumphs of his love.

In Our New House.

Dear Recorder:—Last Sunday we had services for the first time in our new house at Cherry's Cross Roads—Gethsemane. Large and attentive congregations attended the morning and night services. A visiting brother said: "It is remarkable to see a church here, and only commenced preaching here in this section last August." It will be a splendid house when it is finished. O that we had the money to finish it!

The following churches and friends have paid to me since my last acknowledgements in the RECORDER for this object: Flat Rock ch., Central Asso., $1.00; New Hope ch., Central Asso., $1.00; Apex ch., Raleigh Asso., $2.10; Hickory ch., Tar River Asso., $1.85; Swift Creek Union, $9.24; L. W. Bagley, $1.00; Mrs. Pitt, $1.00; Mrs. S. Griffin, $1.00. Thank you.

Going to meeting ought to mean going to meet God. Does it in your case? Is God your chief thought as you go up to the sanctuary?—Western Recorder.

Sensationalism in the pulpit is a good thing provided the sensation is of the right kind. If men be made to feel their condition as sinners, and their need of a Saviour and are led to yearn for a higher and better life, then sensation is not only allowable but necessary. But that sensation which arises from premeditated oddity and eccentricity is wrong and will in the end prove disastrous. Some preachers we have seen who study the Bible not for gospel treasures but for strange and striking texts. Others there are who go out of their way to tamper with things which have no bearing upon the work of the preacher. But these men flaunt their banners, make a great noise, people follow them and alas, alas, the church members too often say, "What a great preacher we have." All the while, however, the spiritual nature of the congregation is starving for the Bread of Life. Somebody has very truly said, "Sensationalism in the pulpit is the product, as it is the proof, of a small mind."—Central Baptist.

"I am the vine, ye are the branches." The branches are the very same wood as the vine, and the very same sap pervades them both. And they that are joined to the Lord are of one spirit. The same mind is in them which was also in Christ Jesus.—Jay.

John Y. MacRae, druggist, Raleigh, N. C., recommends Johnson's Magnetic Oil, the great family pain killer, internal and external.

Often the most useful Christians are those who serve their Master in little things; he never despises the day of small things, or else he would not hide his oaks in tiny acorns, or the wealth of a wheat field in bags of little seeds.—Cuyler.

The Love of Books.

The book world, like the worlds of trade and politics, has its different classes of men, each of which, as the observant lounger in a popular book-store knows, is well worth studying. In such a place, in the course of an hour, you may meet the representatives of all these classes, and note their peculiarities with no little amusement and profit. There you may see the bibliophile, or lover of books, and the bibliomaniac, or the man with a passion for acquiring books, as, of course, you are sure to see the bibliopole, or bookseller, and are not unlikely to run across a bibliopegist, or bookbinder. The two persons, however, that are of especial interest to the student of human nature in a place of this kind are the bibliomaniac and the bibliophile, and of them we are moved to say something.

The bibliomaniac, as his name implies, is, as a Scotchman would say, more or less "daft" on the subject of books. It is books for their own sake, rather than for their contents, in his case. He is filled with a consuming desire for almost anything that looks like a book. It would be impossible to satisfy his appetite in this regard. As Midas wished to turn everything he touched into gold, so the bibliomaniac would like to turn everything he touches into books, except the things necessary for his physical sustenance. Such a specimen of the genus homo is an indefatigable frequenter of book-stores, and his infirmity is soon disclosed to the experienced eye. He would carry away every volume in the place, if he could, and then be as hungry for books as before. Few things please him so much, or, if he have the disease badly, nothing pleases him so much, as the sight of long rows of well-filled book-shelves. Turn him loose in a large library, and it may require a dozen hints, if not a positive request, to get him to leave it. But his happiness is greatest when buying books, or when gloating over those already in his possession. See him approach yonder shelf and take down a covered volume! See him as he asks the price of it, and then, if he have the spare money with which to make the purchase, becomes its owner! His face and manner throughout the transaction are a study. Alexander, when he added a new kingdom to his empire, was not a better pleased man than he. Or, see him among his books! How lovingly he eyes them! How he fondles them as he takes them up! How jealously, it may be, he watches you, while you take one of his treasures in your hands, as if he feared that it might be spirited away, and he behold its beloved covers no more! His is not, comparatively speaking, a numerous tribe, and it is well for the world that it is not; but men of his stripe are known to every veteran book-seller, and when they have the means with which to buy, and are not much given to haggling over the bargains, they are always a most welcome sight to him.

There are nobler manias than bibliomania, and some, we need not say, that are not so noble. Your bibliomaniac is generally a quiet, harmless body, although sometimes, alas! a thief. Under this latter head, however, we do not care to linger; for sad it is to think that men perfectly honest in every other respect, and men, too, who would not steal a loaf to save themselves from starvation, have been known to steal books. But let this pass with a sigh, and return to the assertion just made that if there are nobler manias than bibliomania, there are some that are not so noble. A passion for acquiring books is not to be thoughtlessly sneered at. A bibliomania, as a rule, is also something of a bibliophile. If he loves books for themselves, he is also quite likely to love them somewhat for what they can do for him. It is vastly better for a man to have a passion for books than a passion for money, unless, at the same time, he knows how to make a good use of it. There is something elevating and refining in such a passion, say what else you will about it. A man who for any reason likes books is sure to be a more interesting person than he would be, if such a liking were wanting.

But if we laugh at the bibliomaniac, we do not laugh at the bibliophile. We know that in his case a book worthy of the name is the next thing to a human being. To him it has a soul and a voice, and may be one of his dearest and trustiest friends. He knows just how Milton felt when he wrote: "As good almost kill a man as kill a good book; who kills a man kills a reasonable creature, God's image; but he who destroys a good book kills reason itself." As the bibliomaniac may be something of a bibliophile, so the bibliophile may be something of a bibliomaniac; but we do not like him less on that account. We know that he associates the form of a book with the great thoughts and inspirations that have been given to the world through such a medium, and hence can no more pass a book-store heedlessly by than the lover of mankind can ignore any place or object that reminds him of his fellowmen.

The love of books should be ranked only after the love of God and the love of man. It is a love that refines, dignifies, rejoices and consoles. The bibliophile is never without friends, never lacks for entertainment, and, whatever be the condition of his purse, is never poor. All the known past is his in which to rove. The great and good of every age are his daily companions. As long as reason remains he has the best society that can be found in which to move. And as through books the known past becomes his possession, so through them he is put in touch with all that is best in the present. The highest thinkers and the most loyal workers that live admit him to their friendship, and though, in the eyes of the world, he may be a recluse, yet in reality he has intercourse with the elect souls of a dozen lands and nations.

The world could dispense with the bibliomaniac, but it could not do without the bibliophile, and of him we should say, as the poet does of Abou Ben Adhem,

"May his tribe increase."

Have You Room for Jesus?

Many a heart is so crowded with company, that no room can be found in it for Christ. There is plenty of room for fashion, for pleasure, for friendship, and for care, but no room for Christ. Reader, is this your case? Pause for a moment, lay down this paper, and think. You have an active mind, and you lead a busy life. In the multiplicity of your thoughts and engagements, have you kept room in your heart for Christ? In the multitude of your thoughts within you, do God's comforts delight your soul?

Remember why it is that Christ seeks room in our hearts. It is for our sakes—that he may cleanse us from our sins; that he may drive out the bad company that harbors there; the evil tempers, and passions, and affections; that he may fill us with his Spirit, and make us holy, and in so doing make us happy.

Dear reader, ponder this point. On your finding room for Christ in your heart, your eternal destiny depends. "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life."—1 John 5: 12. Thank God, it is not yet too late to make room. "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation."—Young Reaper.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Woman's Missionary Department.

President Woman's Central Committee of North Carolina, MISS FANNIE E. HECK, Raleigh, N. C.; Secretary, MRS. J. A. BRIGGS, Raleigh, N. C.

The Southern Baptist Convention at its late session in Nashville, Tenn., extended the time of the Centennial of Missions until the close of this year. The Centennial Record Book will also be kept open until that time. It is hoped that renewed efforts will be made for this work, and the Woman's Central Committee of Missions will gladly supply Centennial Missionary Literature, Centennial Chapel Cards, Centennial Day Programs, and Centennial Certificates, free. All who are already entitled to Centennial Certificates can obtain them at once on application. If after application the Certificates are not received within a reasonable time, please renew your application, as some loss may have occurred in the mails. Address Miss Fannie E. Heck, Pres. Woman's Central Committee of Missions, Raleigh, N. C.

Woman's Work.

The following is taken from the fifth annual report of the Woman's Missionary Union, auxiliary to the Southern Baptist Convention, April, 1892, to April, 1893.

Following the request of the Convention, report of work accomplished through the past year is respectfully submitted to the Foreign Board:—

Letters written		17,718
Postals written		866
Leaflets, pamphlets, etc., distributed		155,021
Chapel cards	"	85,170
Mission cards (prayer)	"	20,878
Mite barrels	"	5,456
Centennial certificates	"	3,126

The review is gratifying for the work done and the results attained in part, a larger and more general result having been gravely hindered by many unforeseen causes, business depression, disasters by storm and flood, operating with other obstructions to impede progress. The regular work committed to W. M. U. by the Foreign Board has been systematically brought to the attention of the societies, while the Centennial effort intrusted to them in part by the Centennial Committee, S. B. C., has been pressed with ceaseless vigilance. The correspondence has increased more than 400 per cent., the amount of literature distributed is greatly advanced, and the receipts to Foreign Missions show a growth from $25,040 last year to $36,042 this year.

The Christmas offering, amounting to $5,068.82, at an expense for literature, postage, etc., of $282.37, by direction of the Board, is to be given to Japan. Heretofore North China has been the recipient of the offering, in a sum aggregating $15,632 in four years.

Missionary columns, with selected information bearing on Mission Card topics, have been regularly maintained in most of the State papers, the material being provided monthly by Woman's Missionary Union. In the Foreign Mission Journal a six-page department has been supplied; also a new two-page department has been opened in aid of Bands. A mission page in every issue of Kind Words, to acquaint the young people with S. B. C. missions, is under W. M. U. care.

By request of the Centennial Committee, S. B. C., the aid of W. M. U. was enlisted to assist in raising the proposed $250,000 chapel fund, through co-operation of Woman's Mission Societies and Bands, and, later, of the Baptist Sunday-schools of the South. The Chapel Card collection plan, with its detail of certificates, leaflets, circulars, etc., was formulated and pushed by W. M. U. The magnitude of the work may be approximated through the following statistics, which are additional to the tables above given, the literature having been distributed in the interest of Sunday-schools and churches: Programs and supplements for Children's Day, 88,967; chapel cards, 55,038; certificates, 5,288; leaflets, circulars, and notices, 55,572; return postal cards, 10,205.

The half of W. M. U. expenses, for regular work (printing, postage, typewriting, etc.), $548.08, has been defrayed by Foreign Board. The entire expense of Christmas Offering was paid by Foreign Board as entire collections accrued to it. Centennial expenses are not included in above account; they are met separately by both Boards.

MRS. M. E. OLIVER,
Treas. W. M. U.

The End and Aim of Missions.

1st. The word of Christ is the basis of missions. His word "so" is the measure of God's love for the world: "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son." His word "go" marks the great duty of his disciples: "Go ye, therefore, discipling all nations." This is not advice, nor yet exhortation simply, but a command, having back of it all the authority with which Jesus had been endowed. Not to go or send is rebellion against love and authority.

2nd. The spirit of missions is the spirit of Christ. The reverse of this is emphatically and profoundly true. The same spirit which brought him to this world, compelling him to leave his Father's house, and the glory which he had with the Father before the world began, was essentially the missionary spirit. And all of those in whom the work of Christ has been wrought, are possessed of the same spirit. So it has come to pass that those who have been most illustrious in the work of missions, whether in giving or in sending, have been also conspicuous as men and women marked with the spirit of the Master. As we grow more Christ-like, we grow more missionary in spirit and in all Christian activities. To cultivate the missionary spirit, is to cultivate the Christly spirit; and to cultivate the Christly spirit is to cultivate the missionary spirit.

3rd. The success of missions lies in the promise and power of Christ. Difficulties, even obstacles, in the way of preaching the gospel, are not to be considered for a moment; and much less are they to determine or deter the disciples of Christ in carrying out his great command. He has not promised that all the world shall be converted, but he has promised that his gospel shall be preached to all nations, even to the uttermost parts of the earth. The success of missions lies more in the disciples of Christ giving the gospel to all nations, than in the results of preaching on the foreign fields among this people or that. It is not our business to stand in awe before difficulties, or to be abashed by seemingly meagre results, but rather going forth under the authority, and in the name of Christ, to see that his gospel is preached to all people, so that every kindred, every tribe and every nation shall hear, each in its own tongue, the wonderful works of redeeming grace.

4th. The purpose of missions is the glory of Christ. This is the ultimate end of all Christian work. The salvation of the heathen is indeed contemplated as one of the great results of missions, but this is only an aim to something higher. Christ is glorified in their salvation. And, in the whole wide sphere of Christian labor, we keep in view this great aim, to glorify him who humbled himself, and whom God hath greatly exalted. It certainly is strange that any one having once felt the power of redeeming grace, should not want the wondrous story told to all the earth; having been brought under the power of Christ's cross, to tell its glories in lands which knew it not.—J. M. Frost, Nashville, Tenn.

A Strong Endorsement.

The St. Louis Trade Review and Export Journal in its issue of February 7th, 1893, has this to say:

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.

One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B. Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1856. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationary, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

A Testimony to the Keeley Cure of the Liquor Habit.

ELIZABETH CITY, May 18th, 1893.
W. H. OSBORN, Esq., President
Keeley Institute, Greensboro, N. C.

My Dear Sirs:—It has been twelve months to-day since I entered your Institute to take the Keeley treatment for the liquor habit; and as should be the case with all who have been cured of this curse of all curses, I feel it to be my duty to testify to the certainty of a cure.

I was the first to take the treatment from this section of North Carolina, and I can truthfully say I haven't since the last drink I took at your Institute, wanted, in any shape or form, under any circumstances, a drink of liquor, and I say to you, and to all who are suffering from this dreadful disease, that I do not think, but know beyond a shadow of a doubt, that I am a cured man, and that if I ever take another drink of liquor, it will be not from any desire, but because I have lost my mind.

I firmly believe that God is working through Leslie E. Keeley to redeem this country from the evils of the drink habit, and especially do I think every church of every denomination should form a fund to send those who are so unfortunate financially as not to be able to take the treatment. This I deem as great a missionary work as sending the gospel to heathen lands, for by curing these unfortunates they place them in a condition to receive the Holy Spirit, which otherwise they could not, for I firmly believe that whisky and religion will no more mix than oil and water.

It is impossible for me to express in words my great thankfulness to Dr. Keeley, to you, Drs. Durham and Wrenn, and, last but not least, to my friend, Dossey Battle of Rocky Mount, who was the first to explain to me the Keeley treatment and persuade me to take it, for the great change that has been wrought in me and many others in our town. I assure you my sincere desire and prayer to God is, and always shall be, that you all may be abundantly rewarded in this world and the world to come. It has always been the greatest pleasure to me to talk the Keeley treatment to all whom I thought would be benefited by it, and I am thankful to believe I have been the means of several taking the treatment and being restored into the image of their Maker. I am to-day as happy as most men get to be in this world. I am doing a nice business and trying to do my duty to my God, to myself and to my fellowmen, all through the grace of God and Dr. Leslie E. Keeley.

For fear I may weary you with such a lengthy letter, I will close with best wishes for the success of all the Keeley Institutes, and kindest regards to yourself, Dr. Durham and all the boys, I am as ever,

Yours redeemed,
P. N. SANDERSON.

Dr. Tupper's Retirement.

I beg for space enough in the RECORDER to express my deep and sincere regret at the retirement of this faithful and beloved brother from the leadership of our Foreign Mission work.

My acquaintance with him began at the time he assumed charge as Corresponding Secretary, and during all these twenty years, or more, I have learned most heartily to respect and admire and love him. A man of delicate sensibilities, of gentlemanly dignity, of Christian courtesy, of ripe scholarship, of distinguished ability and of noble bearing—there is a charm about him that has drawn me to him and held me fast. All these things eminently fit him, in my judgment, to fill and adorn the conspicuous position he has been holding so long. Who can be had who will fill it so well? I am free to confess that I cannot name the man. The Lord graciously forgive and counteract the blunders committed at Nashville.

Elsa is a faithful Christian girl, and Kitty at first one only by profession. With their relations to one another, their struggles and their triumphs, with the thread of influence running from one to another through it all, the story has to do.

About a 2,000-lb. black turtle was caught near Cape Lookout recently. It took eight men to turn it on its back after landing.

Hon. Henry Watterson has been asked to deliver the annual address at the Agricultural and Mechanical College commencement, June 14.

William Wilmouth and Robert Canady, two young white men from near Dobson, were arrested by Deputy Marshall Brim last week for illicit distilling.—The Yadkin Valley News.

The floral decorations sent by North Carolina to Richmond on the occasion of President Davis' obsequies were the most beautiful that were sent. And her escort was a very fine and creditable one.

On Thursday, May 25th, at Darien, Ga., Geo. Brandon seriously shot E. R. Poppell. Brandon had been paying attention to Poppell's daughter, and the latter had forbidden him to come to his house and made threats which Brandon and his friends claim justified the shooting. Brandon surrendered and is in jail. His father and mother live in Durham, N. C.

A party of twenty-six Waldenses arrived at Connelly Springs on the 29th of May. They were dressed in home-spun clothes and course shoes of their own make, and brought with them a limited supply of seeds from their own homes. They will occupy the six houses that are now completed on their tract of land, and proceed to erect a town at once. Their preacher came with them and a house of worship will be one of the first buildings they will erect.—Newton Enterprise.

General News.

The South & North Carolina R. R., of which Mr. Preston L. Bridgers is President has been sold to the Atlantic Coast Line.

Commencement exercises of the Washington and Lee University will be held June 11th, 12th, 13th and 14th. Rev. Neander M. Woods, D. D., of Tennessee will preach the Baccalaureate Sermon.

Acknowledgments.

[The Treasurer requests that when money is sent, that the name of the contributing church, society, or individual, and the object for which the money is intended, be clearly stated. This will serve to prevent mistakes in the acknowledgment, and save the time, correspondence and printing to correct them.]

HOGGARD—BAZEMORE—On May 23, 1893, at the home of the bride in Bertie county, N. C., by Rev. L. M. Curtis, Mr. J. J. Hoggard of Hertford county and Miss Sarah A. Bazemore.

DIED.

OLIVE—Lovie Currin Olive died at the residence of her parents, A. J. and E. D. Olive, near Sparks, Ga., of cholera infantum, May 16th, 1893, aged thirteen months and twenty-three days. She was the pet of the family, but was Jesus' choice of the flock. She has gone to join her two sisters in heaven. The bereft are parents, three brothers and three sisters. A. H. OLIVE.

BEASLEY—Died, April 26th, 1893, Thomas Beasley of Bertie county, N. C. Bro. Beasley was in his sixty-eighth year, and one of the oldest members of the Coleraine Baptist church, and so far as the writer knows he was a consistent member until his death. He leaves seven children to mourn his loss. The funeral services were conducted by the writer in the Baptist church at Coleraine. His body was laid to rest in the church-yard to await the general resurrection.

S. F. BRISTOW.

HERRING—On the morning of May 24th, at six o'clock a. m., the spirit of our dear uncle, George W. Herring, took its flight, and left the dear ones sorrowing. Only a few weeks prior to his demise, he lost the only child of his first marriage. He leaves three daughters and two sons. He was a faithful member of Lisbon Baptist church. We trust in the morning of the resurrection that we shall all meet again, and "be satisfied when we awake in his likeness."

Weary and aged, worn and weak,
He laid him down to rest,
Jesus to him these words did speak,
"Oh, come and join the blest."

His trials over, cease to mourn,
Our heart with grief now yearns,
He's entered on that lovely "bourne"
From whence no one returns.

He gave his heart long, long ago,
Unto the Saviour dear,
He cast his care on him below,
Who said "there's naught to fear."

Between opinions "halt ye not,"
"Choose ye this day your Lord,"
Remember we'll not be forgot
If we but trust his word.

MOLLIE J. HERRING.

Tributes of Respect.

Collins Grove church submits the following in memory of Rev. J. R. Maynard, who died at his home in Morrisville, March 26th, 1893:

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Allwise Ruler of the universe to take from us our much beloved brother and pastor, therefore be it

Resolved 1. That it is with deep sorrow that we have to take our leave of him, but that we bow in humble submission to the will of him who does all things well.

2. That we will with gratitude remember his usefulness and efficiency as a preacher of the gospel of the Son of God, believing as we do that he is gone to that rest that remaineth for the finally faithful.

3. That it be our purpose in the future to follow him so far as he followed Christ.

4. That we are profoundly grateful that his faith was strong in life, failing him not in death, and for his zealousness in his Master's work.

5. That we do hereby tender to his bereaved wife and children our sympathy in this their great affliction.

6. That a copy of this be spread on our church book, and that a copy be sent to the bereaved family, also to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

J. M. UULEY,
J. S. STEPHENS,

R. B. BYRUM, C. C.

WHEREAS, It hath pleased the creator of all things to remove from our midst one of our dearly beloved brothers in the Lord, to wit: Jackson Denny, therefore be it

Resolved 1. That we do sincerely lament the departure of our beloved brother.

2. That we do sincerely sympathize with the mother and friends of the deceased.

3. That the church feels the loss of the dear brother, but our loss is his eternal gain. He has gone to meet his father and brother in that celestial city where parting never comes. He was born Jan. 6th, 1873, and departed this life April 11th, 1893. He united with Landmark Baptist church when he was sixteen years old, and lived a consistent member till his death. He was ever ready to help share the burdens of the church. He leaves one brother and sister to mourn his loss. His sickness lasted for a short time, but he bore it patiently. He told his brother just before his death he was going home. His last words were, "I have not long for this world; I'll soon be at home."

4. That a copy of this be recorded in the church book, and a copy be forwarded to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

Done by order of the church May 29th, 1893.

The Leaksville Woolen Mills, Leaksville, N. C., need no introduction to the public in North Carolina and adjoining States. This is simply to remind you that they are still "in touch" with the people, working up their wool into various forms of finished product at satisfactory prices. A handsome catalogue containing samples of their new and attractive styles of Fancy Cassimeres and All-Wool Flannels, together with all other goods made by them, is sent to any address on application. Besides an interesting article on "Wool and How to Handle It," the catalogue contains full particulars in regard to shipping wool. If these details are carefully followed, we guarantee prompt return of goods.

Write to Hiram Feard, Sec'y, Leaksville, N. C., for catalogue, before disposing of your wool.

Is Your Life Worth Anything

to others? Are there not persons dependent on your earnings for their support? Are they provided for in case of your death? The simplest and safest way of assuring their protection is life insurance. Business, professional, and working men generally, should insure, for their brains or their muscles, are their capital and income too. Death stops them both. Insure in the Jackson Springs Hotel,

Moore county, N. C., is now open for the third season. The health-giving properties of these noted Springs is well known throughout the State, and needs no further advertisement than that the proprietor, S. W. Thompson, M. D., will endeavor to give satisfaction to all guests.

There will be a hack at West End, the nearest railroad station at the arrival of every train to convey visitors to and from the hotel.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

I have berries, grapes and peaches, a year old, fresh as when picked. I use "Hood's improved process;" do not heat or seal the fruit, just put it up cold. Keeps perfectly fresh, and costs almost nothing; can put up a bushel in ten minutes. Last week I sold directions to over one hundred families. Any one will pay a dollar for directions when they see the beautiful fruit samples. Fall and winter are the best time to sell directions, so people can experiment and be ready for next fruit season. As there are many poor people like myself I consider it my duty to give my experience to such, and feel confident anyone can make one or two hundred dollars around home in a few days. I will mail sample of fruit and complete directions to any of your readers for 19 two-cent stamps, which is only the actual cost of the sample, postage, etc., to me.

—OF THE—

Southern Baptist Convention

Still aims to give to the Sunday-schools of the South a series of Sunday-school helps specially adapted to their needs. The of the Convention receive special attention through articles in the Teacher, in the Quarterlies and a separate department in the "Kind Words" paper.

In no other way yet suggested has it been found practicable to put the study of our missions in the regular course of study in our schools.

All the profits accruing from these publications go to further the

The Home Circle.

The Mothers of Men.

The bravest battle that ever was fought,
Shall I tell you where and when?
On the map of the world you'll find it not—
'Twas fought by the mothers of men.

Nay, not with cannon or battle shot,
With sword or nobler pen;
Nay, not with words of eloquence fraught
From the mouths of wonderful men.

But deep in the walled-up mother's heart
A mother that will not yield,
But patiently, quietly bears her part—
To them in this battle-field.

No marshaled troops nor bivouac song,
No banners that gleam or wave,
But, oh, those battles they last so long—
From babyhood to the grave.

—Joaquin Miller.

Your Boy.

You do not know what is in him. Bear with him; be patient; wait. Feed him; clothe him; love him. He is a boy; and most boys are bad. You think him so light-hearted, and fear he is light-headed as well. Remember he calls you father. When he played in your lap you fondly hoped he would some day be a great and useful man. Now that he has grown larger, and his young blood drives him into gleeful sport, and makes him impatient of serious things—rattling, playful, thoughtless—you almost despair. But don't be snappish and snarlish, and make him feel you are disappointed in him. He is your boy, and you are to live with him. He bears your name, and is to send it down on the stream of time. He inherits your fortune and fame, and is to transmit them to generations to come.

It may be difficult to govern him; but be patient. He may seem averse to everything useful and good; but wait. No one can tell what is in a boy. He may surprise you some day. Hope. Let him grow. While his body grows larger and stronger, his mental and moral nature may expand and improve.

Educate your boy. You may think money spent in that way is money spent in vain; there is nothing in him; he has no pride, no ambition. You don't know. No one can tell what there is in a boy. Besides, there may be an unkindled spark, unfanned flame, a smouldering fire, a latent energy, which the teacher's aid may stir, the association with books may arouse, develop and direct, and thus start your boy agoing with such energy and determination that no power on earth could stop him short of the topmost round in the ladder of fame.

If you cannot educate him, let him educate himself. That will make him strong, a giant with whom none dare interfere. Such are the best men in the world. The greatest benefactors of the race have stooped their shoulders to bear burdens, have carried hands hardened with rough labor, have endured the fatigue of toil. Many such are in our mind now. Labor conquers all things. The old Roman was right. We see it in a thousand instances. Labor makes the man. No boy ever came to be a man, the noblest work of God, without labor. This is God's great law; there is a divine philosophy in it. Let your boy work; if he will not work, make him work. There is no progress, no development, no outcome, no true manhood without it. We must work.

Father, be kind to your boy. We know what a mother will do. Thank God! A mother's love, a mother's prayers, follow us still, and the memory of her anxious tears shall never fade out during the succession of years.

Finally, but not least, pray for your boy. God hears prayers. Do the best you can; commit all you cannot do to God, and hope. Never despar, for no one knows what is in a boy.—The Ensign.

A Tonic for Nervous Prostration.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

Dr. A. E. Carothers, San Antonio, Texas, says: "It is the best tonic I know of in debility and nervous prostration, with sleeplessness, caused by mental overwork or prolonged lactation."

Orderly Habits.

"If, my dear girls," says a sage matron, "you learn to be so orderly that the contemplation of disorder gives you pain, there is no fear that you will neglect your domestic duties or become careless in the performance of them. Let everything that leaves your hand be in perfect order. Let it grow impossible to you to put down so much as a pinbox where it will disturb the orderly and pleasant grouping upon your dressing table, or to stick your pins in your cushion even at all sorts of tipsy and uncomfortable inclinations. This will not make you 'fussy.' It is the other thing that does that—the not knowing, except by fidgety experiment, what is harmony and the intangible grace of relation. Have all your own possessions well in hand. Have your little washcloths and your sponges for bits of cleansing; your furniture brush and your feather dusters, and your light little broom, and your whisk and pan; your bottle of sweet oil and spirits of turpentine and piece of flannel to preserve the polish or to restore the gloss where wood grows dim or gets spotted. Find by following your surely growing sense [illegible] and always, the best and easy ways of keeping all fresh about you. Your own processes: they will come when you have made yourself [illegible] of what you can learn and [illegible] apartment, so that it is easy to do it then to let it alone [illegible] the time it takes [illegible] which you give to your [illegible]—then you [illegible] house, [illegible]."

"Only a Fireman."

It was night, dark and stormy. A passenger train was rushing along over the shining steel rails, lit up by the head-light of the locomotive, almost with the velocity of thought. From the opposite direction was coming, at the same rate of speed, another train; rounding a curve, they came together with a rush, a roar, and a sickening crash, making a fearful wreck. Some one had blundered. Yet amid all this ruin and misery, strange to say, no one was killed but a fireman.

Many were more or less wounded, but when the uninjured, recovering from their fright, had rescued the injured from the crushed and shattered cars, "only a fireman" was found—dead. Shortly after the accident, messages were flashed across the telegraph wires that span this great continent of ours, like a net work, giving to the press and public the particulars of the wreck, and winding up with: "Only a fireman killed." Yes, "only a fireman," a brave, noble son of toil, who died at his post. No great money king, who has made his millions by robbing the workingmen; no dainty piece of fashionable feminine flesh, only fit to look at; no "illustrious" statesman, who has had his brains furnished to order by the toilworn child of genius, was killed—"only a fireman"—and the world moves on in its mad rush for trade and traffic, gain and loss, giving no thought of the dead fireman. But down there in the little village where he was born, an aged mother, with shaking hands and tottering limbs, weeps for the brave boy whose pleasant voice and merry laugh she will never hear on earth again.

Over there in the big city, a blue-eyed wife hovers over the mangled remains of the husband who had loved and cherished her so tenderly, in heartrending agony. "Only a fireman," to the heartless world, but to these two desolate women, the best beloved thing of all the earth. A light has gone out from their lives that can never be rekindled, until, by the waters of bliss, in the land of the great hereafter, they again meet their loved and lost son and husband—"Only a fireman."—Wm. W. Long, in the Baltimorean.

Prehensile Feet of East Indians.

The traveler who walks in the native quarters of the cities of India can easily study there all industries in the beginnings, as they were probably practiced in Europe in the middle ages. The shops are usually open, and the workmen can be seen inside; textile industries, pottery, shoemaking, joinering, armoring, jewelry, confectioners—all can be observed in a single street like Chitpore Street, Calcutta. If we take pains to examine attentively the methods of working we shall be struck by the enormous function played by the lower limb. Whatever the industries, the Indian, squatting or sitting on the ground, works with his feet as well as with his hands; and it might be said that all four of his limbs are in constant exercise. The joiner, for example, has no assistant to hold his plank, but makes his great toe serve that purpose. The shoemaker does not employ a fixed clamp for the shoe on which he is sewing, but holds it in his feet, which change position to suit his convenience, while his nimble hands do the sewing. The metal worker holds the joint of his shears on his feet in cutting copper.

In the making of wooden combs I have seen the comb held straight up by the feet, while the workmen marked the teeth with one hand and with the other direct the instrument that cut them. The wood turner directs the hand-rest with his great toes; so, generally, do Egyptian and Arabian turners. In smoothing twine or sewing a bridle the Indians hold the article between the first and second toes. When the butcher cuts his meat into small pieces, he holds his knife between the first and second toes, takes the meat in both hands, and pulls it up across the knife. I have seen a child climb a tree and hold a branch between his toes. These are enough details concerning the constant, universal use of the foot.—Popular Science Monthly.

Aim High.

Boys and girls, aim high. Do not say, "I will be pretty good," but endeavor to be perfect.

A great artist was once highly praised for a beautiful painting which he had just completed. "Ah, do not praise me," he said, sadly, "it may be very beautiful, but I aimed at perfection."

I once put the following question to a ragged little newsboy: "What are you going to be when you are a man?" The little fellow met my half quizzical glance with a look of determination in his bright eyes, then he replied, "President of the United States, sir." That lad may not become President, but he will not remain a newsboy.

George Eliott, in writing the last words of one of her most powerful novels, exclaims, "It is so much less than what I hoped for. I am dissatisfied."

Bear this in mind: "If we aim at the ground we shall never reach the sky."—N. Y. Observer.

Always Willing to Assist.

It is a sad fact that many of our churches do not see the importance of the Sunday-school. It is estimated that there are thousands of such churches without Sunday-schools. One of the objects of the American Baptist Publication Society is through its missionaries and colporteurs to organize schools in destitute places, and provide them with the Publication Society's helps and papers. The Society is always willing to assist newly organized schools with Bibles and Sunday-school literature. The funds for these grants are increased or diminished, according as the schools that are able to buy do or do not patronize the Society in the purchase of their supplies.

About Nutmegs.

Nutmegs grow on little trees which look like little pear trees, and are generally not over twenty feet high. The flowers are very much like the lily of the valley. They are pale and very fragrant. The nutmeg is the seed of the fruit, and mace is the thin covering over the seed. The fruit is about as large as a peach. When ripe it breaks open, and shows a little nut inside. The trees grow on the islands of Asia and tropical America. They bear fruit for seventy or eighty years, having ripe fruit upon them all the seasons. A fine tree in Jamaica has over four thousand nutmegs on it every year. The Dutch used to have all the nutmeg trade, as they owned the Banda Islands, and conquered all the other traders and destroyed the trees. To keep the price up they once burned three piles of nutmegs, each of which was as big as a church. Nature did not sympathize with such meanness. The nutmeg pigeon, found in all the India Islands, did for the world what the Dutch had determined should not be done—carried those nuts, which are their food, into all the surrounding countries, and trees grew again, and the world had the benefit.—Exchange.

TO RESIST THE ATTACK—of the germs of Consumption, Scrofula, Grip, Malaria, and many other diseases—means fight or die for all of us. These germs are everywhere in the air we breathe. The odds are in favor of the germs, if our liver is inactive and our blood impure.

What is needed most is an increase in our germ-fighting strength. To do this successfully you need to put on healthy flesh, rouse the liver to vigorous action, so it will throw off these germs, and purify the blood so that there will be no "weak spot," nor soil for germ-growth.

Predestination.

BY REV. ARCHIBALD CREE.

Preached by request in Sandy Run church in Bertie county, May 28th, 1893.

Text, Rom. 8: 28–30—"And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose. For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren. Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified."

The doctrine of predestination has been the occasion of much difficulty and perplexity to many sincere and humble believers. These difficulties, I believe, have been intensified by some men's crude, contradictory and mistaken conceptions of the subject, as it is presented in the Word of God.

Having been requested by some of my brethren here to preach to you on these verses, I will endeavor, as far as I am able, to expound the Apostle's words, though I am far from arrogating to myself the ability to do full justice to the subject. I doubt not the Apostle Peter had special reference to this, its kindred group of doctrines, when he tells in his second epistle how his beloved brother Paul, according to the wisdom given unto him, had written in his epistles of these things, "in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other Scriptures, unto their own destruction."

The subject of the divine predestination of souls is no subject for ignorant and unlearned handling. It is pre eminently a subject for the religious thinker and scholar; but as the Apostle Peter in the same epistle says "no prophecy of Scripture is of private interpretation," we are not forbidden to enter this sphere of the great realm of divine truth with our feeble rushlight to scan what portion of it may be available to us. There is abundance of truth in the Word of God suited to all minds and to every degree of intelligence. As Roland Hill said long ago, "There are shallows for the lambs to wade in, as well as great deeps for the strong and the learned to swim in."

There is perhaps no portion of Scripture more full of theological importance than the three verses before us, and none therefore which demands a more careful exposition at our hands. The grand question, around which so many controversies have gathered throughout the history of the church of Christ, but to which all sections of the church are ever more nearly approximating to agreement, is here presented.

Do these passages teach unconditional predestination? Do they teach the predestination by God of certain souls to eternal life and the consequent passing by of others, without the least reference to the State, or character, or actions of those so ordained, and those passed by? or do they teach conditional predestination—the predestination of certain souls to a certain glorious destiny, because of certain foreknown conditions, upon which salvation is granted, having been supplied by them, and thus implying the free will co operation of these souls in the attainment of that state of salvation and of glory. That is no question of barren controversy, but one of the most momentous importance to men as moral and immortal beings. Eternal issues hang upon the question, and the entire procedure and plan of God in the scheme of redemption are involved in it also. To the greatest and deepest natures such questions have ever had a profound attraction. Not only their sympathy with human beings in their wondrous immortal nature and destiny have drawn them to such questions, but the deeper interest still which Milton expresses in his Paradise Lost, of "justifying the ways of God to men," has filled them with the intense desire to feel into the depths of such subjects and scan their limits if possible. The very border-land of mystery, to which some, after all their investigations, have been led, has only increased the attraction. So far all was made plain to them: they felt themselves on firm ground, but beyond they gazed into the illimitable, and while it heightened their awe, it did not diminish their interest.

It would be easy to dispose of the question presented in this place by appealing only to the plainer declarations and commands of Scripture, and passing by the more difficult texts; but that would be a cowardly process, manifesting fear of such passages as that before us. It would be a cutting the gordian knot, not an untying of it. The general who should beat the armies of an enemy in the field and overrun his country, but who left, here and there in his progress, great menacing fortresses behind him, which he did not attempt to reduce, or was not able to reduce, would not likely prove a successful conqueror in the end. While the more difficult texts of Scripture have to be interpreted in accordance with the plainer declarations, as the Word of God cannot contradict itself, and the Divine Spirit, who inspired it, is the Spirit of Truth, and was given to lead us into all truth, and therefore each part must harmonize with the other, though some parts may reach away into the regions of the mysterious and the illimitable where our poor vision cannot penetrate, yet to dispose of all difficulties and answer all objections by appealing only to the plainer declarations is no true solution of those difficulties, and is not allowable, except in any doubtful cases, and after all other means of interpretation have been exhausted.

It is well, therefore, for the minister of the gospel who aims to be a workman who "rightly divides the word of truth," to vary the ordinary and simpler ministrations of the Word by an occasional exposition of one or other of the deeper and more difficult texts.

Let us follow these verses clause by clause, and see what light we may extract from them on the important subject of which they treat.

The Apostle says, "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God," &c. The very first word, the Greek particle which is translated "And," is not without special significance in the connection in which it stands. In the thirtieth verse the same particle is translated "Moreover." Either translation is quite correct; but as the twenty-eighth verse is like the thirtieth, the beginning of a paragraph, or the statement of an additional truth in advance of those laid down in the preceding verses, there is great propriety in translating it by the word "Moreover." The Apostle has been dwelling on the fact that the sufferings which believers endure in "this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in them." He describes the whole creation along with believers groaning and sighing for the fulness of redemption, and the glorious liberty of the children of God. Advancing in the same consoling strain, the Apostle adds, "Moreover, we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

"Moreover, we know," says the Apostle. He speaks of that which was no mere matter of conjecture, but of certain knowledge to himself and his fellow Christians. Because they were Christians, and therefore taught of God, the thing of which the Apostle speaks was an accepted matter with them. Hence Paul, as the mouthpiece of his brethren, give utterance to this common assurance "that all things work together for good." But to whom? "To those who love God, and who are the called according to his purpose." Mark these two distinguishing characteristics. The first describes their relation to God—they "love God"; the second describes God's relation to them—they "are the called according to his purpose." These favored persons, then, are not here regarded merely as human creatures, which they of course are in common with other human creatures, nor as sinners, which they are in common with others. It is not in any aspect of their being or their state, which they have in common with others, that they are regarded and described by the Apostle; but by something distinguishing them from others—they love God. Now in that description we find certain conditions of salvation supplied by those who are spoken of. They "love God," that itself is a condition, and it is backed by others; for in order to love God, they must first have believed in God's love to them, as revealed in the gospel of his grace. "We love him, because he first loved us." Therefore behind their love there was faith, and all those other aspects of that state which consists in the penitent and sincere return of the soul to God. Here, then, to begin with, we have certain conditions on the part of man co operating with the attitude and the action of God towards them in securing their eternal good. Thus far, then, we have got so much that is plain and evident from the light of the passage. Let us plant our feet firmly on what we have gained, it may be helpful in what is to follow.

Not only do these persons "love God," they are also as regards God's relation to them, "the called according to his purpose." It is by God they are called. The thirtieth verse explicitly says so. "Moreover, whom he did predestinate them he also called." Now let us enquire what is the nature of this calling, which is applicable only to believers. This is a crucial point. Doubtless it is the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. It is evident that it is not the universal call given to sinners to come to the Saviour and believe the gospel. That call is issued indiscriminately to all sinners, to every son of Adam. They are all summoned to repent and believe to the saving of the soul. It is with respect to that universal call it is said, "Many are called, but few are chosen." Now it cannot be that call to the beginning of the Christian life that is referred to here, because there is nothing distinguishing or peculiar to Christians in that call. It is a gracious invitation to every one as well as to them. But the Apostle is here speaking of something peculiar to Christians. "Whom he did predestinate, them he also called," "justified," "glorified." The call is as peculiar as the other distinguishing characteristics predestinated, justified, glorified. Moreover, the expression "the called" is exclusively applied to Christians wherever it occurs in the epistles of the New Testament. It is not applied to any others. Besides, seeing that believers have already responded to the gospel call, we would naturally expect that this distinguishing call will be something different from that to which unbelievers are called. Some would insidiously say to us, at this point, that the call is the same as that given to unbelievers, but that believers are more effectually called than others, an irresistible influence is brought to bear upon them so as to make them obedient to the call. But this is simple necessitation, and such invincible swaying of the will has in it nothing of the nature of a call. The call, I should say, must be a real appeal to the intelligence, and through the intelligence to the heart and the will.

Let it be observed that there are other calls besides the call to repentance and faith. We find Christians spoken of in the Word as "called to liberty," "called to holiness," "called to suffering,"—to peace also, "Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called." Some, too, we find called to preach the gospel, and to undertake certain missions amongst men. But the highest calling of all, sometimes called the "heavenly calling," is the call to glory, the call to the other end of the Christian life. Paul says to Timothy, "Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called." Here is a call to eternal life. Peter says, "But the God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that you have suffered awhile, make you perfect." Here is a call to eternal glory. How beautifully this highest call is put in the hieroglyphical languages of the book of Revelation, "Blessed are they who are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb." Peter exhorts his fellow believers to "make their calling and election sure." How were they to do it? Evidently it is a very distinguishing call this, a call to something higher than the beginning of the Christian life, to which all are called, to which all are urged. We are here in a more chosen region, where spiritual qualities are the passport. So it is intimated by our Apostle elsewhere, "For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called." Jude speaks of them that are "sanctified by God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called." Strange that the calling should be mentioned after the sanctification by God the Father, and the preservation by Jesus Christ. It is explainable only by understanding the call as that of the higher character I have been quoting—the call to glory, to eternal life, to the marriage supper of the Lamb. The expression "the called" applied to believers can in many places mean only this. And it is evident from the context that this part of our text furnishes us with an instance in the clause "to those who are the called according to his purpose." Has the Apostle been pointing forward to "the glory that shall be revealed" in believers, to the full redemption, the future manifestation of the sons of God? And in the verses succeeding our text he goes on to point to the transformation of believers into the image of God's Son, to their final justification and glorification, and at length in the same strain, and pointing still to the glorious end, or prize of the high calling, he bursts into that glowing peroration, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?" Nay, in the thought of the Apostle, every hindrance is swept aside, and glory and victory are pronounced for the believer in Christ. It would appear very plain from all these considerations that the expression "the called of God" refers to the call to the higher end of the Christian life, the call to glory, the call to the marriage supper of the Lamb, a call which, while it is related to the universal call of the gospel, is yet in very many places in Scripture revealed as distinct from it, a higher and more distinguishing call, applicable only to those who have obeyed the first.

And further, let us beware lest we stray into any mere imaginations respecting the essence of this calling; let us beware of being misled by phrases of men, such as effectual calling, phrases which, in this connection, find no place in the Word of God. The word calling or called has its own meaning, and does not need to have one invented for it. To be called is to be summoned, to be invited. All those ideas of welcome, invitation, desire that we should avail ourselves of the blessing offered, are contained in the Word. Even urgent pleading and authoritative command, and every helpful influence to enable us to avail ourselves of the blessing offered, are found in the Word; but such ideas as necessitation or irresistible influence to compel our obedience are as wide apart from the native import of the Word as the poles are asunder from each other. On the contrary, we are reminded that the deepest responsibility rests upon us as to whether we shall yield to the divine moral influence, whether we shall become obedient to the heavenly summons, and press on toward the mark for the prize of our high calling.

It is further stated that believers are the called "according to his purpose." According to God's holy purpose, or resolution, or plan in a remote eternity, believers are now called to this glory. It was God's fixed purpose or plan from the beginning that all who believe in his Son, and by him in advance in the love of God, should be called to everlasting life and glory—to the incorruptible inheritance that fadeth not away. This is God's fixed plan, his changeless decree, his immutable purpose. It cannot be altered to suit any one, however great or exalted. Men must conform to it if they would be saved. All who have faith in the Redeemer, all those who love God, are the called to the heavenly inheritance: these shall be the ultimately glorified; these, and none others. Such is God's purpose, his plan from all eternity.

In the case of those who love God, we have God's calling of them and God's purpose to save all such, and we have further this in addition, that he causeth all things to work together for good to them. No doubt the "all things" contemplated by the Apostle are all things that happen to believers. The universality of things he has in view embraces whatever events and circumstances in this life touch any point of their being. They are all made subservient and contributory to the lasting good of those that love God. Nay more, it would appear from the context that the Apostle has specially and prominently in view all the afflictive events and trying dispensations which happen to them. He speaks much throughout of the sufferings to which his fellow believers were subject, and even goes so far as to summon up and anticipate all the most trying circumstances, and the most formidable forces which could afflict and oppose them. And withal, he proclaims them more than conquerors through him that loved them. How often do the Scriptures teach us that the greater the sufferings of believers on earth for righteousness' sake, the higher will be their exaltation in glory. "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven." We know not the unseen good which the sufferings of life may be working out for those who love God. God only knows. The Apostle's words may have a wider compass still, and may include in their range the universal order of things, which is all under the management and control of God. Could we survey all the bearings of things upon each other in this universe, all the interrelated laws and ramifying influences, we might be astonished to find how slight a touch will move the whole net-work to given ends and uses. And it is no incredible doctrine even in these scientific days, but a truth quite apparent to whoever will try to discern in the matter, that God is managing this universe, to the extent that is visible to us at least, in the interest of those who love him, who serve him, who are his loyal and dutiful children. To others there may be temporary benefit; but lasting and everlasting good to these only. Thus far then we seem to apprehend the teaching of the Apostle, that to those who love, and whom he has called to glory, in accordance with his purpose or plan, in a past eternity, all things work together for good.

Let us advance to further proof of this truth given in the following verse: "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son." The Apostle's words are a further development in the revelation of the divine intention and plan. It is worthy of observation, however, that the verbs in these two verses did foreknow, did predestinate, called, justified, glorified, are in the indefinite tense, i. e., they express the thing abstractly, without any strict reference to time, whether past, present, or future. The tense that was used in Greek for the indefinite tense was the aorist tense. In our language, it is the present tense that is used for the indefinite tense. Therefore those passages might with great propriety have been put in the present tense in our translation. Moreover, whom he predestinates, them he also calls; and whom he calls, them he also justifies; and whom he justifies, them he also glorifies."

Some brethren here may not understand the process, but you may see at least from the last of these verbs that the Apostle means to express indefiniteness as to time. "And whom he justified them he also glorified." Now it is not true that all whom God hath forekhown and called, he hath already glorified. Nay, it is not true of any of them, if the glorification referred to is the final glorification of body and soul, which seems evident. But the Apostle means to express himself indefinitely, stating the fact without reference to time. The same tense which the Apostle here employs is in many other parts of Scripture translated by our present tense. To take only one example, Jesus says, "If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch and is withered." Instead of the expression, "he was cast forth as a branch and was withered," we have here our present tense to translate what Jesus meant to express as an abstract truth without reference to time. It is well to remember that the verbs in our text are in the original. Of course, as to the divine acts themselves, it was in the past God foreknew, and did predestinate, it is in the present he calls, and it is in the future he will justify and glorify. They are put in the one unvarying tense by the Apostle because it is the action of God Paul means to assert, not the time.

But let us proceed to the clause, "For whom he did foreknow." You see how this verse hangs on to the preceding by the word "for," which introduces a reason for what has been stated. The word "whom," then, "whom he did foreknow," evidently refers back to those the Apostle has been speaking of, those who love God, and are the called according to his purpose. It is the lovers of God whom God "foreknew and whom he predestinated to be conformed to the image of his Son." There is nothing unequal in that doctrine after all, is there? Nothing to deter us, nothing to darken the character of our God. Besides, do not mistake the import of the word foreknow. Some would almost confound it in meaning with the word predestinate which follows, and say that it is the foreknowledge of God which makes everything necessary, and brings everything to pass. Now, the foreknowledge of God does not make or cause; it is perceptive; it apprehends. God's foreknowledge is his all-apprehending, and all-comprehending intelligence of everything past, present and to come, directed to the future. God foreknew the sins men would commit; does his foreknowledge therefore bring these sins about? Is he the author of sin? God forbid. It is man in the free-agency with which God endowed him who is their author. If we might argue from the finite up to the infinite, as we sometimes do, if it were possible for you to foresee with absolute certainty any event which would transpire in the political future of your country, or of any other nation, would there be any sense in saying that your foreknowledge brought it about? If I throw a ball up into the air I may be said at the moment to foreknow that it will come down again. But does my foreknowledge bring it down. No, sir, it is brought down by a force outside of myself—by the law of gravitation. So, though God foreknew every sin and every transgression of my life, his foreknowledge did not bring them to pass. I, in the voluntary misuse of my God-given powers—freedom and responsibility—which brought them about—I am the guilty party. It would be to introduce the deepest error into our thinking out of this subject, and vitiate our entire mental processes if we confound things that differ so widely as God's foreknowledge and his acts of predestination. In the exercise of his absolute prescience, his infinite omniscience, God foreknew these favored persons referred to in our text. But what did he foreknow about them? This is the simple sense of the passage. There was something peculiar about them distinguished them in his foreknowledge from others. God foreknew all others; but about them he

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 14, 1893.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

"What Baptists Believe," by the late J. L. Burrows, will be given to every new subscriber to the BIBLICAL RECORDER who will pay $2.00 in advance for a years' subscription. We will also give the book to every old subscriber who will pay his subscription to date and a year in advance.

Think of it! Your denominational paper, the subscription price of which is $2.00, one year, and a neatly bound book of over a hundred pages, containing a clear and fair expression of what Baptists believe and practice, all for the price of the paper.

Remember, this offer is to new and old subscribers alike.

HOW TO WIN MEN.

Soul winning is one of the most important duties that devolves upon those who profess to be servants of Christ. That it is an important work only requires that we should read God's Word and think a little about the value of the soul in order to be convinced. To know that it is a Christian duty, one has only to read such passages as Isa. 55: 1, Lk. 14: 17 ff., Rev. 22: 17, and many other passages like these. There is, besides, abundant encouragement in the Bible that we should engage in this work. For instance, "Be not weary in well doing; for in due season ye shall reap, if you faint not;" "he that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." And again, the striking words, "Let him know that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins." As this work, then, is so vastly important, it is quite necessary that we should carefully study the ways and means of accomplishing it. It is a well established fact that many men of moderate gifts and capacities are very successful soul-winners; while others, with quite superior minds and training, meet with indifferent success in this work.

One great secret of soul winning, we think, is prayer to God, accompanied with reliance upon him to bless the efforts we make in that line of work. Saving the soul is emphatically the Lord's work. The best laborer in the great harvest field is only an instrument in God's hands in accomplishing the work. In this, in fact in all work, we should never forget the Saviour's words, "Without me ye can do nothing." As Abraham's servant asked the special direction of God in selecting a wife for Isaac, so we should go to the work of soul winning, in constant reliance upon God or the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

Again, if we would win men to Christ we must learn to love them—the more the better. Nothing, under God, can take the place of this love for those who are in their sins. Without it, shining gifts and other splendid qualities on our part will do us but little good; and with it we may be remarkably successful, though quite deficient in other gifts. There is philosophy and religion both in Peter's words, "Charity covereth a multitude of sins." And it would be well for those who engage in this work to remember that love for men cannot be simulated. If you do, or do not, love them, they will find out that fact. An adept in the art of deceiving cannot "ply his methods" here without being detected. It would be well for us to remember, also, that many people, especially in their earlier Christian experience, have not learned to love sinful men. Some people are born with a naturally cold heart, and find it hard, even after conversion, to love sinners as they should. But this, as well as any other great barrier in our way, can be broken down by importunate prayer to God. To try to win souls to Christ, then, without love in our hearts for them, is a dead cold business, and generally results in disheartening failure.

And yet another means of winning men is, to visit them, be with them, to come into face-to-face contact with them. Some of our missionaries have learned, through necessity, the importance of face-to-face work. One great secret of the spread of Mohammedanism, and other isms, is this kind of work. The methods that are successful in [illegible] false faith may be studied [illegible] by those who attempt to propa[illegible] true faith. This plan of work is [illegible] only at home, but especially, we [illegible] heathen people. If we can [illegible] under this head to-day, occa-sion, and add to the success of our faithful missionaries in their far off fields, we shall feel that we have not written in vain. By the way, we have been highly pleased at the prompt response of some of these to our request that they give us their views of a "call to do mission work." Your letters are welcome, brethren and sisters, on this or any other topic. And again let us say that we would like to have the views of these faithful men and women as to this face to-face work with the heathen. Will they tell us to what extent consecrated laymen might do this kind of work by going to the foreign field, and, while following their chosen business, use their opportunities to do good in this way?

DON'T.

At the risk of repeating some things already discussed in these columns, we wish here to add a few dont's that may be useful at least to some of our readers:—

Don't go before the church and be received for baptism, and then ask some other pastor or preacher baptize you. You may think this a small matter; but it is not a small matter with the pastor of the church. You place him in a very awkward position. If he knows that you prefer that some one else should baptize you, he of course has self respect enough not to insist on doing so himself, whilst to do so is both his right and his duty. As small a matter as you may think this to be, the fact that such requests have been made and complied with, will account for the sudden resignation of some worthy and competent pastors. It may not be amiss to add that no minister who is not the pastor should consent to baptize a convert that had so little respect for the pastor as to ask him to do so. To consent to do so, shows little respect for the pastor's feeling.

Don't ask, as a rule, any other pastor except your own to marry you, or officiate at the burial of your loved ones. There may be peculiar circumstances when you would like to have a former pastor present; but even in that case, let him only assist the pastor. Right often the above "don't" is disregarded, and quite a display is made at fashionable weddings by sending for him who is considered the more fashionable preacher, while the pastor is at best only an invited guest. The same rule holds good at special funeral occasions. You may wish to make a display at your wedding, but don't do so at the expense of your pastor. Your heart may be crushed at the death of a dear one, but that is no excuse for crushing the feelings of your pastor and also those of his wife and children. And when you do ask your pastor to officiate at your marriage, don't send him home without some compensation for his services. If you have not paid the preacher something for marrying you, do so yet. It is mean to treat pastors, as they are often treated, in this thing.

Don't disparage the preaching of your pastor by extravagant praise of a sermon from the passing brother, while you seldom speak of his. It is a poor preacher indeed that can't get up a few "big sermons." You have heard his best; wait till you hear his worst, and then make your comparisons. After all, it is not the man that flashes who is the best preacher, but the man that wears well.

Don't run wild over a visiting pastor, or evangelist, while your own pastor misses you often at the prayer-meeting or regular services of the sanctuary. It is remarkable how zealous and pious some of our church members seem to be under the preaching of a new man, or when "something unusual" is going on at the church, and how their spiritual thermometer goes down toward zero when the "excitement" is over.

We have a few more don'ts on hand. We would be more willing to deal them out if we were sure our brethren and sisters desired them. The above will hardly please all of them; but some of those held in reserve may be a little more palatable, or may fit "somebody else" better than those given. Shall we have them?

IT HAS been announced that Rev. Dr. J. J. Hall resigned the pastorate of the Baptist Tabernacle of this city to accept the call to Park Avenue Church, Norfolk, Va. Dr. Hall has proved a most acceptable pastor of his Raleigh charge, and his ministry here has been blessed with abundant success. Since he came among us the Tabernacle has added greatly to its numbers and usefulness, and the church building has been rendered one of the most beautiful and commodious in the State. That Dr. Hall's ministry has been most successful, there are hundreds of evidences; and that he is to leave his church just at this time is to be generally regretted. Our best wishes follow him in his new field, and we extend congratulations to the brethren in Norfolk.

AGAIN we feel called on to remind our readers that we are in no way responsible for the views of our correspondents. While we reserve the right to reject anything that may seem to us objectionable and uncalled for, we express our views only in our editorials.

IT WOULD have been a joy to any one to witness the spirit of unity and determined effort which pervaded Wake Forest commencement week. The board of trustees, the faculty, every alumnus and student, seemed in better hopes for the College than ever before, and all seemed determined to work for it during the summer. Such a spirit cannot live too long. Let the proper work be done, let the people be made to believe that Wake Forest is the place for their boys, then, no doubt of it, three hundred students will matriculate next September.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. J. T. Jenkins of Wilmington is engaged in a promising revival.

....Rev. Dr. J. W. Ford of St. Louis has received a call to Albany, N. Y. He will accept.

....Rev. J. F. Davis, formerly of Showns Cross Roads, Tenn., is at present located at Vilas, this State.

....We are very glad to hear that Rev. W. B. Oliver is succeeding well as pastor of the Wilmington church.

....Rev. W. B. Morton reports having held a very successful meeting in Louisburg. About fifteen persons were baptized.

....Hon. C. M. Cooke of Louisburg paid us a pleasant visit last week while in attendance on the U. S. Circuit Court.

....Rev. H. A. Bagby preached his first sermon as pastor of the Clay Street Church, Richmond, Va., on Sunday, May 28th.

....Dr. J. J. Hall of the Raleigh Baptist Tabernacle left last Monday for Hendersonville to aid Bro. Glenn in a series of meetings.

....We were very glad to see Bro. W. M. Hurst of Wilmington in our office last week. Bro. Hurst is an active Sunday school worker.

....Rev. J. D. Moore, recently graduated at Wake Forest College, has received a call to the church at Beaufort. Our best wishes follow him.

....Rev. D. P. Bridges, a student of the Louisville Seminary during the past session, has returned to this State, and is at present located at Catawba.

....Miss Moon, missionary to China, has declined to return to her former district, and it is probable that she will be transferred to Central China.

....Now is the time to order your Sunday school supplies for the third quarter. The Supply Store in this city is the place from which to order them.

....Rev. Jos. Blalock has accepted the call to supply the church at Hickory for three months. Bro. Blalock has been at the Seminary during the past session.

....Cards are out announcing the wedding of Miss Minnie Etta Owen and Mr. M. P. Claud at Portsmouth, Va., June 23d. We extend our congratulations in advance.

....We were glad to see Rev. Jasper Howell, Jr., a student of Wake Forest College, on his way to his home in Lenoir. He would accept a church during the summer.

....President Taylor of Wake Forest College was in the city last week. He reports that already he has the assurance of thirty-five new students next year. A good beginning.

....We acknowledge the receipt of tasty invitations to the commencement exercises of the North Carolina College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, and Horner's Military School.

....The sixty-ninth anniversary of the American Baptist Publication Society was held at Denver, Col., May 24th-28th. A very interesting report of the proceedings is on our table.

....Prof. Collier Cobb, formerly Assistant Professor of Geology at the University of North Carolina, has been placed in charge of that chair. The University is to be congratulated.

....Rev. J. O. Alderman writes that he has secured the assistance of Rev. O. L. Stringfield for a series of meetings in his church at Concord. They will begin the first week in July.

....Rev. F. M. Royall, who graduated from Wake Forest College last year, having taken a course this year at the Seminary with considerable credit, leaves next November for China, his future field.

....Rev. S. J. Porter, who graduated at the recent commencement of Wake Forest College, is at present at his home, Orton, N. C., taking a short rest before embarking for Brazil, his future field.

....The last issue of the Seminary Magazine is considerably above the average. The frontispiece this month is a good likeness of Rev. A. T. Robertson, recently given the degree of D. D. by Wake Forest College.

....The present address of Hon. G. W Sanderlin, recently tendered an appointment by the President, is 920 New York Avenue, Washington, D. C. His family will not remove to that city until the fall.

....Walter Emerson, the well known cornetist, died suddenly in Boston, Mass., June 2d. He was the son-in-law of Rev. P. S. Henson, D. D., Chicago. His wife, Mrs. Emerson, was the well-known and popular soprano singer.—Christian Herald.

....Profs. Poteat and Carlyle of Wake Forest were in Raleigh on business last week.

....The Roanoke Association of Virginia has provided a capacious tent to move about in destitute parts of its territory, and has invited Rev. J. H. Lamberth of the Greenville church to do evangelistic work for them.

....Rev. W. R. Cullom who, having graduated at Wake Forest College, pursued an advanced course at the Louisville Seminary last year, has been secured to supply for Rev. J. W. Lynch in and around Danville, Ky.

....Dr. B. H. Carroll's great speech on "Papal Fields," made at Nashville, Tenn., before the Southern Baptist Convention, is published in pamphlet form by the Texas Baptist Standard of Waco, Texas, and sold at ten cents.

....The American Baptist Publication Society's Graded Sunday-school Lesson Helps and Periodicals for the third quarter are on our table. As usual, they are in every respect up to the high standard of the publications of the Society.

....After a long struggle, Dr. Talmage's Brooklyn church has at last settled its debt of $100,000. The settlement was made on a basis of the payment of twenty-three per cent on the dollar, on the threat of the Doctor to resign unless the money was raised.

....By reference to a communication in another column, it will be seen that Dr. J. Wm. Jones, for many years, Assistant Secretary of the Home Mission Board, Atlanta, Ga., has accepted the position as chaplain at his Alma Mater, the University of Virginia.

... On Sunday morning last four persons were received into the Fayetteville Street Baptist church, Raleigh, by experience. At night Rev. O. L Stringfield administered the ordinance of baptism to twelve persons. The meetings will be continued through this week.

....We very much regret that circumstances were such that our correspondent was unable to attend the recent commencement exercises of Chowan Baptist Female Institute. We copy from the News and Observer a report of the proceedings, which appears in another column.

....It is to be regretted that Mrs. M. Patham has resigned her position at the Oxford Female Seminary. She was in charge especially of the literary work of the institution, and the splendid essays of Tuesday are sufficient evidence of her ability to train young ladies in this department of educational work.

....Rev. H. W. Battle, recently made D. D. by Wake Forest College, preached the baccalaureate sermon before the first graduating class of the North Carolina College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts last Monday night. The effort was pronounced excellent, and fully came up to the high expectations of the large audience.

....There are, in North Carolina, Missionary Baptists, Anti-Missionary Baptists, O Missionary Baptists, and Trunk Baptists. The O Missionary and Trunk Baptists are numerous, but not generally well understood. They ought to be looked after, labored with, prayed for, and, if possible, exterminated by absorption.—C. Durham.

....Rev. Mr. Poteat of New Haven, son in law of Dr. A. J. Gordon of Boston, spoke very decidedly in favor of the "inductive" method of Sunday-school study. He reported a four-years' trial of the "inductive" in his Sunday-school. In discussion another said, "I care not whether the series be inductive or deductive, so it is productive. What is needed is the method which shall compel personal study."—Report of anniversary exercises of the Am. Bap. Home Mission Society, in Christian Herald.

....The following very complimentary notice of Rev. Frank Dixon appears in the New York Christian Enquirer: "Rev. Frank Dixon made a very favorable impression in his first sermon at the Epiphany church, Sunday morning. His text was, 'Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth.' He was very clear in statement, fresh in thought and his diction choice in its lucidity. He resembles his brothers in general appearance and combines their best qualities as thinker and speaker."

....The First Baptist church on last Sunday extended a call to Rev. C. B. Williams of Winton, Hertford county. He is a young man with a wife and no children. He is a native of Camden county, N. C., and in 1887 entered Wake Forest College, graduating in 1891 as valedictorian of his class. He was ordained in 1890, and in 1891 became pastor of the church at Winton. He is a close student, careful thinker, and prudent man. He has not yet signified his intention as to acceptance.—N. C. Baptist, June 7.

... Sunday morning last was observed as a reunion of the Sunday-school of the First Baptist church of this city. Tickets of invitation had been sent out to all former members of the school to join in the exercises of the day, and many responded with their presence. The morning preaching hour was devoted to this service. The pulpit was beautifully festooned with flowers for the occasion. Superintendent S. W. Brewer presided, and Dr. T. E. Skinner, one of the former pastors, led in prayer. Deacons J. H. Alford and T. H. Briggs delivered addresses on the history and work of the school. The pastor, Dr. J. W. Carter, also made an address earnestly soliciting increased interest on the part of parents and others in the school. Superintendent Brewer also made some pertinent remarks, urging a return of old pupils and the entrance of new ones. The afternoon was "Children's Day," and Bro. and Sister Dodd gave one of their delightful entertainments with the infant class, which they have taught for more than a quarter of a century. The exercises consisted of songs, recitations, &c., and the large audience present were greatly pleased. Twenty-three graduates from the class received diplomas.

....We clip the following from the Durham Globe of the 7th inst: "At the First Baptist the pastor, Rev. W. C. Tyree, discoursed to his congregation in the morning from the text found in Phillipians, 3, 13; at night from Matthew 13, 33. This being the anniversary of his pastorate, the pastor reviewed his work, which showed that during the year he had received into the church by letter forty-eight members, by baptism thirty five, by restoration two, making a total of eighty-five; dismissed by letter nineteen, excluded twenty one, visits made 563, burials seventeen, marriages thirteen, sermons preached ninety-three. The total membership of this growing church is now 564.

....The Chautauqua Assembly has issued a Bulletin for Ministers calling attention to various courses which are to be given at Chautauqua, and which will possess especial interest to the ministerial profession. The exercises will include lectures on philosophy, ethics, Biblical study, homiletics, sociology, church work, missions and many other subjects. Among the lecturers and preachers may be mentioned Prof. Henry Drummond of Glasgow, Prof. George H. Palmer of Harvard, Pres. J. W. Bashford of Ohio Wesleyan, Prof. Herrick Johnson of Chicago, Prof. J. S. Riggs of Auburn Theological Seminary, Dr. W. H. Boole of New York, Bishop Alphaeus Wilson of Baltimore, Rev. A. J. Palmer of New York, Rev. Russell H. Conwell of Philadelphia, Prof. A. J. Herbertson of Edinburgh, Scotland, Rev. Philip S. Moxom of Boston, and many others. A ministerial club will be organized at Chautauqua early in July and will hold daily sessions during the season. The general schedule of lectures, concerts, and entertainments is unusually attractive and quite in accord with the very great material changes and improvements which have been made at Chautauqua since last season.

President Chas. E. Taylor's Address.

We publish below the address which President Chas. E. Taylor, D. D., of Wake Forest College, had prepared for the late Senior Class, but the approach of a storm rendering it necessary that the exercises be made as brief as possible, it was omitted.

THE ADDRESS.

Young Gentlemen:—The June number of The Forum, which has just reached us, contains a remarkable article from the pen of President Thwing of Ohio. In order to estimate the comparative chances of eminent success in life of the men who have graduated at college, and of those who have not, he has taken the trouble to examine in detail the six volumes of Appleton's Cyclopedia of American Biography.

The results of his investigation seem to me to be very remarkable. Out of the more than 15,000 men who have been deemed worthy of mention in this collection, thirty-five per cent. have been college-men. His estimate is that the chances of the man who has never entered college walls for attaining to eminent distinction, are in the proportion of one to ten thousand. The chances of the college man are one in forty, or two hundred and fifty times as great.

I have ventured to call your attention to these results, not to flatter you with hopes which may be delusive, not to stimulate any ambition which may be unworthy, and least of all, to foster a pride which would surely be foolish and unholy, but with the hope that, as you ponder them, you may see how wide is the pathway which opens before you—a pathway of eminent usefulness to your fellow men. This is not empty sentiment, or the rhetoric of commencement oratory. It is a safe deduction from an exhaustive study of the facts, a cold and careful calculation, that the chances of the men who have really availed themselves of the opportunities which a college offers are out of all proportion to the chances of the men who have not enjoyed these privileges. Your Alma Mater will have the right to expect that you will be leaders in the world of useful thought and useful action.

The results of the investigations to which I have just alluded at first amazed me. That in this comparatively new country, the very paradise of the so called self-made man, and which, for the first century of its history, afforded few facilities for college training—that there should be such a large ratio of college bred men to others among those who have obtained the recognition of mention in this great cyclopedia, suggests at first thought that some mistake must have been made either in the collection of the facts or in the inferences from them.

And yet, when I remember what liberal culture is, what it aims to do and often accomplishes, surprise and incredulity begin to vanish. What has the College sought to do for you? What has been the high end for which, during these bygone years, professor and student have labored together harmoniously, happily, successfully, in lecture-room and laboratory? The best account that I have ever seen of it is given by Prof. Huxley in one of his "Lay Sermons." He says:—

"That man, I think, has had a liberal education who has been so trained in youth that his body is the ready servant of his will and does with ease and pleasure all the work that, as a mechanism, it is capable of; whose intellect is a clear, cold logic engine, with all its parts of equal strength, and in smooth working order; ready like a steam engine to be turned to any kind of work, and spin the gossamers as well as forge the anchors of the mind; whose mind is stored with a knowledge of the great and fundamental truths of nature, and of the laws of her operations; one who, no stunted ascetic, is full of life and fire, but whose passions are trained to come to heel by a vigorous will, the servant of a tender conscience; who has learned to love all beauty, whether of nature or of art, to hate all vileness, to respect others as himself."

This is a high ideal. Alas, that the actual so often falls far short of it! Yet with such a conception of culture, of the culture that we seek to give in our colleges, the wonder is rather that even a larger proportion of eminent and successful men are not college men. Many reasons might be suggested why this is not the case. But one of the most potent of the obstructive causes is, I imagine, that too many relax their application to study, and take too long a resting spell, when once their diplomas are in their hands. Let this not be the case with you. You are now graduates. You have won your first degree. Now for the next. You can win that also, but I warn you that the price of success is going to be labor, painstaking, self-sacrifice. The curricula of active life will be more difficult, its examinations, which will come daily and hourly, will be more exacting than any that you have left behind you. From my heart I congratulate you that you stand among those whom President Thwing proves to occupy a vantage ground of so much hope and promise. Yet in all honesty and earnestness would I remind you that it is only a vantage ground. You hold the strategic position, but the battle is yet to be fought and won. But we know the temper of your weapons. We have tested the strength and fineness of your fibre. We have confidence in you that you will, as a class, make a record of which your Alma Mater will not be ashamed. With unfeigned interest will she watch your careers, sympathize in your struggles, and rejoice in your victories. A tender, cherishing, loving mother will the College be to you. Loyal comrades and helpers will you find among the widely scattered family of her foster sons. For you come into no unworthy fellowship as you enter the noble band of men who constitute Alumni of Wake Forest. Never did the college seem to me to be so rich and strong as when, at the banquet last night, I looked around and saw the sons who had made their annual pilgrimage to greet each other and bring the homage of loyal hearts to the shrine of their foster mother. Were our endowment all lost, were our buildings all consumed, were our beautiful campus devastated by the breath of a cyclone, the college would still be rich in the wealth of love of her children, which is to her a more goodly heritage than any of her material possessions.

Now, as we part, may I give you a motto for your class? It is "Ich Dien," "I Serve." It is, as you know, the motto of a royal house in Europe. Were this all, I should not suggest it. But it was the motto of him who came, not to be ministered unto, but to minister; even the incarnate Son of God. For, after all, whether in the light of time or of eternity, no life amounts to much which does not willingly adjust itself in harmony with the purposes of God for the perfection of individual character, and for the building up of that kingdom which shall abide forever.

Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

Dear Recorder:—By moving up the commencement at Wake Forest one week, it is brought that the same day witnesses the commencement exercises of both Wake Forest College and the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

On May 30th, the last examination, and perhaps the hardest, Old Testament English, was held, and the strain was over. The examinations here are quite severe, being in two sections—one for the forenoon and the other for the afternoon. Hence quite often students spend from 8 o'clock a. m., till 5 p. m., in the examination room, only stopping an hour for dinner. On the evening of the 30th, the Broadus Literary Society had its annual literary exercises in the parlor of the Walnut St. church. T. J. Davenport of Virginia had been elected Salutatorian and F. M. Royall of North Carolina, Valedictorian. The latter seemed especially appropriate, as Bro. Royall sails for China this fall. The address on the occasion was delivered by Rev. Carter Helm Jones, now pastor of the McFerran Memorial church of this city, but formerly pastor of the First church of Knoxville, Tenn. The RECORDER readers will remember that he is the one who last year preached the baccalaureate sermon at Wake Forest. His subject on this occasion was "The Preacher's Relation to Literature."

On May 31st, was held at 9 o'clock a. m., a called meeting of the Seminary Missionary Society to arrange plans for the summer. Louisville is a city in which the Catholics predominate, while among Protestants, the Presbyterians are in the lead. But the efficient work of this Society is fast making Louisville a Baptist city. A new church is dedicated every year. This year there were two. Well nigh every student in the Seminary is engaged in some kind of Christian work each Sunday, in the city, or surrounding country. From the Missionary Society meeting, we all repaired to Walnut St. church at 11 o'clock to hear a lecture by Dr. J. B. Marvin, a physician of the city, a prominent professor in the medical schools here, and superintendant of Broadway Baptist church Sunday-school. Upon the subject, "Our Secret Friend, and Foes," he gave an admirable address upon sanitary questions, with an exposition of the germ theory, all of which was made especially appropriate by reason of the fear of cholera this summer.

The commencement exercises proper were divided into two sections. On the morning of June 1st, an address was delivered by Rev. Jas. T. Dickinson of Orange, N. J., a full graduate of the Seminary in 1885. His subject, "The Principle of Synthesis, the Principle of Power," was indeed treated with a master hand. After this the diplomas were delivered in separate schools and the special departments.

At night at 8 o'clock quite a larg audience was assembled to witness the last item on the program—the delivery of diplomas to the graduates. There were thirteen English graduates, with degree of Th. G.: W. H. Baldock, Indiana; Charles Babb, Ohio; T. A. Conway, Kentucy; J. L. Limes, Ohio; Norman Luck, Virginia; B. F. Milam, Arkansas; N. W. P. Bacon, Georgia; C. Hitchell, Indiana; Z. W. Pigg, Kentucky; W. B. Rutledge, Tennessee; P. H. Stephens, Missouri; Amos Stout, Kentucky; G. V. Tilley, North Carolina.

Of the Eclectic graduates, with degree of Th. B., there were nine, as follows: M. B. Adams, W. Virginia; Joseph Aden, Texas; C. L. Berry, Kentucky; I. T. Creek, Missouri; C. J. Thompson, North Carolina; T. J. Davenport, Virginia; F. W. Eberhardt; Missouri; H. A. Hunt, Missouri; J. T. Johnson, Virginia.

After the delivery of the diplomas to these twenty two, the representatives of the full-graduate class, spoke, seven in number. The whole number of full graduates, with degree of Th. M., was seventeen, as follows: D. Y. Bagby, Kentucky; Weston Bruner, Kentucky; W. T. Creath, Virginia; Marion Gassaway, Sout Carolina; W. W. Hamilton, Virginia; Grant S. Housh, Indiana; C. T. Kinkanon, Virginia; R. P. Lucado, Tennessee; D. G. Whittinghill, Kentucky; W. B. McGarity, Georgia; W. H. Major, Tennessee; V. I. Masters, South Carolina; Nathan Maynard, Maryland; M. E. Parrish, Virgina; J. R. Penteff, South Carolina; J. S. Sowers, Virginia; T. P. Stafford, Missouri.

Those that spoke were Messrs. Bagby, Housh, Hamilton, Major, McGarity, and Parrish. The speeches were of a high order. After the speeches, Dr. Broadus delivered the diplomas to the whole seventeen, and then followed with one of his exquisite addresses. He is one man who holds the sincere respect and reverence of everyone that knows him. May God spare him many years longer!

The Seminary has had this year its most prosperous session. Number of students, number of graduates, amount of endowment, all this year surpass all previous records. North Carolina is better represented this year than heretofore. If our young men realized what is offered here in the way of advantages, instead of eighteen, North Carolina would have eighty students here. A man can get more here in one year in the way of preaching power and material, than in ten years of private study. There are ample facilities here of taking the practical along with the theoretical.

Commencement of Chowan Baptist Female Institute.

The forty fifth commencement of the Chowan Baptist Female Institute, Murfreesboro, N. C., was held May 28–31. A large crowd was present, and it was the general verdict that the exercises were better and more enjoyable than for many years. President and Mrs. Brewer are to be congratulated on the successful termination of their twelfth session. Coming to the Institute after the death of the saintly McDowell, they have maintained the high standard that they found, and each year have increased the facilities and equipment of the school until it now ranks with the best colleges in the South and is known far and wide for the thoroughness and accuracy of the work done. Genuine, not showy, work has ever been the motto of the school, and instead of seeing how many graduates he could put upon the world, President Brewer has striven to have but a few and those few to be as thorough as possible.

Murfreesboro is an ideal place for a female college—its people cultivated, refined and educated, its location famous for its healthfulness. Few schools, if indeed a single one, can show as fine a health record as Chowan Institute. Its alumnæ are scattered all over the States of the Union, and several are missionaries in foreign lands. A noble school with a grand history and a brilliant future.

The annual sermon was preached by Rev. J. L. McCutcheon of Franklin, Va., from Matt. 20: 26, 27—"Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant." Mr. McCutcheon is a scholarly man, a plain, practical preacher, and believes that thought, not mere rhetoric, will reach the hearts and minds of people. His sermon made a profound impression.

Monday evening the elocution class gave An Evening with Shakespeare. Selections from various plays were rendered. The young ladies showed much native talent and very careful training. The "Ophelia" of Miss Bass, "Henry V." of Miss Eldridge, "Rosalind" of Miss Brewer, and "Celia" of Miss Joyner deserve special mention.

Tuesday evening was

CLASS NIGHT.

The graduating class numbered fourteen as follows: Anne Bruce Brewer, Pattie Virginia Brinkley, Bettie Frank Brown, Jennie Josie Daughtrey, Ella Lee Gilbert, Virginia Green Joyner, Mary Lizzie Mitchell, Ila Annette Newsome, Kate Gertrude Newsome, Evelyn Lee Oliver, Sallie Sherrod Salsbury, Rosa Olivia Speight, Mary Jackson Wood, Sophie Norfleet Wood.

The history of the class was read by Miss Kate Newsome of Hertford county, N. C.; the prophecy, by Jennie Joyner of Franklinton, N. C.; the class poem, by Miss Rosa Speight of Bertie county, N. C.; selections from Tennyson were recited; an essay on his life was read by Miss Sophie Wood of Murfreesboro, N. C.; several of his songs were sung, and some instrumental pieces rendered. The evening was a very pleasant one, and reflected much credit on the class.

LITERARY ADDRESS.

This address was delivered by Rev. Dr. C. S. Blackwell of Elizabeth City, N. C. Subject—"The Present Woman and the Coming Man." Dr. Blackwell is of commanding appearance and a very fluent speaker. He believes in driving his points home with illustrations, and he kept the undivided attention of his audience.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

The graduating exercises were carried out according to the following program:

Processional March—"Marche Hongroise" (four pianos), Liszt. Misses Elliot, Whitfield, S. Mitchell, Nowell, Britton, Parker, Copeland, Vaughan.

Oxford Female Seminary.

The excellent report of the RECORDER representative, for which we are grateful, closed without noticing the meeting of the ALUMNÆ ASSOCIATION.

This meeting occurred on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. This was an inspiring gathering. At that hour there assembled nearly one hundred of the alumnæ of the Seminary from all parts of North Carolina—some who were here under Dr. Waitt's administration, some who were under Mr. Mills', and some who were pupils of Raleigh Female Seminary under our administration, whose allegiance is now given to Oxford.

The address of welcome was made by Miss Lanie Currin of Oxford, and was responded to by Mrs. T. H. Briggs of Raleigh. Both of these addresses are said to have been of a most interesting character. Many new names were added to the roll of the Association, and the liveliest interest manifested in the prosperity of the Seminary.

A few changes in the Faculty may without impropriety be mentioned here.

Miss Ida Poteat of the Yanceyville family that has given to Wake Forest a well-known Professor, and to New Haven, Conn., an eloquent preacher, will take charge of our Art Department. She was a pupil of ours in Raleigh Female Seminary, and was ranked as the best of the Art pupils. Since that time she has continued her Art studies both at home and abroad; and last fall went North the more thoroughly to prepare herself for the position here. While there she received lessons both from the Cooper Union Art School, and from the best private teachers of the city. In every way she is a valuable addition to the Faculty.

The family of Shelby, N. C., that has given to the Baptist pulpit three of the most eloquent preachers of the county, furnishes another member of our Faculty. Miss Addie Dixon, who is now completing a course of study in one of the largest and best of the Ohio Colleges, will take a position in our English course, making elocution her special work. Like her brothers, she has marked talents for this and has had special training in the methods of teaching it.

F. P. Hobgood, Jr., also, who has just taken his degree of A. B from Wake Forest, will be one of the Faculty.

F. P. HOBGOOD.

Salem Female Academy.

Mr. Editor:—As many of your readers are either patrons of, or friends to, this Salem Female Academy, I will send you a short item relative to the ninety-first annual commencement of this institution, as the graduating exercises close to day.

In detail, the exercises were conducted on the same general plans as have for years characterized the institution, and forty-one young ladies made up the class who to day were awarded diplomas, embracing the following names:

Laura Lolien Allen, N. C.; Ella B. Anderson, N. C.; Florence Barrow, N. C.; Beulah Earl Brooks, N. C.; Angeline Elizabeth Carrier, N. C.; Mary Elizabeth Chaffin, Va.; Mattie B. Cooper, N. C.; Mary Antoinette Conrad, N. C.; Irma Ione Cordill, La.; Frances Louise Creight, S. C.; Lillian Ruffin Crutchfield, N. C.; Viola Lee Davis, N. C.; Bertha B. Dawson, N. C.; Claudia Edna Dicks, N. C.; Effie Gilmer, Texas; Caroline Virginia Greer, Va.; Eliza Janney Gulick, S. C.; Minnie Lee Hancock, N. C.; Sallie D. Hyman, N. C.; Mattie Ida Johns, N. C.; M. Birchel Kirk, N C.; Laura Lillian Leslie, N. C.; Mary Irene McCauley, N. C.; Nannie McGehee, N. C.; Mary A. McKeown, Fla.; Dora E. Miller, N. C.; Annie M. Moore, N. C.; Elinor J. Neely, S. C.; Adelaide Hermine Nimocks, N. C.; Claudia Means Palmer, Va.; Fannie S. Perrow, Va.; Huberta Lang Read, Texas; Mary Reid, N. C.; Ethelwold May Roberts, N. C.; Blanche Irene Sims, S. C.; Lucia C. Swanson, Ala.; Narcia Adeline Taylor, Va.; Alice Thompson, S. C.; Carrie Lucy Thorp, N. C.; Lena Welborn, N. C.; Lula M. White, N. C.; Mattie Belo Williams, N. C.

The average attendance during the year just closed reached 326; 286 were from North Carolina, 19 from Virginia, 13 from South Carolina, 5 from Florida, 5 from Texas, 4 from Tennessee, 4 from Georgia, 4 from Louisiana, 4 from Pennsylvania, 3 from Kentucky, 2 from Alabama, 3 from Arkansas, 1 from Mississippi, 1 from Missouri, 1 from District of Columbia, 1 from New Jersey, 1 from New York, 1 from Rhode Island, 1 from Canada, 1 from Ohio, 1 from Illinois, 1 from Colorado, and 1 from Georgia.

Large crowds of people representing twenty eight States attended the exercises, and the management of the school received much praise for the manifest fruits of its work.

The Principal let fall the most pleasing of all facts during the course of one of his short talks—that fifty-one young ladies had made a public profession of religion during the past year, thus demonstrating the fact that the school is a Christian home to all of its pupils. S.

A Word Personal.

It has been announced that I have been elected and have accepted the chaplaincy of the University of Virginia, and will enter upon my duties there the 15th of September next, thus severing my connection with the Home Board which I have served as assistant Secretary for the past six years.

It was a hard struggle for me to consent to sever ties so strong, and to resign a position of such great usefulness, but after giving the question the most careful consideration and earnestly seeking the Divine guidance, I was brought to the conclusion that it was my duty to accept this position at my Alma Mater, and to enter that field of wondrous promise among the 500 choice young men who come from every State in the South and from other sections.

During the six years I have been connected with the Board I have received from it, its officers and its individual members, the most considerate kindness, and I shall carry with me through life the most grateful recollections of their hearty co-operation.

I cannot find language to express the thoughtful kindness, the gentlemanly courtesy, the Christian forbearance, the loving helpfulness, with which I have always been treated by my distinguished and able Chief, my honored and beloved brother, Dr. I. T. Tichenor.

We have consulted together, worked together, prayed together, and during all these years nothing that came within a thousand miles of a jar, or an alienation, has ever arisen between us. Bound together by common sympathies, common trials, common hopes and common joys, we have formed ties which time can never sever.

Nor can I ever forget the kindness I have received all over the South, as I have traveled from Maryland to Texas, and from Florida to Missouri, in the interest of Home Missions.

I have found the position one of hard work—unceasing toil day and night—and many trials, but the sympathies, loving words, and loving deeds of brethren in all sections of our territory have sweetened the toil and neutralized the trials, and I leave the position with sincere regret.

The Board has requested me to continue my work until my successor is elected, or at least until my new duties demand my attention, and I have consented to do so. My address will, therefore, still be Atlanta until the 1st of September.

May I not earnestly ask that my brethren will follow me to my new, important, and difficult field at the Virginia University, with kindly interest and loving sympathy, and that they will sometimes ask God's blessing upon my work!

Brethren, remember your pledges made to this Board at the Convention in Raleigh. They were to be paid by the first of June. Our creditors need their money. They are asking us how much longer they will have to wait before we can give them relief.

Ordination and Dedication at Mount Zion Church.

On Sunday morning, June 4th, 1893, at Mount Zion church, Flat River Association, Bro. Joseph G. Blalock was ordained to the full work of the gospel ministry. The examining council consisted of the pastor and Revs. J. A. Stradley and J. S. Hardaway, together with brethren B. D. Howard, S. L. Howard, Sol. O'Bryant, Crude Currin, and J. F. Meadows.

Rev. J. A. Stradley conducted a searching examination, the result of which was reported to the church. The church voted to ordain. Rev. J. S. Hardaway read the Scriptures and preached the ordination sermon. Then the presbytery laid on hands, and Brother Stradley made the ordaining prayer. After the prayer, the pastor delivered the charge and presented the Bible.

The service was very impressive, and many in the vast congregation were moved to tears. Bro. Blalock comes from a family of high standing, and has the entire confidence of the entire community. He has been pious from his early childhood, and enters the ministry without a shadow resting upon his character. The benediction was pronounced by the candidate.

In the evening the new church was dedicated. It is 40 by 60 feet, well proportioned for speaking, will seat about five or six hundred people. It has large windows swung on cords, double doors, high pitch, and an inclined floor. A nice pulpit set has been ordered, and the edifice will be painted in about two weeks.

The dedication service was very interesting. Rev. J. G. Blalock read the Scriptures. Rev. J. A. Stradley preached the dedication sermon, and Rev. J. S. Hardaway offered the dedicatory prayer. Bro. B. D. Howard prepared and read an historical sketch of the church from its origin to the present time. It was of much interest to the congregation. The sermons of the day were so excellent that the church requested their authors to send them to the RECORDER for publication. C. A. JENKENS.

Call to the Ministry.

I have taken considerable interest in this subject as it has been discussed in recent numbers of the RECORDER. I intended to watch the discussion, and had some thought of writing an article on it when the other brethren had gotten through, and so stated to a brother who had written on it, but Bro. G. W. Harman's article in the RECORDER of June 7th so completely covers the ground, as appears to my mind from a Scriptural standpoint, that I am nearly in the position that Daniel Webster was before the Supreme Court of the United States. He and George E. Badger, so I have heard, were employed together in a case before that court, and Mr. Badger could not attend court when the case was to be heard; so he wrote out his argument and sent it to Mr. Webster. When the case was called, Mr. Webster arose and stated to the court that his associate counsel, Mr. Badger, could not be present, but had kindly written out his argument, and with the permission of the court he would read it. The court, as a matter of course, gave permission; Mr. Webster read it; and when he had gotten through, remarked, "I have nothing to add."

It will be observed that I use the word nearly. I hardly think "the call comes through the Christian brotherhood." I think it a matter which lies wholly between one's own conscience and God, the Spirit impressing in that direction, and the brethren, some how or other, find it out and recognize it. It may be that the Spirit impresses the brethren in that direction, and I would fain believe that he does. And when the brother who is called ascertains the mind of his brethren on the subject, it is very helpful to him. It increases his faith in the reality of the call, and encourages him to go forward in obedience to the call. Upon reflection, I doubt that Bro. Harman would object to this manner of stating the case. If called of God to preach the gospel, as he and I seem to understand it, the call must have existed in his own heart before it ever entered the mind of any one else; if so, it could not have come through the brethren. They recognize an existing fact and become helps to the brother to obey the call.

I am glad Bro. Harman wrote his article. I think he is on the right line. I have been heartily ashamed of some of the positions taken on the subject.

Ouachita College, Arkansas.

The commencement exercises of Ouachita College closed June 7th. There were in the graduating class eight—three young ladies and five young gentlemen. There were three hundred on the roll of pupils for the session just closed.

On June 6th, the Board of Trustees conferred the degree of D. D. on Rev. A. T. Robertson, a graduate of Wake Forest College and now one of the faculty in the Theological Seminary at Louisville, Ky.

The Baptists of Arkansas are taking a decided stand on the subject of education. Over the State many fine schools are springing up. The public schools, too, are in the hands of ripe scholars.

thing special or distinguishing. He foreknew them as loving himself. If not, what was it? The relation of this verse to the preceding shows that it is those who love God the Apostle is still speaking about. God foreknew certain conditions in them. He foreknew their love to him, and all that led to it, their repentance and faith towards him. It is nothing strange, therefore, that he should entertain purposes or decrees towards them of a favorable character. In effect, the Apostle says, God looking from out a past eternity into time, and beholding those believers as loving himself, seeing them, though held down by much imperfection, yet distinguished from others by their love of him, and their desires after obedience to his will, he decreed within himself that everlasting life and glory should be the destiny of all such; and that all things should work together to compass this end, and make their final and eternal good secure.

Paul goes on to specify God's attitude and procedure towards those whom he thus foreknew. He says "he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son that he might be the first-born among many brethren." Jesus is the perfect standard of moral goodness after whose glorious image believers are to be renewed in the spirit of their minds. It is true that those who love God are already assimilated in some measure to the moral likeness of God's Son. Is not divine love the express image of his character! And because those here spoken of are characterized by that love, therefore are they in some degree assimilated to the image of Christ. But the conformity to the image of God's Son to which they are predestinated is evidently something further and higher than that to which they have already attained. There is a conformity to him in his condition of celestial glory to which the Scriptures frequently point. Paul in speaking of our likeness to the first Adam, and to the second Adam, says, "As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." The Apostle John says, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." The very bodies of believers, we are assured, shall be made like unto his glorious body." They are represented as joint-heirs with Christ in the glory which shall be revealed. Plainly it is to the full and final assimilation to Christ, in his condition of celestial glory, including, of course, their assimilation to his life and spirit here, to which those who love God are here said to be predestinated.

And one of the reasons why they are reserved for such a high and glorious recompense is given by the Apostle when he adds "that he might be the first born among many brethren." Besides God's desire and decree to exalt and glorify believers themselves, there is the other and kindred desire to put honor upon his Son, the Saviour. And it would appear that in no way can his Son be more honored than by the transforming and glorifying and elevating to his own right hand those who through faith and love have be numbered amongst his redeemed people, that as the first-born of the heavenly brotherhood he may preside amonst them as their Head and their Redeemer. To do honor to the exalted Saviour, as well as for the sake of these, his children of mankind, who love him, he has predestinated them to be conformed in spiritual likeness and everlasting glory to the image of his divine Son.

The word predestinated carries us away back to the counsels of God in a past eternity, when his foreknowledge scanned the future and saw those who should love him. The word also shows us how his act of predestination was linked to his foreknowledge. "Whom he did foreknow he also did predestinate." We have here, then, my brethren, no doctrine of unconditional predestination of souls. A marvellous belief, indeed, is that for men to entertain of a predestination irrespective of all distinguishing conditions or qualities of character in those predestinated. Were it really and heartily accepted as a forced principle of faith how it would revolutionize all those ideas of God's impartial dealings derived from other portions of his word, and how it would revolutionize, as we see it does revolutionize, in what are called hard shell sects and communities, our radical conceptions of man's duty and obligations, the very Bible would have to be rewritten and reconstructed throughout its language and substance before we could see harmony in the revelation of the divine system. But mark this—that the divine predestination here set forth is linked to the divine foreknowledge and is made dependent upon it. The divine foreknowledge having apprehended the love and consequently the faith of those referred to, it follows that the divine predestination is conditioned on those qualities of soul, or those acts of soul, which were foreseen and contemplated with approbation by the divine mind in the far past eternity. Evidently, to Paul's mind this was a most blessedly comforting doctrine. His aim was to fill these tried fellow-christians to whom he wrote with a feeling of assurance, a sense of divine security. It was the very opposite of a paralyzing, fatalistic doctrine. God foresaw their faith and love, he predestinated them to glory, therefore no persecutions and afflictions endured by them in this inhospitable world in which they daily suffered could frustrate the sure purpose of God, or lessen or mar the eternal glory for which it designed them. Nay, it was proof positive of what he had already declared, that all things work together for good to [illegible] Paul says, "Moreover, when he predestinate them he also called," i. e., [illegible] in eternity he predestinated to [illegible] of his Son's glory he in time [illegible] glory. God does not conceal [illegible] his own bosom, but in time [illegible] is into effect by making it [illegible] those who love him [illegible] advance to the mark for the prize of their high calling. God makes known what glory awaits them, and invites them to it, and plies them with every motive, and upholds them with every sustaining moral influence in the pursuit of it. God foreknew them as loving himself; in consequence, we have his loving regard, his complacency in them, moving him to predestinate them to a glory conformable to that of his Son; and further, he in time calls them to that glory. How can men curse whom God has thus blessed? What can they do to them which shall defeat the purpose of God? Shall not the very inflictions of evil he turned to good, and through the gracious recompense of God, be made to increase the degree of their glory.

The next clause is, "And whom he called, them he also justified," or bearing in mind that the Apostle speaks in the indefinite tense anxious to state the fact without defining its reference to time, we may translate, "whom he calls, them he also justifies," or them will he also justify. The justification seems to be in the future, for it is set forth as immediately preceding glorification. There is a justification, or a justified state of the soul immediately in the exercise of faith in Christ. See the first verse of the fifth chapter of this epistle, "Being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ."

But the Scriptures often speak of an ulterior and final justification of the soul, besides that incipient state of justification which belongs to the first forgiveness of sins. Paul in the second chapter of this epistle says, "But not the hearers of the law (or the Scripture) are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified"—and mark the time, "in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel." It has been well said that "the day of judgment shall be a day of justifications and condemnations, and of nothing else." The justification of believers on that day will be final. All God's previous dealings with them, his forgiveness, his acquital often renewed, shall be crowned on that day by his final and open justification. Before the assembled universe the justifying sentence shall be passed, not because that is needed for God's own satisfaction, for he knoweth all things; but for the confidence and satisfaction it may be of others, whether men of earth or the principalities and powers in heavenly places. The Apostle has now proceeded far in his enumeration of the steps of the believer's salvation. Foreknown as lovers of God, predestinated to glory as such, called to it in view of their meetness attained and yet attainable, now they have reached the goal after much toil and suffering, much doubt, and darkness and weariness, and all the great fight of faith which their life had been; and behold! they are finally and publicly justified and approved by God in the last august court of the universe. Now it is made manifest that those who love God are none the losers by all the oppositions and trials and sacrifices of earth. The brighter crown and endless reward tell how truly all things, however adverse, have been working together for their good. The persecutions and trials of the first Christians were hot and fiery, their sufferings were real, and they needed the sustaining influence of Paul's inspired words.

And now we come to the last word which appropriately points to the last saving process in eternity. "Whom he justifies, them he also glorifies," or them will he also glorify. We have thus in these verses a view of the entire plan and process of salvation in those who love God, from his foreknowledge of them in the past eternity to his glorification of them in the eternity to come. Is there anything in all this to make you doubt the equality of God's ways—anything to make you shrink with dark suspicion of arbitrary and partial saving and damning of men, irrespective of conditions. How precious to the human soul to be saved from such thoughts, and to see God's character sun-clear in its own impartial justice, mercy, unfailing goodness. "God is light, and in him is no darkness at all." The whole drift of the Apostle has been to show how one thing links on to another, and how all combine to secure the unending glory of those who love God. God will not suffer them to come at a disadvantage by all they suffer. All the treasures of his power and wisdom and love are instead pledged in their behalf. As the aged saint said, whom a friend found one morning with the Bible on his knees and asked, "what was he about,"—"I am reading my father's will," said the aged Christian. "And what has he bequeathed you?" The reply was, "An hundredfold more in the present time, and in the world to come life everlasting."

On Penalty of Being Blotted Out.

When Mrs. Morton, wife of J. Sterling Morton, died, her husband, who was greatly devoted to her, erected a tombstone with this inscription: "Caroline French, wife of J. Sterling Morton, and mother of Joy, Paul and Mark Morton."

On being asked by a friend why he had his sons' names put upon the stone, he replied: "I took my boys to the cemetery, and, showing them their mother's grave, I said to them: "Boys, your mother is buried here. If one of you shall ever do anything dishonorable, or anything of which she would be ashamed if she were alive I will chisel your name from her tombstone." It is hardly necessary to add that the three names are still there.

Well, would it be if parents were as careful to impress the minds of their children with the fact, that their "names are written in heaven" as the redeemed of the Lord, and that they should be most concerned not to dishonor the Saviour who died for them or do anything to grieve his loving heart.

Distressing as it may be to have our names chiseled off the inscription that records our relation to the mother that bore us, how inexpressible the grief and sorrow of having our names "blotted from the Lamb's Book of Life!"—Peninsula Methodist.

Things don't turn up in this world until somebody turns them up. A pound of pluck is worth a ton of luck. Luck is an ignis fatuus. You may follow it to ruin, but never to success.—James A. Garfield.

From Arkansas.

Bro. Bailey:—I don't think that you have a reader of your paper that appreciates it as I do. A man that has been raised on the fogs and gloom of a country with but little sunshine appreciates the light more than he that has been born in the sunshine.

All denominations of Christians are almost asleep at the time I write, and improvement is at a stand-still.

Now, dear reader, go with me back sixty-five years to the State capital (Raleigh); get up on the highest point in the city. Look; show me the Baptist meeting-house. I see a little old barn of a thing in an old field southeast of the Capitol. That is the Baptist meeting-house.

Look over Wake county; I see a few country churches, with no glass in the windows, and no stove in the house—rather cold for winter!

Look south, and you see Wilmington. A large warehouse, with no stove or comfort for worshipers! There is no pastor, and but few members. Country churches were few and far between. At Fayetteville, up the river, there was no church; only a few lady Baptists, who were ashamed to be called Baptists.

While you are looking for churches, look for schools and academies also. Look north, and you will find with the few churches a few schools in the country. They, too, are few and far between. But amid all this paucity of churches and schools, I see a bevy of grand old brethren, whose hearts are filled with the love of God, and who are worshiping and praying that God would enable them to spread the truth throughout the length and breadth of the State and over the habitable part of the earth. They loved the truth, and had the faith to believe that God would answer their prayers.

In due time, God sent them Thomas Meredith, John Armstrong and Samuel Wait—all active laborers in the field, which was already white and ripe for the harvest. Light began to dawn, and soon it was found necessary to call their forces together for consultation, in order to unification of effort. A Convention is organized. They meet, consult and pray. Dr. Wm. Hooper, Professor of Languages in the University, proposed a school of high order. The proposition is accepted, and effort is made to put the school in operation.

Now, reader, let us go back to Raleigh after we have been away sixty five years. Behold the change! Look at Wake Forest; instead of Dr. Jones' old farm, you see a beautiful little city and splendid College buildings.

Look over the State, and see the numerous churches and the many schools dotting hill and valley. Look at our city churches, having their own pastors. View the young men and young women trained for all the useful walks of life. Other States, too, are sharing the benefits of our trained young men and women.

The dear old paper, the RECORDER, shows no sign of weakening. It was vigorous and able in youth, and it is stalwart and powerful in its maturer years.

I thank God that I have lived to see the year 1893, and to know what has been done by the instrumentalities which God has given us.

Christian greeting to the brethren of North Carolina. Your brother in Christ,

D. S. WILLIAMS.

Arkadelphia, Ark.

A Word With the Officers of Young People's Societies in North Carolina.

Sometime since I submitted a series of questions to a number of the more prominent pastors in the State in reference to the organization of our Baptist young people. I have heard from a number and conferred with a larger number on our recent trip to the Southern Baptist Convention. The almost unanimous sentiment is in favor of organization. During the late Convention, on motion of Dr. McDonald of Georgia, a committee was appointed to report upon the question of which our Bro. Durham was one, who reported as follows:

"That already many of the churches have inaugurated movements to secure the increased spirituality of our Baptist young people * * *. That wherever, in the judgment of the local church, a society especially for the training of its young people will be helpful, we recommend that such societies be constituted as are strictly Baptistic * * and are under the sole authority of the local church."

I make this statement and quotation before presenting my request in order that all may see that in my effort to secure a better organization among our young people in the State I am in line with my brethren who have much more wisdom and experience than I have. My apology for this communication is my intense interest in the spiritual training and upbuilding of our young people in all the churches, and I believe that such a desirable end can best be secured through organization. With this brief statement let me ask the officers of every organization among Baptist young people in the State, no matter what the name or plan under which you are working just so you are organized for the purpose of serving the Master, to bring these questions before the society at the next meeting and write me on a postal card their decision.

1. Do you favor calling a meeting of representatives from Baptist young people's societies and pastors of churches to consider the wisdom of organizing a Baptist young people's convention for the State?

2. If you so favor, what time and place, would you suggest that such a meeting be held?

By submitting these questions and sending me the answers we shall be able to learn what we want among our young people in North Carolina.

Yours in the Master's work,

M. P. MATHENY.

Lincolnton, N. C.

God's Patience Toward Us.

It is inexhaustible so long as he sees in us a possibility of reform. We sin in thoughtlessness, and he bears with us. We sin deliberately, and he withholds his wrath. We sin repeatedly, and, although the natural, inevitable consequences are not hindered from following, we experience no special token of divine indignation. We even may sin extravagantly, committing some excess of crime and placing ourselves among conspicuous sinners, yet his ears still will be open to our appeal of penitence. There is a point beyond which, if we pass it, we shall find his patience with us exhausted; but so long as there remains within a human heart the desire, even in the faintest degree, for a better life, God bears and forbears with it. Not even Omnipotence can compel it, but the all-wise and all-loving One seeks to allure and encourage it to turn from evil unto him.

This practically boundless patience is due to the fact that God is God. He who is our Creator remembers that we were not consulted as to whether we wished to be born, and that our natures are largely inherited and previously determined for us. He who is our Father loves and pities, and is eager to help us. He who orders even the fall of the leaf understands perfectly and makes all necessary allowance for the force of our temptations. He who knows by his own sorrowful human experience as the Redeemer of men how hard it is to live as we ought, is filled with a yearning sympathy for every one of us when we blunder or sin, which makes it easy for him to be patient with us when we should have little patience with one another. The divine patience toward us is one of the supreme, fundamental, and most precious and trustworthy facts which we ever learn.

But, and equally, because it is the patience of God, it may not be trifled with too far. There is a point at which the divine dignity and self-consistency and the good of mankind require forbearance to cease. He who willfully persists in wickedness, or even in that mere neglect of God which, because it is negative rather than positive, he does not believe culpable, must take the consequences at last. There is nothing more sublime in its long suffering tenderness than the patience of God with the incorrigible sinner; but it never degenerates into weakness. It must be one of the bitterest sources of remorse to know that one has despised, or even been indifferent to, such patience as that which God exercises toward human folly and guilt.—The Congregationalist.

"She Hath Done What She Could."

"Being in Bethany in the house of Simon the leper, as he sat at meat there came a woman having an alabaster box of ointment of spikenard, very precious; and she break the box and poured it on his head."

And there were some that had indignation within themselves and said, why was this waste of the ointment made? Jesus said, "She hath done what she could." Mark 13: 3, 4, 8.

The box of ointment was probably Mary's most precious possession.

How surprised she would have been if Peter or John had spoken of her gift as a sacrifice or commended her for her great self-denial. It was a joy to her to pour it on her Saviour's head.

How many of us ever gave him any thing that was precious to us? Our time for instance, our precious time! Would we count it all joy to devote one afternoon a week to his service, or, if need be, day after day and week after week. O that our whole lives might be so consecrated that did God ask it, we would gladly devote every moment to his service.

We see around us his needy little ones, those budding into young womanhood, and those who have gone over the hill of middle age, and are going down, down toward the valley of death, without knowing of God and his wondrous love for them, and yet what are we doing to help them?

It is flesh and blood the Lord wants, more than anything else. We hear so much about money for missions that some think this is all he wants. The silver and gold belong to him, but our hearts and wills must be freely given him.

He never forces any one into his service. Look at the white fields in our own country—our own State. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few!"

There are multitudes of young women living pleasant, quiet lives in the Christian homes of our land, who are not really needed at home. While in our cities, and even in our villages, young women are going down to ruin and death for the lack of the help, strength and sympathy which they need and which we might give.

Would Christ say of you and me as he said of Mary of old, "She hath done what she could?"

If we idly stand with folded hands while around us there are the sick to be nursed, the hungry to be fed, and those who are dying in the darkness of sin and misery with no one to help them, no one to point them to Jesus, are we going to be rewarded as Mary was—"She hath done what she could?" Nay, Christ will reward justly; and as we sow, so must we reap.

Look again and see the woman at the temple. Christ stood there as the people passed by and cast their offerings into the treasury. The widow had but two mites and cast it all in.

The Lord saw that her heart was in it, and so commended her. If some noble man had cast in a thousand dollars Christ would not have noticed it if his heart was not in it, yet he said of this woman, "She hath cast in more than they all;" "she hath done what she could."

There goes out from each one of our lives a silent, ceaseless and mighty influence. If this influence is not such that it will lead our friends to Christ, we have missed the secret of success in all our work. The power lies in the impression we have made when we are not trying to work. But when we are working for Christ our work must be chiefly personal work.

You think you cannot do much for Christ. If you are the means of saving one soul he may be instrumental in saving a hundred more. Would this not be worth striving and working for? It is a great thing to lead one soul from the darkness of sin into the glorious light of the gospel. I believe if an angel were to wing his way from earth up to heaven and say that there was one poor ragged girl without father or mother, with no one to care for her and teach her the way of life, and if God were to ask who among them was willing to come down to this earth and live here for fifty years and lead that one to Jesus, every angel in heaven would volunteer to go. There is no greater honor than to be the instrument in God's hands of leading one person out of the kingdom of Satan into the glorious light of heaven. It will be a greater, grander and nobler monument for us than the costliest monument of the finest marble.

Men seek to erect some monument that will live after they are dead and gone.

Mary never thought to erect a monument. She simply wanted to lavish her love on Christ. And we can show our love for him by working just where he has placed us.

Let me give you a motto. Some of you probably have heard it: "Do all the good you can, to all the people you can, in all the ways you can, as long as ever you can."

If each one of us will at once set about some work for God, and will keep at it 365 days in the year, then much will be accomplished.

Let us so live that it may be truthfully said of us, "She hath done what she could."—Mrs. J. H. Witherington, Dexter, Ga.

The St Louis Trade Review and Export Journal in its issue of February 7th, 1893, has this to say:

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.

One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B. Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

MR. L. W. ANDREWS, ONE OF HER STERLING CITIZENS, GIVES HIS EXPERIENCE.

GREENSBORO, N. C., May 24th, 1893.
MR. JOHN N. WEBB, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir and Bro:—Just one year ago I began to treat myself with the Electropoise.

I have not taken a single dose of medicine of any kind in that time. Up to that time for several years, I poured down every abomination that doctors, druggists and old women suggested, in the vain hope of recovering my lost health. I went down the hill all the time and was fast sinking into the grave.

On purchasing the Electropoise I quit all medicines—square off—and as carefully as I could, followed directions for Electropoise treatment.

Diabetes had depleted my system, and an impoverished state of the blood caused numerous carbuncles of the most serious and long-standing nature, I suffered in this condition for two years.

I fought the battle faithfully with the Electropoise and to day I am a healthful and vigorous man; probably as fully restored as it is possible for one of my years, (61),—and constitutionally ruined by drugs—to be. For over thirty years I suffered inexpressably with torpid liver and indigestion; that disappeared entirely as soon as I began the Electropoise treatment.

I was so stiff and rheumatic that life was largely despaired of, and so it goes.

I have not had on the 'poise now for two months, but "it is loaded" and ready for business.

A number of notable case of improved health, could be given among my personal friends and acquaintances.

I have just sent my Electropoise to a young man of twenty-one, who has been a bed-ridden sufferer with rheumatism for three or four years. I hope to have a good report from him.

Will you please send me a copy of the new book of directions, and oblige

Yours truly, L. W. ANDREWS.

TO MR JOHN N. WEBB

Replying to our inquiry "may we use your letter of the 24th," Mr. Andrews writes:

GREENSBORO, N. C., May 29th, 1893.
BRO. JOHN N. WEBB.

My Dear Sir:—The book of directions received, thanks. You are at liberty to use any commendatory remarks I may have made concerning the Electropoise.

Yours truly, L. W. ANDREWS.

Chowan Baptist Female Institute.

Yesterday was the fourth and last day of commencement and long before the appointed hour arrived the chapel was filled to overflowing with the friends and patrons of the institute. The exercises began at 10 o'clock a. m. The music, both vocal and instrumental was of a superior character; and the young ladies who read essays gave evidence of having undergone thorough and rigid mental discipline. The young ladies did exceedingly well and there could be no doubt but that they had been under the guidance of skilled hands. The President rendered a most encouraging report to the Board of Trustees and stated that the past session had been the most pleasant to him of any during twenty five years' experience in the school room.

The following young ladies received their diplomas: Misses Anne Bruce Brewer, Pattie Virginia Brinkley, Bettie Frank Brown, Jennie Josie Doughtrey, Ella Lee Gilbert, Virginia Green Joyner, Mary Lizzie Mitchell, Ha Annette Newsome, Kate Gertrude Newsome, Evelyn Lee Oliver, Sallie Sherrod Salsbury, Rosa Olivia Speight, Mary Jackson Wood, Sophie Norfleet Wood.

This is the largest class under the present management, but not in the history of the school.

After a brief interval President Brewer introduced Rev. C. S. Blackwell of Elizabeth City, N. C., who had been chosen to deliver the annual address before the P. N. A. and C. O. V. A. Literary Societies. He very sensibly began by addressing the audience as women and men. He announced as his subject "The Present Woman and the Coming man." Mr. Blackwell is a man of considerable oratorical power and amused the audience one hour. Thus ended the exercises for the morning.

At 8 o'clock p. m., it had been announced that the celebration of the Literary Societies and concert would take place, but while the crowd was gathering in the chapel the fire-bells rang out and it was soon learned that Wesleyan Female College was in flames. This, of course, caused great confusion and excitement and nearly everybody left for the scene of the fire. At 10 o'clock, however, the excitement had abated to a great extent and a large audience had again assembled in the chapel. Mr. Brewer, had he consulted his personal feelings in the matter, would have abandoned further exercises—he himself deeply mourning the loss and sympathizing with the friends of Wesleyan Female College. At the urgent request of President Troy, however, commencement exercises were resumed.

To say that the programme was interesting and entertaining would be but faint praise. All of the young ladies acquitted themselves admirably, and I cannot refrain from making special mention of the recitation by Miss Bass and the vocal solo, "Doris," by Miss Norfleet. Miss Bass showed unmistakable signs of power, and Miss Norfleet's sweet, clear voice captivated all who heard her. Owing to the lateness of the hour a few pieces were omitted.

[illegible] closed the most prosperous session [illegible] and efficient management of [illegible] Brewer. At his hands the school [illegible] to improve and the future [illegible] was never so bright. President Brewer's policy to [illegible] the foremost teachers of [illegible] results have proved the [illegible] Many recent improvements have been added and the school is now thoroughly equipped in every department. Under the wise leadership of its president, assisted by a full corps of able and accomplished teachers, the school cannot but be the equal of any female school in the South. Murfreesboro is noted for its good schools, for the culture and refinement of its people, and for the healthfulness and beauty of its location. This whole section of Eastern North Carolina and Virginia has been blessed by the beneficent influences embodied in the shape of lovely women which have emanated from this centre. It is to be hoped that the college, which now lies in ashes, will soon be rebuilt, for the prosperity of the one has been the prosperity of the other. Fathers who have daughters and wish them to have the best physical, mental and moral advantages, and at the same time the best home surroundings cannot do better than to send them to Murfreesboro.—W. W. E., in News and Observer.

Friends, Help Us.

Dear Recorder:—We are now making an effort to raise money to build us a new church, which is sadly needed. We have appointed a committee to canvass the town to see how much we can raise here at home, and also a building committee to secure a let and select plan for building.

We will need a good deal of help from our friends, and we now ask them to our aid. T. J. Latham, cashier of the "Bank of Washington," is treasurer of our building committee, and any money sent either to him or me for this purpose, will be thankfully received and properly applied. "Come over to Macedonia and help us."

Yours fraternally,
DUNCAN MCLEOD.

Married Life. A Blessing to the Truly Married. Arranged by Mrs. Dora E. W. Spratt. 16mo, 64 pp. Price, 75 cents. Philadelphia: Benjamin Griffith, 1420 Chestnut Street.

This little book consists of a collection of passages, poetical and prose, from a wide range of authors, bearing upon the blessings of married life. The book is divided into six portions, with an ornamental sub title page prefacing each and suited to the pages following. It is meant for a wedding souvenir.

The Baptist Teacher. This excellent and useful Magazine for Sunday-school workers, for July is upon our table, and with it we turn from the more or less difficult lessons of the past three months, and resume the connected study of the Acts, which will occupy the remainder of the year. Rev. P. L. Jones graphically indicates in the leading contributed article the strong doctrinal points in which Baptists are especially interested. The many-sided character of the Apostle Paul receives due attention in this number, in excellent articles, the first by Rev. A. C. Steeves upon Saul of Tarsus, and the second by Dr. Crandall upon Paul the Apostle. Prof. Harris eloquently describes Mars Hill and its environs. The Model Teacher is portrayed acrostically by Rev. L. E. Peters. Published by the American Baptist Publication Society at fifty cents per annum in clubs of five or more copies.

Secret Organizations.

Dear Recorder:—Since my article appeared is your issue of May 31st, it has been indicated to me by several parties and by slips containing Odd Fellow works, that I had struck at Masonry and Odd Fellows. I can truthfully say that I did not think of either of those charitable orders when writing the article.

In fact, I would think in protecting the church against being overthrown, all other good institutions would be thereby protected. We have no fear of such orders as the Odd Fellows and Masons. Yet, we do have fear of other secret organizations existing throughout this country, some of which are visible and some are not. This country is a republic founded on the true religion of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. Our rights and privileges are many and extensive under the form of our government, which is founded on the Scriptures and the true church. The church must protect itself in society. Every other good institution is protected as well as our government perpetuated.

On the church rests the greatest responsibility; therefore, brethren, let us be mindful, up and doing. G. B. ALFORD.

Ford's theatre building of Washington City was the scene of a terrible disaster on the morning of the 9th. Workmen had dug beneath the foundations of the historic structure in excavating for an electric light plant, and thoughtlessly went so far that the walls gave way and the entire building, in which were 475 persons, collapsed. About twenty-four were killed outright, and some fifty injured.

DIED.

VOGLER—At Waughtown, N. C., June 2, 1893, little Eva, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L Vogler, aged fifteen months and eleven days. She was sick nine days. She was unusually bright. Toward the last, she suffered intensely. A few days before she died, she held up her little hands and said, "By, by." Asleep in heaven.

HORTON—John M. Horton died at the home of his mother, Mrs. L. A. Frazier, Laurinburg, N. C., Tuesday, May 30th, 1893. After weary months of patient struggle against that fell disease, consumption, he sank to rest peacefully trusting in his Saviour. He was called to go before he had reached the prime of young manhood, in the twenty-first year of his age. May he who met the widow at the gates of Nain, and who wept with Martha and Mary by the grave of a dead brother, comfort those who remain.

SPENCER—Mrs. C. H. Spencer, nee Lucy Cobb, the beloved wife of C. H. Spencer, and daughter of the late J. L. Cobb of Pitt county, departed this life in Elizabeth City on May 31st, 1893, in the thirty-seventh year of her age. She leaves a husband and three children, one an infant, and two brothers, and many near and dear ones here and throughout the State. Mrs. Spencer was one of the most intellectual and accomplished women in North Carolina. She had those who admired her for culture and loved her for graces of heart in many circles far beyond her home and town. She had been an intense sufferer for many months, and bore it all with a patience and beauty of soul that won and impressed every heart about her. Though she had been in Elizabeth but a few months her death was keenly felt even by strangers—for all realized that the community was made poor by the departure of a rare and sainted soul. In the absence of the writer, Dr. R. R. Overby, her old pastor, whom she dearly loved, officiated at the funeral.
C. S. BLACKWELL.

PRITCHARD—Mrs. G. D. B. Pritchard, nee Saripta A. Gregory, wife of G. D. B. Pritchard of Elizabeth City, and daughter of the late Mark R. Gregory of Camden county, departed this life April 16th, 1893, in the forty-fifth year of her age. Her husband had been critically ill for many weeks, her wifely love and anxiety so wrought on her frail constitution that she completely broke down, and in a few days fell asleep in Jesus, leaving five children and her husband, together with a very large circle of relatives and friends to mourn in deepest sorrow their inestimable loss. She was a cultivated Christian lady, and the impress of her pure heart and gentle manners are left distinctly visible in the words and manners of her motherless daughters and son. Though gone home, her life is still with us in them. Her church and her friends are proud of the family she has left behind. Her children are a living monument, such as the best of earth might be satisfied to have lived and died for. Her body was laid by the side of the grave of her honored father, her sad and doubly afflicted husband being unable to follow her to her last resting place because of his continued illness. Dr. R. R. Overby and the writer officiated at the grave.
C. S. BLACKWELL.

Tributes of Respect.

Bro. Calvin Wilder was born January 29th, 1818, made a profession of religion in October, 1867, and joined Mt. Olivet Baptist church, and died April 26th, 1893, aged seventy-five years, two months and twenty-eight days. Bro. Wilder was a consistent member of the Baptist church, also one of its deacons. He was true to his church, and ever ready to do all the good he could for the cause of Christ. He loved his church, but to-day his seat is vacant, but he is in the hands of God we trust to fill a seat in heaven. We humbly submit to the will of our Creator because the Lord doeth all things well.

We want these few lines published in the RECORDER, and a copy sent to his bereaved family. He leaves an aged wife, two sons and a daughter to mourn his loss, but we feel that their loss is his eternal gain.
S. P. LOWRY,
JOHN MAY,
Committee

In memory of Britton T. Parker, who died at his home near Rehoboth, Northampton county, N. C., May, 1893, of pneumonia, after an illness of about twelve days. Bro. Parker was in his fifty-fifth year and leaves a widow and nine children to mourn their irretrievable and irreparable loss. He professed faith in Christ at the age of twelve years and connected himself with the Corinth Baptist church of this county, where he remained a shining light until the erection of Roanoke Baptist church some years ago, of which he became a member by letter and was a beacon light to the entire church and community. Brother Parker's life was one of true Christian piety. I first knew him in 1869, since which time I have been intimately associated with him as a church-member and a neighbor, and have never in that time heard him utter one word not becoming a chaste and refined gentleman, and a true and devout Christian. He spoke ill of no one, always ready to forgive and throw the mantle of charity over the faults of others which he did possess himself. Ever ready with a Christian heart to extend the hand of relief to those in need, let it be of the necessaries of this life or as advice for the future welfare of others of which he seemed always solicitous; meek and unobtrusive in all things, yet firm and immovable in his Christian faith and duties, ever ready with a word of loving admonition to an erring brother or sister, therefore but rarely failed to lead back those who had wandered from the fold. A model husband, a devoted father and a true Christian has gone to add another star to the crown of Jesus. His widow has been bereft of the shielding hand of a loving companion, his children of a father whose Christian teaching has started them in the path he so nobly trod, and the community of a citizen whose place cannot be filled, and may his mantle fall upon his entire family and be a safeguard to shield them from vice. But grieve not, our deceased brother has crossed the dark and turbid waters, and is now on the bright and shining shores of a blissful eternity basking in the love of God. And may the bereaved widow and orphans, left to the cold charities of this world, be shielded by the Allwise Hand that has guided him through life, across the dark waters of the river of death, and has placed him in the emerald halls of the New Jerusalem and environed him with the crown of the redeemed and robed him in the garments of the blessed. Knowing him in life, we have the full assurance that he now stands amid the joys of Paradise, and is waiting to meet the loved ones he has left behind. Therefore, live as he lived, heed the counsel he gave in life, and when you are called to cross the river, with open arms he will meet you and welcome you to the joys of his blissful home.

Resolved, That in the death of Brother Britton T. Parker, Roanoke church has lost one of her brightest lights; and while we shall miss him and wish for his loving and cheering words, we bow in humble submission to the will of God, knowing his decrees are wise.

Resolved, That we extend the hand of sympathy and brotherly love to the family of the deceased, and at all times be ready to assist them through life's journey, praying that his entire household may be one unbroken band in that great and blissful eternity.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our church minutes, a copy be sent to the family of the deceased, and a copy be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication. R. S. BARHAM, Committee.

Better Than Gold.

I lay in sorrow, deep distress:
My grief a proud man heard;
His looks were cold, he gave me gold,
But not a kindly word.
My sorrow passed,—I paid him back
The gold he gave to me;
Then stood erect and spoke my thanks,
And blessed his charity.

I lay in want, in grief and pain,
A poor man passed my way;
He bound my head, he gave me bread,
He watched me night and day.
How shall I pay him back again
For all he did for me?
Oh, gold is great, but greater far
Is heavenly sympathy!

—Charles Mackay.

Long Life.

Count not thy life by calendars; for years
Shall pass thee by unheeded, whilst an hour—
Some little fleeting hour, too quickly past—
May stamp itself so deeply on thy brain,
Thy latest years shall live upon its joy.
His life is longest, not whose boneless gums,
Sunk eyes, wan cheeks, and snow-white hairs bespeak
Life's limits; no! but he whose memory
Is thickest set with those delicious scenes
'Tis sweet to ponder o'er when even falls.

—Kennedy.

FOR THE RECORDER.

Too Late.

BY EDGAR PENNEY.

"Honor thy father and thy mother."

Years had rolled by since she had heard one word from absent Tom, and now "Old Jane," as she was called, sat in her humble cottage near an open window through which the soft summer air, perfumed by her little flower garden, gently fanned her wrinkled old face. The daughter of an humble farmer's widow, she had married early in life. Her mother long since had died. She and her husband had striven hard to educate their only child, whose ambition, ten years ago, had led him to cast his lot in the business world. At first he wrote often and in glowing terms of how he was succeeding and how some day he hoped to be rich, so that his parents who had sacrificed so much for him should be freed from labor, and help him to enjoy the fruits of his success, which they so richly deserved. Once he visited them, he was then only nineteen and held a clerkship in one of the large mercantile houses of New York. He had changed greatly—his mother declared him the noblest boy in the world and his father was so proud of him. His nice fitting suit and derby hat made him look almost a gentleman, and no wonder his mother melted to tears when she bade him good-bye, but he was so cheerful, so full of hope, that she could not grieve long over his leaving. His father said "don't grieve over his leaving us mother: he is honest and will succeed well in life and be an honor to both of us." So he went away, only a few letters were ever received from him after. The last letter was short and only stated that he expected to be promoted soon to manager. They wrote again and again, but never one word did they receive after. The father worn out with waiting at last decided to sell his horse and undertake a trip to New York, hundreds of miles away, in search of some clue to his son, whom he thought dead, but an attack of fever prevented and on his dying bed he told his wife that he had no doubt but that Tom was dead and it would be useless for her to attempt to trace his grave as it was doubtful that his employers knew anything of his people and that there probably were a dozen Tom Browns buried in the same cemetery. The father was laid away. How the mother bore up under her trouble through the years that followed she never knew, and now on this beautiful evening when all the world seemed happy but her, she had with a heavy heart given up the hope, which she had so long cherished, that Tom was not dead but would some day return to her, and now she sat silently praying that God would soon call her from this world of trouble. She did not hear the carriage that was being slowly driven to her gate. She did not hear the manly step on the walk, nor the call at the door. A fashionably dressed young man with his splendid diamond jewelry flashing from his spotless linen, strode into the room and fell at her feet, exclaiming, "Mother! mother! oh, forgive me, mother." This was more than she dared have hoped for, Tom back again. She could only say "My Tom! my son!" Then followed his brief recital of how he had succeeded until he was half owner of the large dry goods house in which he started as junior clerk. He was ashamed of his poor uneducated parents then. "Yes, ashamed of you, mother," he said. "I married a proud lady of wealth. I never loved her. She is now dead. If you can forgive me, mother, I will repay you all. You shall never henceforth know anything but ease and luxury. Can you forgive me, mother?" She was silent and when he raised her head tenderly from his bosom to kiss the faded lips, she was dead.

Easy to take—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. Smallest, easiest, cheapest, best. They're tiny, sugar-coated, anti-bilious granules, a compound of refined and concentrated vegetable extracts. Without disturbance or trouble. Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attack, Sick and Bilious Headaches, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels, are prevented, relieved and cured. Permanently cured, too. By their mild and natural action, these little Pellets lead the system into natural ways again. Their influence lasts.

Whether catarrhal in its nature, catarrh is one of the troubles that come from impure blood, and is perfectly and permanently cured by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. No matter what the symptoms or of how long standing,

Land of the Living Cliff-Dwellers.

A deep ravine cutting in at right angles to the Bacochic [in Chihuahua, Mexico] closed our way to the north as we ascended the winding trail, and when we had worked our way up the steep bank some 200 or 300 feet, a favorable exit from the low, scrubby pines gave me an opportunity to look straight across this picturesque ravine, and I was surprised to see, on the other bank, which seemed even more precipitous than the one on which we stood, a deep cave walled up in front nearly to the top, and evidently indicating cave or cliff-dwellers. My first thought was that the curious habitation in front of me belonged to the era of similar buildings in Arizona and New Mexico, which the best authority consigns to a very old period. With me, however, was a Mexican gentleman who said that the cave was inhabited, but as the occupants were extremely timid, probably we would not be able to see them without forcing an entrance into their strange home. He believed that most of them were inside peeping at us over the rude walls and around the very dilapidated animal's hide that served to close the door. The cave was not over two hundred yards away, and, with the aid of our field-glasses, we could plainly make out its details.

My impressions led me to the theory that these were vagabond individuals of the local Indian tribes who were occupying this old cave dwelling in the cliffs, much as we see the corresponding class with us occasionally occupying dugouts, shanties built into the side hills, and even caves around the suburbs of towns. But one of the Mexicans who argued against forcible intrusion into the homes of these people, said that we would find a great number of them further on the deep recesses of the Sierra Madre range, and that among so many we would have good opportunities of seeing them to better advantage than we possibly could here. My Mexican friend was born and reared in this part of Chihuahua; his father and uncle owned one of the largest and richest mining-districts in that portion of the Sierra Madre toward which our course was directed, and to reach which he attached himself to our party for a couple of days, when our paths separated. His business called for almost constant traveling in these parts. He placed the number of living cliff and cave dwellers in this part of Mexico at from 9,000 to 12,000 persons. We afterward saw from 300 to 500 of them, which, considering their great timidity, and the small part of their land traversed by us, would give an air of reasonableness to the estimate of Don Augustin Becerra, for such was my friend's name.

Even as we stood on the edge of the cliff opposite this singular home, we saw an Indian in the canon far below. He appeared to be wearing only a breech clout of animal skins; he carried a long bow and arrows. He looked almost as dark as a Guinea negro as he skirted the shadows of the canon, and his hair was long. A rattling of the falling chips of shale drew his attention to us, when he at once skulked behind a big boulder at the base of the cliff, and we saw him no more.—Frederick Schwatka, in the Century.

Be Courteous, Boys.

"I treat him as well as he treats me," said Hal.

His mother had just reproached him because he did not attempt to amuse or entertain a boy friend who had gone home.

"I often go in there and he doesn't notice me," said Hal, again.

"Do you enjoy that?"

"O, I don't mind; I don't stay long."

"I should call myself a very selfish person if friends come to see me and I should pay no attention to them."

"Well, that's different; you're grown up."

"Then you really think that politeness and courtesy are not needed among boys?"

"Hal, thus pressed, said that he didn't exactly mean that; but his father, who had listened, now spoke: "A boy or a man who measures his treatment of others by their treatment of him has no character of his own. He will never be kind or generous, or Christian. If he is ever to be a gentleman, he will be so in spite of the boorishness of others. If he is to be noble, no other boy's meanness will change his nature." And very earnestly the father added: "Remember this, my boy, you lower your own self every time you are guilty of an unworthy action because someone else is. Be true to your best self, and no boy can drag you down."—Well Spring.

Controlled by the Denomination.

The American Baptist Publication Society is a denominational institution, wholly under the control and management of the Baptists of this country. It was organized and is maintained solely for the promotion of our principles as Baptists. Every one may therefore be a co-worker with this great and good organization by giving it sympathy, influence, and patronage.

How to Dust.

There is an art in dusting which does not receive the attention it demands. According to the various analyses of different observers, the components of ordinary dust exhibit special characters in almost endless variety. Mineral matters, animal and vegetable debris, morbid germs, and whatever is small and light enough to remain for any time suspended in the air, falls into the category; and among these things are many substances that in the air do mischief. The spread of cholera and exanthematous diseases has, doubtless with truth, been attributed to its influence. Methods of dusting, therefore, which merely remove the dust to another place or fill the air with it, are not sufficient, and are not harmless. It should be wiped rather than brushed away, and carried off or destroyed. Then let the sunlight in to kill what infection may remain.—Popular Science Monthly.

School Gardens.

Throughout France gardening is practically taught in the primary and elementary schools. There are about 28,000 of these schools, each of which has a garden attached to it, and it is under the care of a master capable of imparting a knowledge of the first principles of horticulture. Even in schools where no garden is attached the theory of cultivation is taught. In Switzerland the peasants acquire the love for horticulture while at school—a plot of ground planted with trees, etc., being generally at the disposal of the school master and his pupils, where he gives them lessons and explains to them the relative merits of different operations and varieties of plants, and thus implants in the young minds lessons that bear good fruit in after years.—Ex.

A WOMAN'S BURDENS

are lightened when she turns to the right medicine. If her existence is made gloomy by the chronic weaknesses, delicate derangements, and painful disorders that afflict her sex, she will find relief and emancipation from her troubles in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. If she's overworked, nervous, or "run-down," she has new life and strength after using this remarkable remedy. It's a powerful, invigorating tonic and nervine which was discovered and used by an eminent physician for many years, in all cases of "female complaints" and weaknesses. For young girls just entering womanhood; for women at the critical "change of life;" in bearing-down sensations, periodical pains, ulceration, inflammation, and every kindred ailment, if it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

EPILEPSY OR FITS

Can this disease be cured? Most physicians say No—I say, Yes; all forms and the worst cases. After 20 years study and experiment I have found the remedy.—Epilepsy is cured by it; cured, not subdued by opiates—the old, treacherous, quack treatment. Do not despair. Forget past impositions on your purse, past outrages on your confidence, past failures. Look forward, not backward. My remedy is of to-day. Valuable work on the subject, and large bottle of the remedy—sent free for trial. Mention Post-Office and Express address.

The Successful Minister's Fixed Resolve.

BY REV. JNO. S. HARDAWAY.

Sermon preached at Mt. Zion Church at the ordination of Joseph Blalock, June 4, 1893, and requested for publication in the RECORDER by Mt. Zion Church, Flat River Association

Text—"For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified."—1 Cor. 2: 2.

It is always an occasion of surpassing interest when a church is gathered together formally to set apart a man to the work of the gospel ministry. We can well imagine that not only the church on earth is intensely interested in it, but also the church triumphant in heaven. The soldier is girding on the sword, and putting on the armor for a life-long battle, as a captain of the Lord's hosts. The servant of the Lord is about to accept, and publicly acknowledge his acceptance of, the highest trust ever committed into human hands. The church in thus publicly setting him apart unto this work expresses her confidence in the man's character and her sanction of his call. If the church cannot stamp her approval upon the man, upon his life, upon his qualifications for work, no attention should be paid to any clamour, however loud and urgent, for ordination.

The work of the gospel ministry is the most exalted and important of all callings. There be some in our day who would underestimate it, and who would claim that there are other callings of equal dignity;—but there is no work that can be placed on an equal footing with the preaching of the gospel of salvation. It will be proper, then, to enter upon the inquiry, How can success in the ministry be attained? This is a question of supreme importance to every man taking upon himself this work. A failure in other callings in life might be borne without any deep sense of mortification, but failure in the ministry is unpardonable; it is equivalent to saying that God made a mistake when he called the man to the work; that God had acted without judgment and knowledge.

To attain unto success in the ministry a man must go forth having his heart filled with an unshaken and unshakable resolve—namely this—a determination to know nothing among men "save Jesus Christ, and him crucified."

My text is found in 1 Cor. 2: 2, "For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified."

My subject is, "The successful minister's fixed resolve."

He who would be really and truly successful in this work must determine "to know nothing among men, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." He will need to fix his face like a flint against some of the most subtle temptations, and against some of the most powerful adversaries that ever assailed a human soul. Let us consider

I SOME OF THE MINISTER'S TEMPTATIONS.

By minister's temptations, I refer especially to those temptations that assault him in his ministry. There are many who conceive of ministers the false notion that they are not like other men the subjects of temptation. This is contradicted by the fact that Jesus was "in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." If he was tempted, we cannot hope to be free from temptation.

The minister is often sorely tempted. I now ask you to consider the temptations that come to him through his ministry.

(1). There will come, there does come, to the minister the temptation to preach philosophy. By philosophy, I mean the course of sciences taught in the schools Science is the goddess of our day. She has many devotees, and as the science of our day is largely materialistic, the result is that there is much materialism mixed with the religious views of the day. In many points the sciences as taught clash with the teachings of God's word, and the full fledged scientist says, 'So much the worse for the word of God." Now take a young preacher and run him through the mill of science, and he comes out with enough science in his head to make him a foe; then he sets himself to work to reconcile the science "falsely so-called" with the teachings of God's word. He can show anything he wishes to; for when he comes to God's word everything that clashes with science is figurative and allegorical, not at all real and liberal. This temptation comes to the minister because to preach the word of God just as it is is to relegate himself to the background of fogyism. So he is tempted to be a preacher of philosophy. I am no foe to true science; it cannot by any means be hostile to God's word; I would not deny any plain fact of science; I am perfectly willing to admit that there is a great similarity in physical structure between "man that goeth upward and the beast that goeth downward;" I am perfectly willing to consent to any fact of science, but what I never will assent nor consent to is, the theories spun around these facts, when they give the lie to God's truth as plainly declared in the word. "I had rather be a dog and bay the moon" than to set myself to work to make God's inerrant truth truckle to the low-bred teachings of a man who taught man was just "a higher ape." Let the fools teach their folly, but preach thou the word of God.

(2). Another temptation to the minister is to air his merely human learning. Poor man! he thinks, "If I can only get the people to think that I am a great man, I will be able to influence them for good." Therefore he hurls great masses of human learning at the people. He expatiates over the wide and varied fields of history; he discusses questions of etymology and psychology; he walks about among the stars sounding all the depths of astronomy; at last he comes down to earth again, and a sigh of relief goes up from the people that his learned peregrination has ended. Poor sheep! they go home thinking that they have a great shepherd, but they would enjoy his preaching a little more if he would sometimes feed them. The great preachers of the world have been the simple, plain preachers.

Spurgeon preached simple Bible truths; Moody does the same in a simple, earnest way; Martin Luther said that he preached so that "the women and the children could understand him;" and so ought every preacher of the word to endeavor to do. Fie, fie, upon the preacher who would make the pulpit a place to air his dry bones of human learning in. We ought to learn that the thing for the preacher to do is to get out of sight as much as possible by riveting every eye upon Christ. As a taper would be forgotten in the blazing light of the sun, so ought we to disappear in the presence of our Lord. He is the best preacher who will make men see and feel the presence of the invisible Christ.

(3). Another temptation of the ministry is to seek to catch what is called the intellectual element. The preacher is a fisher of men, and his aim should be to catch all men, as far as possible. A ministry addressed especially to the intellectual class would have two serious defects. It would be one-sided and narrow—and it would fail even of its own purpose. It would miss all classes. Such a ministry would have its root in intellectual pride, and its result would be spiritual desolation both to the people and to the preacher. How many sermons have been saved, as one hath well said, at the expense of saving souls!

4. Another temptation to the minister is to tone down his preaching to suit the worldly. You will get at my meaning better by the relation of the following incident: In a city of America, a minister of the gospel not long since undertook to preach against the sins of society. A member of his church went to him and told him he had to quit preaching on that subject. Not long afterwards that man who was too good to hear about the sins of society, by his own iniquitous speculation in "bucket shops," broke four banks. I am afraid that many preachers are too tender and gingerly in handling sins and vices. They say little about these things, because they are afraid the people who commit these sins will become offended, and begin to war against them. This generation needs men like John the Baptist who will even stir up if need be the nest of vipers; or who will rebuke Herodias, the adulterer, at the expense of his own head. We do not want a toned down, thin, watery ministry of the word, but the unadulterated word of God preached without fear or favor.

(5). Another temptation to the minister is to dwell but little on those Scripture teachings which a carnal mind would object to. There is much of this feeling among us. If I am preaching to those who believe in falling from grace, I must be very careful not to bring out final perseverance too strongly; or if I am preaching among antimissionary people, I must say but little about missions, and that must have an apology; or if I am preaching to Pedobaptists and come across a Scripture that teaches believer baptism, I must be careful, O so careful, not to wound their feelings by intimating what the word says on that point—and so on, and on, "ad nauseam."

He who has not felt, or cannot feel this temptation, is not "a man of like passions as we are." But see here! Isn't it a mark of a carnal mind to be unwilling to hear all that God hast said? When a man preaches in God's name, ought he not to preach regardless of what men will think of or do with his preaching? Woe, woe, woe, to the trimmers of God's word!

Of course, all preaching should be in kindness, but surely it should be also in all faithfulness.

(6). Another temptation to the minister is to preach morality instead of Christ Jesus. It is so easy to denounce bad living; to heap anathemas upon drunkenness, licentiousness, profanity, dishonesty, lying, card playing and dancing. It is equally easy to make the mistake of supposing that we can destroy sin and purify evil, sin-loving hearts, by denouncing sin. We might as well go into a garden where weeds were rank and cry aloud, "O weeds, worthless and noxious, ye choke and root out vegetables that are of service. O garden, why bring forth these unprofitable weeds, when you might yield vegetables in plenty?" I say we might as well do this, and then hope that the garden will cease to produce weeds at our bidding as to hope to make men good by a mere denunciation of sin. The evil garden of the heart will still produce an evil crop, and no amount of denunciation of sin can prevent it.

You need to preach the gospel—the grace of God to men through Christ; and when they receive the grace of God, a pure gospel-morality will grow as an inevitable result. I know that the preacher must often treat moral questions. The gospel has an intimate connection with morality—but the preaching of morality apart from the gospel will either utterly fail of doing away with sin, or will produce a dead, formal pharisaism, which is even more hostile to the pure gospel than utter immorality. Preach Christ. Be a preacher of the grace of God, and of the power of that grace to cleanse the hearts and lives of men.

(7). Another temptation will be to run off on side issues. How many a preacher has ruined his influence by being switched off into politics by some question of the day. That minister makes a fatal blunder who supposes that anything can take the place of the gospel of Christ. There is no other panacea for the ills of mankind. O, I know that one hundred thousand drunkards are reported as going down into a drunkard's hell every year from the United States alone. Yes, I know that the nation's drink bill is said to be $900,000,000; and that in consequence of this wastage thousands upon thousands of wives and children cry for bread;—but friend, the only barrier we can oppose to this raging flood of intemperance is the preaching of Jesus Christ. I believe that the preacher should place himself on the right side of the all the great issues of the day, when he becomes a reformer and ceases to be a preacher he has made an inexpressible mistake.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

As in the fable the wolf preached against sheepstealing, so very many hunt down those sins in others which they shelter in themselves.

Christ in Metaphor—No. 3.

BY REV. HIGHT C. MOORE.

THE CAPTAIN.

"I have given him for a leader and commander to the people." Isa. 55: 4.
"The captain of their salvation." Heb. 4: 10.

War, merciless in the destruction of men and means, is yet an inspiring theme. The fallen hero is always sent by admiring friends to the soldier's paradise. The survivor is never without hearers who list with bated breath as the butchery and bloodshed of battle are depicted. The best known pages of history are those reddened with the blood of millions. The tales of ancient courage and mediæval chivalry and modern fortitude, exhibited on a thousand ensanguined fields, are thrilling as tales of romance and stranger than fiction. The poet writes in star-dust the glories of embattled hosts. The orator is never more passionate and powerful than when he paints the deeds of heroes or discusses the prospects of war. In the whole range of human knowledge and experience, there are few themes that have so inspired universal attention and gleamed on history's page, or wrought in poet's brain, or flashed from orator's tongue.

A deeper interest than mortal combat is the great conflict between truth and error. The forces of right and wrong are ever arrayed in line of battle against each other. There is ceaseless antagonism between good and evil. In this war, arbitration is unknown; the two sides are as distinct as Italian noon day and Egyptian darkness. Reconciliation can never be effected. The most important interest are at stake. No one is exempt from service. There is no neutrality. "He that is not with me is against me."

The great leaders in this warfare are Satan and Immanuel, the prince of darkness and the prince of peace. Those who contend for truth look to Christ as "the captain of their salvation." Here, then, we have a beautiful and suggestive metaphor. The meek and lowly Jesus is presented as a dauntless warrior going forth conquering and to conquer. Brave-hearted and battle-scarred, he leads forth his army into battle. With an eye of vigilance, and a mind of wisdom, and an arm of power, and a heart of courage, he faces the foe and plants his glorious standard on every shore.

I HIS ARMY.

1. They are volunteers. The captain forces no one into his service. Jesus says, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock." The occupant must open willingly, or Christ will never enter. He says "Follow me," but he drags no one at his chariot wheels. He says, "Take my yoke upon you," but no unwilling neck is compelled to bear it. He resorts to persuasion and not to sheer force. No conscripts are found in his lines. He wants and will have only volunteers to fight his battles and further his cause.

2. They are fearless. A brave army is the delight of a courageous captain, but cowardly soldiers disgrace the ranks and embolden the foe. In a world of countless dangers, Immanuel's army must have true fortitude or it is doomed to defeat. We are to face and overcome the fierce onslaughts and insidious wiles of the evil one. Courage is required. No concessions must be made. Ever onward we must press with brave hearts from battle to battle. And the Captain will reward this. Witness him with the brave Hebrew children in the fiery furnace, with Daniel in the den of lions, with Peter in prison, with Paul and Silas in the Philippian jail, and a hundred other instances where he has not forsaken his bold and struggling soldiers.

3. They are obedient. No one in the army is authorized to issue commands. These come direct from headquarters. It is the part of the captain to command; it is the duty of the army to obey. A united and obedient soldiery is sure to win. If they are told to scout the plains of Asia or penetrate the wilds of Africa, it is theirs to obey. If they are bidden to proclaim the words of life in heathen countries or assail the strongholds of irreligion in Christian lands, the divine orders must be carried out. From the equator to the poles the army must "fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man."

4. They are armed. The armor has no small part to play in the success of the army. Were this defective, military skill would avail but little. A handful of trained soldiers can cut an unarmed multitude to pieces. The Christian warrior is clad in the best of armor. Paul saw the need of this and he sounded along the lines for all the centuries, "Put on the whole armor of God that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil."

The pieces which are provided in the armory of God are enumerated. The girdle of truth is essential. It binds on the armor and imparts strength to the Christian veteran. The breastplate of righteousness covers the vitals and serves as a bulwark behind which the heart is sheltered from the missiles of the foe. On the march the soldier will encounter a rough and thorny way; he must have his "feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace." The shield of faith is indispensable. Without it we are at the mercy of the foe; with it, we "shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked." The helmet of salvation secures the head and in the hour of apparent defeat blesses the Christian with hopeful assurance of final victory. The sword of the Spirit is necessary in every conflict. The Captain, assailed in the wilderness by the prince of darkness, wielded this trusty sword and conquered his enemy. Its powerful thrusts are always effective in driving Satan from the field. Finally, prayer is mentioned. It inspires the warrior with courage. It nerves him for the battles of life. It "moves the arm that moves the world."

"Restraining prayer, we cease to fight;
Prayer makes the Christian's armor bright;
And Satan trembles when he sees,
The weakest saint upon his knees."

4. They engage in fighting. Ofttimes it is on the defensive. The legions of darkness come up against the forces of truth in battle array. The archers darken the elements with their poisoned arrows. They charge with glittering spears. With satanic yell they rush up the ramparts of right, bent on the total destruction of Immanuel's army. But the sturdy heroes of truth defend themselves with valor. Clad in divine armor, they receive the foe. The grand old sword in a thousand faithful hands, with true aim and steady stroke, thin out the hostile ranks. Shield and helmet serve their purpose. Prayer and courage do their part. The baffled enemy retires, and victory on the defensive is won.

But we must assume the offensive in Christian warfare. The pieces of armor are confined to the front, and we must never retreat. The spirit of Christianity is aggressive. It is the nature of the water of life to run and not to stagnate. It is the purpose of the Captain to wrest the entire globe from the hands of Satan. The army of the living God is to go forth on one grand series of conquests. It is to scan every ocean and sea, invade every continent and island, and subjugate the world for Immanuel. It is to crush every legion of error, to demolish every fortress of wrong, to thwart every purpose of Satan. And the church militant, weak and exhausted on many hard-won fields, rejoices that victories here are only a faint prophecy of the glories of the church triumphant.

II. HIS FOE.

1. He is experienced. For six thousand years he has been troubling and tempting the race. He knows the customs and tastes of all nations. He is acquainted with all kinds of people. He has dealt with all temperaments and all natures. Princes and paupers have alike fallen into his clutches. His snares have caught the cultured and the illiterate. Age and youth, rich and poor, honored and disgraced, male and female, cannibal and Christian, people of all centuries and countries and conditions, are well known to him. His experience is as old as man and as wide as the world.

2. He is invisible. He is a spirit and it is often exceedingly difficult to detect his presence. Mediæval poisoners used to place poison in the flowers of the gardens so that as youth or maiden inhaled the fragrance of the flower, they would also inhale the fatal poison. Thus Satan appears as an angel of light, and millions writhe in his deadly toils. Too late they realize the monstrous deception.

3. He is artful. Strategy has been known to accomplish far more in military tactics than whole legions of trained fighting men. Satan is proficient in this art. We deal with a foe who is well posted in all kinds of trick and artifice. His plans and schemes have been in operation for centuries. He has refined his diabolical processes to the utmost degree. His artful snares and wily deceptions have wrought untold havoc.

4. He is deadly. He means no good to man. He goes up and down the world as a roaring lion "seeking whom he may devour." If the race is ever elevated, it is against his wishes. He fathers no good work and aids no beneficent enterprise. He glories in the path of ruin. Thither he would turn the teeming millions of earth. He delights to bring every noble name into disgrace. His shafts are directed against the physical and spiritual man. Dissatisfied with devastation here, he would drag the entire race into an awful realization of the bitter death that knows no end.

5. He is powerful. The fiends and fallen angels are his devoted adherents, ever ready to hear his commands and do his bidding. His resources are vast. His instruments of death are numerous. He leads man to commit spiritual suicide. Lustful desires, so hard to control and so awful in effect, do the sad work of destruction. Companions serve as a mighty engine of ruin. The sparkling glass, glittering gold, shining fame, and exquisite pleasure are used to carry out satanic schemes. How great are the earthly odds against us!

III. HIS LEADERSHIP.

1. It is wise. No army can hope for success with an insane man at the head. Loss of faith in the skill and wisdom of the general is the first step to certain ruin. Unwise leadership has resulted disastrously in the fearful loss of life and liberty. Wisdom in the leader is essential.

The forces of right here have all that can possibly be desired. Jesus Christ is the very embodiment of wisdom. With infinite knowledge he leads forth his army. He knows his soldiers, their character and condition, their perils and poverty, their [illegible] and temptations, their sins and [illegible] their hardships and helplessness. He knows the strength of the enemy and is prepared to meet him. No trick of the [illegible] is hid from the penetrating vision

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 21, 1893.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

"What Baptists Believe," by the late J. L. Burrows, will be given to every new subscriber to the BIBLICAL RECORDER who will pay $2.00 in advance for a years' subscription. We will also give the book to every old subscriber who will pay his subscription to date and a year in advance.

Think of it! Your denominational paper, the subscription price of which is $2.00, one year, and a neatly bound book of over a hundred pages, containing a clear and fair expression of what Baptists believe and practice, all for the price of the paper.

Remember, this offer is to new and old subscribers alike.

THE RETIRING PASTOR.

According to Baptist usage and Baptist polity, it sometimes becomes a nice question for a pastor to decide just when to retire from one pastorate and occupy another. Generally speaking, it is a great deal better for the pastor to retire, or resign of his own accord, without any annoying or unseemly pressure from the church, or from leading members of the church. In order to do this successfully, and just at the right time, the pastor will be greatly aided by some experience in the ministry, and a practical knowledge of men and things.

Here, as in other situations of life, extremes had better be avoided. There are some pastors who have such an exalted opinion of the pastoral office, and pastoral prerogatives, that they think they are justifiable in resigning when they hear of a few whispers of dissatisfaction with themselves or their work. Now, the truth of it is, hardly any man, with decided views, and with the courage to express them, can labor long on any field without exciting more or less opposition among some who hear him. This opposition sometimes springs from men of the world whom the faithful pastor may disturb in plying their avocation; and then again it may originate from cold, cranky or good-for-nothing church members, whose comatose condition the pastor is seeking to change, or whose questionable methods of acquiring worldly gain the pastor may expose. And again, this opposition may spring, to some extent, from even good men and women in the church who have a morbid fancy to be everlastingly sampling new men, or who may catch the contagion of frequent changes from those about them who hardly keep pastors long enough for them to get acquainted with the people, and who seem to delight in farewell and introductory sermons. To all such opposition as this the pastor can, as a rule, afford to present a bold front, and "live it down." Being factious and unreasonable, it ought to be disregarded, and any thoughtful church will sustain their pastor in his efforts to do so.

But again, the other extreme is reached when the pastor persists in holding on, even when he knows that quite a number of the best members of the church are opposed to his continuance, and that continuance depends on a rather slim majority. To persist in this course may seriously cripple or divide the church, and also injure the retiring pastor's influence. Churches are not over-anxious to secure a pastor who is known to stick like a leech, even under the protest of quite a number of his best people. Nor are churches fond of calling men who are noted for holding on until there is usually good evidence that they have not left former pastorates until they were bowed out, frozen out, or invited out.

This manner of getting rid of a pastor who stays too long, however, should never be resorted to except in extreme cases. Even when it is a settled fact that the pastor must go, or intends to go, the church would show much more of the spirit of Christ to bring no unseemly pressure to bear upon him. It is often well for the church, and for him, to wait until another pastorate is offered him, so that all things may be done "decently and in order." To turn an old pastor especially "out on the commons" to shift for himself or die, is a sight to make angels weep; and especially is this the case when he is turned out by the votes, or the [illegible] to vote, of many whom he has baptized with his own hands. Be careful how you touch the "Lord's anointed," because the great Shepherd may send spiritual mildew upon you as a church, [illegible] however, a pastor resigns under some pressure from the church, by all means let him do so in a dignified and quiet way. Let him not pose before the public as a persecuted man, and so air his grievances—real or supposed—as to get the tongues of the public to wagging, and have newspaper reporters interviewing him for sensational reports. A Baptist church is a good deal like a private family, and family or church secrets should be kept within family or church limits. A father that loves his family will not air his family troubles before the world; neither should the incoming, abiding, or retiring pastor. To do so injures the pastor's and the church's influence, and gives those who oppose our doctrines and polity a chance to say aha! "Let all things be done decently and in order."

COLLEGE COMMENCEMENTS.

In our own, and in other States, we have just passed through an unusually brilliant season of college commencements. This is well, and we rejoice to notice it. May God's richest blessings rest upon all institutions that are striving in a lawful way to promote the cause of general and special education among our people. With no intention to be censorious, but with an honest desire to promote the efficiency of our colleges and add to the interest of commencement occasions, we desire to ask a few questions about some things noticed at them, especially in recent years:—

One is, why do those who are advertised to fill important places on the program so often fail a trusting faculty and a confiding public? Right often a man of national reputation for oratory or statesmanship is advertised to speak at such and such college commencement, and the clans gather from far and near, and the expected orator fails to materialize; and often no better explanation can be, or is given, than such as this, "Suddenly called to ——," or pressing official duties, &c., &c. Now, why do orators, &c., promise to fill such engagements if they expect to be called elsewhere, or if the press of official duties is likely to prevent? We are old fashioned enough to believe that even orators ought to keep their promises, and not fail to keep their engagements unless providentially hindered.

Another is, would it not be well for commencement orators to guard their language more carefully in commending art or intellect at the expense of religion? For instance, we once heard a talented speaker at the commencement of a popular female institute in commending the Raphaelistic beauty of the picture of the Madonna and child, assert that, before it, the species of worship rendered, was at least pardonable. Was not that a polite way of saying that weak mortals might at times disregard the command, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me?" Again, we heard another man of undoubted ability assert that the mind of a great actor who lived and died in the atmosphere of the theatre, was unequalled. We could not make such an assertion in the presence of a multitude of young ladies whose minds had been largely moulded by the intellectual researches of such men as Newton and Agassiz, and whose religious life had been moulded by the teachings of the Nazarene and his apostles, not the least of whom was the man from Tarsus.

Again, why do not those who see proper to read their addresses on such occasions, read loud enough to be heard in the back part of the hall or chapel? The man that occupies the back seat may be a late comer and a sinner too, but he may be a lover of the beautiful and the grand; may have intellectual aspirations, and his offense of a late arrival is hardly grave enough to cut him off from the intellectual feast.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

Commencement seasons are seasons of pleasure; and one of the delightful features is, they soon end. They are not good times to sleep, and now with eyes half open and bass drums and squealing fifes still sounding in my ears, I am off to Western North Carolina to unite with these the sight of the mountains, to inhail the pure air, and to drink the cold, clear water.

Sunday is spent at the home of R. W. Brooks. Most all straggling Baptists find him when they go to Greensboro. Why they should do this is easily explained after you have stopped with him. I literally spent the time in his house, or, rather, in my room. The appetizing odor of broiled beefsteak and the fact that Brother Thomas was to preach at eleven o'clock failed to dispossess me. It was a day of rest, absolute rest, with me. I was glad, however, to hear the Greensboro pastor at night. The weather was very hot and the house very full. The sermon was one of the best to which we have listened in years. Thomas's size is not all beneath his shirt collar. I know of no man whose vigorous growth of intellect has been so marked within the last five years. He can occupy any pulpit in the country or city, provided it is built of good, strong timbers. At 12:20 o'clock, I am at HICKORY.

This was on time: I note it, as it does not often occur. Those people think they have the nicest, cleanest, and most desirable town in Western Carolina, and I don't blame them. If I lived here, I would think the same thing; as it is, I am not testifying; for I am to see Asheville, Morganton, and perhaps other western towns before I return. There is great advantage in knowing people, and then to be able to rely upon them, mixes much joy with all of our work, be it never so hard and disagreeable. In a few minutes after you can get Dr. Whiteside still enough to probe him, you know all about the past, present, and a fair share of the future of the Baptist interest in Hickory—always cheerful, hopeful, and, above all, helpful in everything that carries his church a step in advance.

Jim Martin is a born builder: he is never satisfied unless new houses of some sort are going up. He has an elegant house of his own, and yet it is highly probable he will take it down and build it over again unless he finds plenty of this sort of work to do outside. He is anxious to present the claims of his town and offer inducements for the Baptist Female University to go there. This he proposes to talk about later on. He always places me under special obligations for the interest he shows in me and my work. He does not stop with paying his own subscription to the RECORDER, but helps me to get others to take the paper, and in many cases advances the money for those whom I cannot see.

I spent some time with Bro. Wiggs. He is always delighted to hear from the Editor of the RECORDER and other of his old friends in Wake, where he spent many years of his life. Although utterly blind, he seems to have lost none of his former interest in the things about him, and his cheerful, sunny disposition is an open rebuke to many of us who are less unfortunate.

After waiting for a train, which is three hours late, I start for and reach there at night just as the rain begins to pour in torrents. In these mountains it can rain harder and do it quicker than in any place I ever saw. Here is where clouds are made, and it seems that they shake off the surplus of water which comes down in streams before floating them off to moisten other sections.

I suppose ninety per cent. of the people who go to Asheville stop on the public square. All the cars meet there. The court-house is there. A number of hotels are near by. Then, too, there is Capt. Nat Atkinson's office: he knows all the news in the city, what lots are for sale and the price of them, and whether money is plentiful or otherwise. I soon heard it was "otherwise" by a large majority.

This is the "between season" at Asheville: not many visitors for the summer have arrived. It may be these hard seasons are necessary in the growth of a city just as wind and dry weather are necessary to produce the healthy and substantial growth of the trees of the forest.

I attended services at the French Broad church on Wednesday night. The growth of this interest seems to be steady and encouraging. Bro. Adams is a good preacher, safe in his methods of work, and his people seem to be in full accord with him and to delight in doing the work of the church on the plans of the pastor.

Thursday night we were permitted to hear Rev. A. C. Dixon lecture in the First church. He is very popular in Asheville and always has a good audience, whether he preaches or lectures. On this occasion the audience seemed to enjoy what was said; not so much that it was a popular lecture, for it was not, strictly speaking: but while there was enough of the lecture to please, the most worthy features of the discourse were the moral lessons and religious truths suggested. This was the first sight we had had of the new church edifice since its completion. It is by all odds the finest audience room in the State, and, Mr. Dixon says, the handsomest in the South. The seating capacity is 1,500, and we understand the house is filled at almost every service. The brethren are justly proud of their house; and this is not more marked than the popularity of their pastor, whom they all delight to hear on all occasions.

The Huston Narcotic Cure for liquor, morphine and opium habits, which has recently been established at Asheville, is a new interest and is regarded with decided favor by the citizens of the town. In company with Dr. Millard, we visited this institution, situated in a very handsome building on College street, in one of the most desirable locations in the city. Drs. Millard and Spence, who are the physicians in charge, are confident of the success of the enterprise. They already have some most flattering testimonials of the cures which have been effected. The high character of the officers and directors is a guarantee of the merits of the institution.

MORGANTON.

Here we soon found Brother Patton who helped me very much in my work while in the town. I note many improvements in the town for the past three years. A new bank, the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, and a large tannery are some of the evidences of the prosperity of the town.

BURLINGTON.

I spent Sunday at Burlington with Bro. Hocutt and his people. This was my first visit to this church, and I was very much pleased with what I found. The building is a good one, but unfortunately is too small to accommodate the people who come to hear preaching on an ordinary occasion. There are now about two hundred members, and others are being added almost every week. Bro. Hocutt is one of our very best men, has always done good work wherever he has been, and in Burlington he is much loved, not only by his own people, but he has the respect and utmost confidence of the entire town.

....The report of the Woman's Missionary Union, auxiliary to the Southern Baptist Convention, is on our table. From it we gather that the Union has given $36,052 27 to Foreign Missions, and $26,283.97 to Home Missions. The report is in every way creditable.

....We return thanks for a copy of the address of Dr. B. H. Carroll on "Papal Fields" before the late Southern Baptist Convention. It is one of the strongest addresses on the subject that we have seen. Published by Baptist Standard, Texas. Price, five cents.

....Dr. T. P. Bell has declined to accept the position of Corresponding Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, recently made vacant by the resignation of Dr. Tupper, and will remain at Nashville as Secretary of the Sunday-school Board of the Southern Baptist Convention.

....Rev. Carter Helm Jones has decided to accept the pastorate of the McFerran Memorial church, Louisville, at a salary of $3,000 a year, although he was offered $5,000 to remain in Knoxville. Such examples as this should put down the accusation that the Christian ministry is mercenary.

....We want each of our subscribers to look on the label of his paper this week and see if his time is out. If it is, we want him to send his renewal at once. We must have the money to meet our obligations. By attention to this on the part of our subscribers we would be enabled to tide over the summer months without borrowing money.

....Dr. Thos. Hume of the University is resting at Waynesboro, Va., before leaving for Chicago, where he delivers a series of eleven lectures before the National School of Methods. Dr. Hume delivered commencement addresses at Newbern and Tarboro, and preached the baccalaureate sermon at Guilford College during the last commencement season.

....We wish to call the especial attention of our subscribers—both new and old—to our premium offer of "What Baptists Believe," by the late Dr. J. L. Burrows. This offer cannot last long, and we hope that many of our subscribers may get the book themselves, and that our pastors and church workers will not lose this opportunity to spread the doctrine by getting new subscribers. See offer at top of editorial column.

....Rev. W. C. Newton, son of Rev. C. C. Newton, our missionary at Lagos, Africa, was ordained at Wake Forest on Sunday, June 11th. The sermon was preached by Prof. W. B. Royall, the ordaining prayer was offered by Rev. W. H. Edwards, the charge was given by Rev. W. R. Gwaltney, and the welcome was spoken by Dr. C. E. Taylor. Bro. Newton has been called to the pastorate of Mt. Olivet church. He is a young man of power and promise.

....The Foreign Mission Board, Richmond, Va., held a meeting June 14th, 1893, and Dr. T. P. Bell's letter, declining the call to the position of Secretary, was presented, and a committee, Drs. Harris, Landrum, Hatcher, Whitfield and Cooper, were appointed to nominate a Secretary at the next meeting of the Board. Dr. Tupper will continue his duties a few weeks and then turn over the office and papers to Dr. Harris, who is authorized to carry on the work until the vacancy can be filled. Dr. H. H. Harris was born Dec. 17, 1837. We nominate him.

....Here are a few facts concerning young men which are well worth prayerful consideration by all earnest people. In the United States there are seven million young men. Seventy-five per cent. of them do not attend church. Ninety-five per cent. do not belong to the church. Eighty-five per cent. of the patrons of the saloon and houses of ill-repute are young men. Seventy per cent. of the criminal classes are young men. What a challenge to the churches is contained in these facts! Certainly the gospel of Christ has power to reach and save young men. But it must be a rich, round, full gospel, a manly gospel, and not the dainty and æsthetic thing that passes for the gospel sometimes. Earnestness and conviction and courage and strength are the qualities which win young men.—Baltimore Baptist.

....Rev. J. B. Gambrell, D. D., of Mississippi, has been elected president of Mercer University, and the Atlanta papers state that he accepts the position. Dr. Gambrell was for a number of years editor of the Baptist Record, and subsequently was the financial agent of Mississippi College. He is considered one of our ablest men, a profound thinker, a vigerous writer and one of the most popular platform speakers in the South. We hope that he will be the right man in the right place, and that Mercer will be greatly prospered under his administration.—Baptist Courier.

....In Germany there is said to be a great overplus of students who have been educated as specialists. This is not surprising, when we consider that education has tended strongly in this direction in Germany in recent years. This state of things may serve to suggest that the sort of education which develops the man in the most varied and symmetrical manner is, after all, the best education;—best, because it enlarges the possibilities of the man for usefulness, multiples his chances for a living and broadens and liberalizes his notions concerning other people and what they do.

Letter from Rev. J. F. Love.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Allow one who has labored in the midst of the destitution of Eastern North Carolina, and who knows the necessity for a house of worship at Washington, to supplement Bro. McLeod's appeal to the denomination in behalf of that object. The need is absolute. It is a waste of money and of men to attempt to establish the Baptist cause in that town unless the denomination will build a house; while on the other hand I doubt that there is in the State so fine an opportunity for a profitable outlay of five or six thousand dollars. Those who have watched Bro. McLeod's movements at Beaufort will not doubt that he is the right man to superintend this enterprise if the denomination will only support and encourage him. My sympathies go out for the man who stands for God and Baptist truth in Beaufort county. And though no longer connected with the cause of Christ in North Carolina, Bro. McLeod shall hear from me in a more substantial manner if he stands by his purpose to build the house at Washington.

I am grieved to see the announcement that Bro. Hildreth is to leave Bayboro after so short a stay. In all my travels I have found no such sacrifice for the cause of Christ as I have seen evinced by some at Bayboro, whose names I will not mention here. Cannot a man be found who will go to this important field and labor for Christ?

It may interest some, though it will surprise none of Bro. H. W. Battle's friends, to know that he "covered himself with glory" at the Hollins Institute commencement last week. Said one of Virginia's distinguished D. D.'s: "Battle is the lion of this occasion." His sermon was much praised, and when called out by the young ladies, as he was frequently during the commencement exercises, he invariably surprised and charmed all by his wit and eloquence.

J. F. LOVE

Roanoke, Va.

From Glenville, Ga.

Dear Recorder:—Sometime ago I was notified by several of the good brethren near Lyons, Ga., that Dr. James A. Smith of Fair Bluff, N. C., would deliver a series of sermons at that place on the Apocalypse. The good news fell upon my ears like a sweet voice from a far-off home. So I made ready and went to hear the man of God, and it was indeed a happy meeting, for Brother Smith is one of my best friends. He and the Rev. J. G. Fisher of Roslin, N. C., set me apart to the full work of the gospel ministry; and ever since that time the love and affection of my heart has been entwined around theirs. May God in his infinite love and mercy continue his blessings upon these dear brethren.

The meetings began on May 26, and continued until June 4. There was large attendance the entire time all things considered. The good news spread up and down the railroad and all through the adjacent country. There was great interest and religious excitement among all classes of people. Railroad conductors, engineers, drummers, turpentine men, farmers, and in fact all classes, even the poor negroes, clung about the door and listened attentively to the precious gospel. Bro. Smith preached the gospel with great power, and the Holy Spirit attended the Word, making it effectual. Several good brethren and sisters were added to this little church, and I believe the good work will continue to go on for months to come.

Bro. J. I. Lennon, one of North Carolina's brilliant, consecrated young preachers, is pastor of this church, and under his wise leadership we may look for good results.

The good brethren and sisters in and around Lyons supported the visitors handsomely. May God bless them and make them a blessing to others.

T. J. BAKER.

New Church Constituted—Sandy Plain.

Dear Recorder:—In compliance with a call made by a mission station, known as Sandy Plain, located in Williams' township, Columbus county, N. C., on Wednesday, June 7th, 1893, a delegation from Iron Hill Baptist church and Springfield Baptist church, consisting of Elders D. N. Gore and D. D. Cox, pastors of those two churches, and also the deacons and brethren from said churches, assembled in the church-building.

At eleven o'clock a. m., the brethren and deacons and Elders organized themselves into a presbytery in order as follows: Elder D. D. Cox was chosen Moderator, and Elder D. N. Gore, Secretary.

Elder Gore preached the sermon from Matthew 16: 18—"And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." The sermon was well delivered, and presented in clear and unmistakable terms Jesus Christ, the foundation of all Christian assurance and faith; true believers, such as Peter, the materials (not the foundation) used in building the church; and lastly, the indestructibility of the church. The preacher warmed in his theme and said: "That if all the crusade system, Roman Catholic inquisition, and with all the lieing and persecution the church has stood up to this time were unable to prevail against it, it could and would withstand a tidal wave from the infernal regions, and come out without the smell of fire upon it."

After the sermon, the membership present went into conference. Elder Cox called for their letters of dismission. Twenty letters were presented, showing the bearers to be in full fellowship with the churches from which they had been dismissed. Elder Gore read the covenant and articles of faith as set forth in the Baptist Church Directory by Hiscox, and the membership having assented thereto, the right hand of Christian fellowship was extended by the council, and the church at Sandy Plain declared to be a regular Baptist church in good order.

Brethren M. Baseman and Elkana Falk were chosen and regularly set apart to the office of deacons, and Bro. Jonathan Falk was chosen to be clerk.

The church is without a pastor, but will have regular preaching until they shall secure a pastor.

The new church will be apt to ask to become a member of the Columbus Association.

W. C. GRAHAM, for Com.

Lorls. S. C., June 16, 1893.

From Burlington, N. C.

Bro. Bailey:—I have been here nearly six months, hence, I am prepared to give some view of the interest of the Baptist cause in and around Burlington.

When I came the first of the year, the church had one hundred and three members. Within these six months, the membership of the church has been increased nearly fifty per cent., ten of which were received by experience and baptism. There are several awaiting the ordinance of baptism now. There have been developements along many lines: the contributions have been very good, considering the stringency of the time; the prayer-meetings are well attended, and the Sunday school is doing very efficient work.

The success with which we have met, is largely due to the wise and discreet work done by Bro. Richardson, my immediate predecessor; also, to the faithfulness of many of our brethren and sisters.

When we consider the fact that this is a growing manufacturing town, and that in different directions, within short distances, there are many factory towns and villages, its importance, as a center, will appear.

With discreet management, the church here will, within the near future, be able to support a pastor for all his time.

Bro. Alvis Andrews is preaching at Glencoe, Carolina, Big Falls, Alamance, and Belle Mont. While the progress must necessarily be slow, he meets with many encouragements. We hope to be able to organize a church at Glencoe before the end of this year.

The fourth Sunday in each month, I preach at Graham and Haw River. At Graham, we cannot hope for much in the near future—for a while, we will do well if we continue to "hold our own," yet, I believe that there are some encouraging signs.

At Haw River, the prospects are very bright. There are about seventy Baptists in the town. In addition to these, there are many others who would have been Baptists, had there been a Baptist church there. To accommodate these, and to utilize and develope the Baptists already there, we will organize a church there the fourth Sunday in this month. Dr. J. L. Carroll of Chapel Hill has kindly consented to assist on that occasion. We hope to be able to organize with a membership of twenty-five or thirty.

While this section of the State has been neglected, with the Spirit of the Lord to direct and bless our labors, Baptist influences will be a power for good.

Fraternally, JNO. C. HOCUTT.

The Cause at Benson.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I would like to say to the brethren, through your valuable paper, that the cause of Christ at Benson is steadily growing under the pastorate of Rev. J. M. Holleman of Apex. He comes to see us once a month, and preaches three sermons for us before he leaves. At his last visit there were three added to the church by letter, and we are looking for others to join soon.

Our Sunday school is better than ever before. We are greatly encouraged with the progress made, but there is room for still further enlargement.

On the first Sunday in this month, I went out into the country to a school-house and organized a Sunday-school, where no work of this kind was ever attempted before.

Brethren, let us go out in the destitute parts and sow the gospel seed. I find some sections destitute of the gospel and ready to receive it, but some are not. Then let us "throw out the life line, for there is some one sinking to-day."

N. H. GIBBS.

Benson, June 14, 1893.

Board of Missions and Sunday-schools.

The Board of Missions and Sunday-schools will hold an important meeting in the Mission Rooms, Friday, June 23d, 1893, at 8 o'clock p. m. All the members are requested to attend. J. C. SCARBOROUGH, Ch. B'd.

Peace! Peace! Peace!

Dear Recorder:—At the risk of being called forward and too busy in matters, I want to submit just a thing or two about matters along Baptist lines. I have noticed of late that there is a mighty growing sentiment among some of our brethren to fuss and kick. At first, it was somewhat general, but it has assumed somewhat of a personal nature. At first, the kicking aimed at nothing definite, now they kick direct. Disparaging reports and hints and insinuations about men, especially those who are our leaders in the various fields of our denominational work. Of course, I use leaders in its restricted sense. These reports, insinuations, and sometimes abuses, are heralded through the columns of our denominational papers—not simply one of them, but all of them. By this means, our homes are poisoned with the stuff, the minds of people prejudiced, their confidence in men destroyed, their covetous pockets closed, and the work of the denomination seriously and almost lastingly damaged.

Now viewing this thing from the standpoint of a pastor, upon whose shoulders rests the burden of carrying on the work of the denomination among his people, I can see nothing but harm coming out of the whole thing. I am speaking positively now, speaking out of an experience. "I am not going to give any money to that object to have it misapplied and stolen" is a common expression we hear as we appeal to the people. And who blames them? Why to read the papers, there is a rascal in every department of our denominational work toeing the bag.

In consideration, then, of the vast harm which is coming to the work as committed to my hands among my own people by reason of this eternal newspaper howl, I submit an earnest plea for a "rest, sweet rest."

And in making this plea, I am not to be understood as endorsing the spirit of bossism or machine rule, if there exists any such, and I am not stopping through the columns of a paper to argue this question. I despise popery, whether with the Catholics or among Baptists. But I do say that as long as we have our Conventions, Associations, &c., that we have no business making our personal fights against our brethren in the columns of newspapers These matters come up at our Conventions: there they are discussed or ought to be. If any brother has any thing to say, then is the time to say it. If he has a plan to put before the body which, in his opinion, tends to further the interest of the denomination, let him do it. Give him the chance—talk it over. If he is opposed to a man and wants to get rid of him in any given department of work, let him say so; and then when the matter is decided, for the sake of the cause, let his pen, at least, be silent until another opportunity is afforded. This plan of going to a Convention and voting for a man or a measure, and then growling about it at home, is not consistent with my idea of Baptist ways of doing things.

In order, then, that this shall be the order of things in the future, let our Conventions be more of a mass meeting run along democratic lines, giving every man a chance to do and say just what he pleases. This might result in curtailing the amount of space given visiting brethren who come representing the interests of the Southern Baptist Convention, or their own personal interest; if so, we will but rejoice the more to know that our own work is not suffering for space, and it might also result in less so called "clock-work;" but if so, all will be well, provided we have time for frankness, openness and mature deliberation. At any rate, let us, brethren, have a rest if you please. This is the way I feel about it.

Some of our brethren have suggested that we make a ring and put about a half dozen brethren in it and let the best man be crowned the "hero pen pugilist"—perhaps it might not be a bad idea after all.

Price, 30 cents each, or $25.00 per hundred to churches.

Olive's Expiation. By Mildred Scarborough. 16mo, 236 pp. Price, $1.00. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

The scene of this story is laid in Virginia, New York, and Florida. In the first, in an old farmhouse, on a place run down because the owner is wedded to the production of a book of "Legends" instead of business, we are introduced to the principal characters, Constance and Olive Leighton. In New York we are brought into contact with a career of selfish thoughtlessness on the part of Olive, and with a whirl of fashionable folly into which she was led. While in Florida, amid the balminess and bloom of St. Augustine, we have restoration and the promise of a new life for each of the sisters.

The Proposed Meeting at Hope Mills.

Dear Recorder:—The Rev. F. H. Martin, the gifted and eloquent pastor of the Lumberton Baptist church in Robeson county, will aid Rev. W. B. Harrell, pastor of Hope Mills Baptist church in a series of meetings, beginning D. V. June 27th. Hope Mills is one of the most charming little towns imaginable, on a lovely and picturesque stream, Rockfish creek, with two railroads, a population of eight hundred souls, and a large cotton factory, &c. W. B. HARRELL.

Dunn, June 6, 1893.

From Rev. L. N. Chappell in China

Dear Recorder:—With the opening spring we have been trying to reach places that requires more time in the outside evangelistic work than we could give during the vigorous winter weather. To many of these places the gospel rarely, if ever, goes, because of the length of time required to accomplish the work of evangelizing them, and because of the scarcity of preachers, leads us to give most of our time to the destitute thousands nearer home. Each missionary feels as though he would like to be able to multiply himself a hundred fold in efficiency and power.

Frequently when preaching in our chapels here in Chinkiang, we meet those from a distance, who give us pressing invitations to visit their towns and villages, saying that the gospel has never been heard there.

This travelling from place to place, either by boat, or on donkeys, or on foot, is not only a fruitful plan in opportunities for spreading the gospel news, but is helpful to the body and mind of the missionary as well.

After a winter's routine of preaching and study, work done for the most part nearer home, and a good part of the time perhaps spent over text-books, and in other sedentary occupations, the physical exercise and temporary hardships incidental to travel in China are helpful to the body, stimulates the mind and heart, and tones up the whole man by a certain change of labor. So we have enjoyed our spring's work for several reasons. It brings us into closer relationship with the Chinese socially, to be mingling with them day after day on the streets, by the roadside, in their shops, in their homes, talking with them personally and in groups; eating with them, and sleeping in the same boat with them.

Then we distribute portions of the Scriptures, tracts, printed songs and prayers, &c., so that this is more like the ideal missionary life from many points of view than either preaching at stated intervals from the pulpit, or even in school or hospital work, all of which are needful to the progress of the gospel. There are a few country villages between here and Yangchow, and beyond there on a branch canal that we try to visit frequently.

Week before last we made a visit of five days, visiting some towns and villages on the canal which are rarely visited. Everywhere we received the kindest treatment from the people, and oftentimes received good attention to the preaching of the gospel.

The last trip we took to Yangchow was by boat, starting after dinner and reaching our destination about nightfall. When about half-way, a thunder-storm came up, whereupon the boatmen cast anchor and fled to their mat-covering for shelter. They are very much afraid of the rain, but do not mind the hotest sun. One could wish they were not so afraid of the water for the sake of bodily cleanliness. Here Bro. Pierce, who has been staying with us at Chinkiang for awhile, suddenly remembers he has left the house-keys behind at Chinkiang, and the question arises, how are we to get into the house, or are we to stay out doors all night in the rain? The answer in part comes in a few minutes when the sun breaks forth from the thunder-cloud and the rain is quickly gone. The remaining doubt is removed by our taking out a pane of glass and wriggling through the aperture into the house, whereupon the keys to the house arrive promptly by special messenger from Chinkiang through the kind thoughtfulness of Mrs. Pierce.

After a late supper, we gather a small audience in the street chapel near by, and talk to them for half an hour about Jesus, after which we retire for the night. Early next morning we preach to a large and attentive audience at the North Gate of the city, then mount our donkeys for our return trip to Chinkiang over land, visiting three country villages on the way. At the first place we take our dinner of rice, eggs, &c., a la mode Chinese. We do not succeed very well in interesting the few listless characters hanging about us at the time. This is true everywhere, that loafers make poor listeners to the gospel, or any other doctrine of spiritual and bodily activity. At the next place, we are more fortunate, for as we move slowly down the street selling books, distributing tracts, and talking the gospel to groups as they gather about us, we have the happy experience of speaking these precious soul-saving truths to many a kindly listening ear. One group of old gray-headed gentlemen, sitting in a shop, drinking tea, I recall as intensely interested, and who not only listen attentively but ask questions. God grant that the seed may have fallen into good soil. I hope I may see those old men again. Dr. Graves of Canton calls attention to the large number of old men who believe the gospel. Our experience is largely repeated in our third and last village.

I recall among other experiences that one white haired old lady asks me to sit down in her shop and talk to her and her employees as they work at their tailoring. Soon a large group gathers about me to hear "the old, old story." But the sun is very low, and after drinking the cup of tea which my kind hostess presses on me to take, we hurry on board our boat, cross the river, and reach Chinkiang as the evening shadows close in upon the world.

But I must close this hurried letter, hoping to write again soon.

I send a clipping from the North China Daily News on "Hunan Tracts," which may give some idea of the wild stories afloat in Hunan province and in other parts of China.

L. N. CHAPPELL.

Chinkiang, May 10, 1893.

HUNAN TRACTS—THE TEN EVIL DEEDS OF THE EUROPEANS.

It would seem by a "tract" that has been sent to us under the guise of "A New Song or the Ten Evil Deeds of the Europeans," composed by a Hunan scholar by the name of Yu and published at Ch'angte Fu, Hunan, by a bookseller called Tai, and sold throughout that prefecture, that the practice of writing and publishing what has been known as The Hunan Publications has by no means died a natural death yet, notwithstanding the protestations of the Chinese authorities to the contrary. For gathering from the context, the "New song" dates no earlier than the autumn of last year—to give it as ancient a date as may be consistent with probability.

"China," says this tract, or rather we should call it this new song, "China was a fair, happy and prosperous country under the beneficent rule of the Ta Ts'ing dynasty until the hated European, full of guile and latent wickedness, appeared on the scene. Then he made his baneful presence known by engaging kidnappers to waylay children, irrespective of sex, who escaped detection by being transformed into sheep by means of a charm placed on their heads, until being taken to a place of safety far away from the prying eyes of the people, a single draught of water was sufficient to make the sheep resume their natural forms and become children once more. But sooner or later retribution must come. It came in this instance one day in the 4th moon of last year (May, 1892,) when nine sheep that had been stolen by a party of four kidnappers in the city of An Fu, Hunan, broke the spell unknown to their captors, by drinking some water. The childrens' tale was soon told; but afraid that the magistrate of the town, by accepting bribes from the men, would let them go, the people of An Fu took vengeance into their own hands by decapitating the four kidnappers and chopping their bodies into mince-meat. But it was not until they had sprinkled the blood of a black dog on the kidnappers' necks that they succeeded at last in beheading them, for hitherto they had defied the people by their spells, turning the edges of the executioners' swords. The next evil is the Roman Catholic priests, who bribe the ignorant to become converts and then by the use of baneful drugs they kill them in order to obtain the heart, eyes and gall of their victim. These deeds escaped detection by the bodies being sewn up and swathed in winding-sheets before being put into the coffins. Next comes the bringing of opium into the country to sap the energies and undermine the health of the young and strong, so that the European might overawe with his superior strength the enervated Chinese. But the worst of the whole thing is that knowing the harm engendered by taking this drug, people do not avoid it—because they love it! The next evil again is the European syren who tempts the youths of the country. Then comes the steamer which, from the vastness of its size, murders might be perpetrated within it, by the throwing overboard of the innocent passenger and no one any the wiser for the deed! The sixth evil is the importation of rifles and cannon for which the wealth of the country is exchanged. The country is strong in its righteousness and love of justice, and by the doctrine of the "Brotherhood of all within the Four Seas" all weapons are useless. Thus, again, the European tries to take away the wealth of China by setting up telegraph poles; but in reality it is to spy and map out our country that they have come. They tried to get a footing in Hunan for this purpose; but our people were too clever for them and drove them out of the province, and burnt the telegraph poles. To the people, therefore, of Lichou we owe our thanks for this meritorious deed.

The author of the "New Song" vouches for the truth of this story, and finally concludes by saying that much wisdom and many benefits may be obtained by the payment of a few cash, and exhorts his readers to repeat the tale to their children, "in order that they, too, may avoid the snares of the Europeans and escape being their victims in the future."

Son of Man. He detects the subtlest strategy of a sharp and malicious foe. He can locate his legions where their energies will have the most telling effect. His manœuvres display his supreme skill. No faithful soldier has ever doubted the military prowess and prudence of his captain. Immanuel has infinite wisdom.

2. It is affectionate. Few chieftains have really cared for the lives of their men beyond the accomplishment of their designs. Petty purposes and shallow schemes have been deliberately carried out at a sacrifice of many regiments of faithful soldiers. The devotees of war have hearts no less severe and stern than that of the god at whose shrine they bow.

How different is the Captain of our salvation! No one has greater love, for the race than He who wept with the sisters of Bethany. His sympathy for rebellious man is boundless. His great heart throbbed with the tenderest emotions of love and brought him from the heights of glory to the dust of humility to save a helpless world. He gave his life a ransom for many. He freely shed his blood for the redemptiion of the race. In love for man, he entered the tomb, conquered death in his stronghold, and ascended on high to prepare a home for the faithful who fight his battles and carry out his orders.

And the love of the Captain underlies the unity, energy and success of his army. "We love him because he first loved us." This divine cement unites in solid masonry the lively stones of the spiritual temple. It binds the soldiery together with links more strong than steel. It inspires them with undying zeal for the cause they have espoused. It teaches them to sweetly endure the taunts and jeers of critical multitudes or the terrific horrors of rack and stake for "his name's sake." Napoleon was right in declaring, "Alexander, Cæsar, Charlemagne and myself have founded great empires; but upon what did the creations of our genius depend? Force. Jesus Christ alone founded his empire upon love, and to this day millions would die for him."

3. It is successful. Great generals have not escaped their reverses. The darkest nights of defeat have sometimes followed close upon the sunniest days of victory. From the dizzy heights of military glory there has been a wild and awful plunge into the dread abyss of military woe and ruin. The war chieftain, now victor, now vanquished, pursues an uncertain path through "alternate shade and sunshine."

Christ alone has never lost a single battle. In the wilderness, with all the odds against him and assailed by a mighty and malicious foe, he fought valiantly and came off conqueror. Satanic hosts exulted at the gloom of Gethsemane, the mock trial, the fearful scourging, and the awful crucifixion on Calvary. But their apparent victory was only the harbinger of their everlasting defeat, for on the sacrifice made at the Place of Skulls depended the permanent and effective organization of Immanuel's army.

And the army, successful for nearly nineteen centuries, is now constantly swelling its ranks and fortifying its outposts and enlarging its territory and subjugating its enemies. A faultless commander leads a disciplined host to sure and speedy victory. The baffled multitudes of error fly before the invincible cohorts of right. And soon the entire planet will be evangelized and a Christian world as one man shall sound the praises of the Captain of their salvation.

Then Christian soldier, gird on the armor afresh and rush into the thickest of the fight. The battle is raging fiercely and your services are in demand. Study the foe and plunge thy trusty sword into his vitals. Love your Captain and obey his orders at every hazard. Win souls for Immanuel from the grasp of the enemy. Contend for the truth with ceaseless vigilance. In due time, you shall lay your armor by and receive your everlasting reward on the banks of sweet and never-ending deliverance.

The Exchanging of Pulpits.

I see in the RECORDER of a recent date that a brother from Randleman who signs name W. is giving himself a great deal of anxiety about me exchanging pulpits with a Methodist brother.

He draws this conclusion from a statement that I made in the RECORDER of recent date, viz: because I exchanged pulpits with a Methodist brother one Sunday at 11 o'clock I would be sprinkling babies in a few weeks. What an absurd conclusion! I do earnestly hope that that brother will not lose any more sleep over that matter, for I can assure him that the Missionary Baptist church does not observe an ordinance that is unscriptural.

But I notice in the Raleigh Christian Advocate of May 24th that a brother from Milton, N. C., who signs his name B. attacks Bro. W. of Randleman very severely and justly too. Bro. B. holds that it is for the good of the cause to exchange pulpits occasionally with our brethren of different beliefs.

I agree with Bro. B. Christianity enlarges men's minds instead of contracting them.

Brethren, are you afraid of each other? Why not come out like men and sign your names to what you say? I maintain that it is for the good of the cause to exchange pulpits occasionally.

Cordially yours,

B. H. MATTHEWS.

A Great Nerve Tonic.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate,

Dr. L. Harris Hall, State Lunatic Asylum, Milledgeville, Ga., says: "I have used it in cases of nervous prostration after acute maladies, and found it gave great relief in cases where there seemed to be a want of proper assimilation of food accompanying chronic dyspepsia. It is undoubtedly a great nerve tonic."

Contemplated Union of the Caldwell County and Catawba River Associations.

Believing large Associations to be more useful and influential than small ones, some of the more prominent and leading brethren of the Catawba River have asked the Caldwell brethren to think about a union of the two bodies. Accordingly at the last Caldwell Union Meeting, it was agreed to consider the propriety of the union of the two bodies at next Union Meeting to convene with Dudley Shoals church on Friday before the fifth Sunday in July. Of course, no legal or official action can be taken in a Union Meeting, but by friendly discussion a sentiment for or against can be obtained.

I want to mention some objections to, and name a few reasons for, a union of the two bodies, and will mention the objections first.

There are twenty-six churches in the Caldwell, and possibly thirty or thirty five in the Catawba River, and should the two bodies unite, it would make an Association of fifty-five or sixty churches, making the delegation with the visitors more than two hundred. Hence, not more than half of the churches would ever ask for the body to meet with them, feeling they were not strong enough to support so large an Association; and, therefore, the weaker churches and the communities in which they are located would be deprived of the good influences of a session of the Association, and the body would meet only in those sections where the truths of the Bible, as Baptists understand them, have long been well established.

Then the territory would be large, embracing all of Caldwell and Burke counties and part of Catawba, devolving yearly upon the delegation from the remote churches a long journey. Often we would be deprived of the presence and counsels of the older brethren, owing to the long distances to be travelled.

Then both Associations would have to give up their names and take a new one, and one or the other would have to give up its time of meeting, &c.

I will now give a few of the reasons why the two bodies should unite.

As large churches are more efficient than small ones, so are large Associations.

Associations are usually representative bodies. They are a sort of index to the strength, intelligence and efficiency of the denomination. If large, intelligent and active, a favorable impression is made on the community where the sessions are held; if small and weak, the influences are unfavorable.

Solomon said, "In the multitude of counsellors there is safety." Multitude implies much or many, and hence may be taken as an argument in favor of large deliberative bodies. If the two Associations were united, it would bring together, at the same time and place all the ministers and many of the brethren, with whatever talent the two Associations may have, and as a result more enthusiasm would be created, our acquaintance extended, and we would be stronger numerically and financially, and therefore be prepared to undertake greater things for Christ.

The two bodies united could well undertake the support of a missionary in the foreign field.

The two bodies united could support a school of high grade at some central point in the territory, and could better advance the interest of Sunday-schools and the cause of Associational missions.

Then if we had fewer Associations, meeting at suitable times and places, the visiting brethren from abroad, as brethren Durham, Caddell, Gwaltney and Taylor, could be with us the entire session. As it now is, they cannot reach all the Associations, and often can spend only one day or two at most with those they do visit.

Some of our sister Associations in the State have seen the folly of little Associations and have united.

I hope we may be so guided by the Spirit that we may do the will of our Master.

Temptation.

A man once asked an Eastern king if he could tell him how to avoid temptation.

The king told the man to take a jug brimful of oil, and to carry it through the streets of the city without spilling one drop.

"If one drop is spilt," said the king, "your head shall be cut off." And he ordered two executioners with drawn swords to walk behind the man, and to carry out his orders.

There happened to be a fair going on in the town, and the streets were crowded with people. However, the man was very careful, and he returned to the king without having spilled one drop of the oil.

Then the king asked, "Did you see any one whilst you were walking through the streets?"

"No," said the man, "I was thinking only of the oil; I noticed nothing else."

"Then," said the king, "you notice how to avoid temptation. Fix your mind as firmly on God as you fixed it on the vessel of oil. You will not, then, be tempted to sin."—Selected.

Kindness Acknowledged.

Dear Recorder:—About a year and a half ago an orphan boy was sent by the Baptist Board of Education to Bethel Hill Institute in Person county to begin his preparation for the gospel ministry, a work to which he believed himself called by his Saviour.

When he arrived at the Institute, he was in his twentieth year of age. When he realized that he was among strangers, with his tried and trusted friends far away, he felt very lowly and depressed. But this feeling did not last long. The noble-hearted students, many of whom like himself were preparing for serving God in the ministry, soon made him to realize that they were his brethren in Christ, and that, though a stranger, he had a warm place in their hearts. Bonds of fraternal love were soon established, which grew stronger and stronger as the months went by. In the school room and in the debating hall, he found them noble and courteous. In the students' prayer-meetings, where they met to speak of God's goodness or to mingle their prayers together as they went heavenward, he found them earnest working Christians, burning with a holy zeal for the salvation of sou's and the uplifting of humanity.

In the Rev. J. A. Beam, principal of the Institution, he found a friend who mingled the solicitude of a father with the tender love of a brother. He found him to be a man whom to know was to love, and who was loved most by those who knew him best. When the student made a mistake, he found him more ready to aid than to censure. In the darkest hours, when the natural buoyancy of youth was clouded and depressed by the force of adverse circumstances, he knew of at least one earthly friend to whom he could go and be sure of help and sympathy. Years may pass, yet will he ever remember with feelings of profound gratitude the one who at the price of self denial often relit the fires of hope and who pulled back the curtains of doubt and gave him a view of the glorious prospects of futurity. May God bless generous-hearted Brother Beam.

As for that band of noble workers that constitute the membership of Bethel church, can he ever be grateful enough to them for their many deeds of love and kindness. He came to them a stranger, yet many of them opened their hearts and homes to him. In many of their homes he was given a place by their firesides and was welcomed to the blessings of life, with which they were surrounded, for a month at a time, and was then sent on to another home where a welcome just as warm awaited him. May the God whom they are striving to serve, bless and repay them. Generous fathers and mothers in Israel! One heart at least has been made happy by their love and sympathy and one life brighter by their aid and encouragement.

The humble writer of this article is the young man that has been so aided and blessed by Bro. Beam and the good people of Bethel Hill. His motive for writing this is, that others may learn of Bethel Hill Institute, and that young men and young ladies all over our State as well as parents and guardians may know the claims which it has on their patronage. Young ladies who go to this school find in the person of the principal's wife that which goes far to make up for a mother's care and a mother's love. She has stamped the mark of her influence upon all the young ladies who have been in her care, and in the years to come it will bear fruits in the homes of our land.

Those—especially young ministers—who wish to enter a school where religion and education go hand in hand, where character-making is deemed more important than money making, where terms are reasonable, and more than liberal to those of limited means, and where they are sure, if they conduct themselves properly, not only of encouragement from the faculty, but from the people of a good Christian neighborhood, will do well to consider Bethel Hill Institute and to write to its principal.

Yours fraternally, C. L. G.

Nixonton, June 8, 1893.

Let Him be Paid.

The time has come for preachers to quit working for nothing. A dedication sermon, a baccalaureate sermon, a literary address, costs something in time and labor, and should be paid for. "What are your expenses?" is very much like asking the officiating clergyman at a wedding "what do you charge?" The time past of our lives is sufficient to have wrought the will of the Gentiles in this kind of littleness. We know a man who laboriously prepared a baccalaureate sermon and delivered it. One of the trustees ascertained from him the net cost of the trip and handed him one dollar and two copper cents—the exact cost to a copper!—Holston Methodist.

Temperance puts wood on the fire, meal in the barrel, flour in the tub, money in the purse, credit in the country, contentment in the house, clothes on the back and vigor in the body.—Franklin.

The Queen and the Casket.

It is said that Queen Victoria once presented herself before the keeper of the Treasure Chamber in Windsor Castle with a request for the richer of the two small caskets in his custody, made each of one solid crystal, exquisite in workmanship and very costly. Selecting the richer and finer of the two she drew from her pocket a copy of the Bible and locked it in the casket, which was then returned to its place, richer than ever for the new treasure it contained.

The Bible stored in that shrine was General Gordon's. It had been his daily support and solace, and was with him at Khartum. It was worn and marked with the thousand notes of daily use and daily study, which indicated the relation of its hero-owner to it and what it had been to him.

We give the story as we have heard it. Treat it as we will, as parable or as history, it is a striking illustration of what gives supreme value to the Bible and of its true relation to men. It was not a new copy of the Scriptures, fresh, unsoiled and unused, that was thus royally set. It was not selected for the beauty of the binding, the richness of the material, or the excellence of the workmanship. It was chosen because it had once borne the relation it did to a heroic life. It had helped to create that life, to raise it high, to make it pure and strong, to fill it with faith and light and hope. The Queen's act was the commemoration of a great victory and a great service, the greatest service that can be rendered to a man in helping him to develop his character, to be what he is made to be, and to do what he is made to do. This is the place the Bible holds in the history of the nations which have loved it and lived by it. This is the place it is destined to hold in the life of the race redeemed. Redeemed and sanctified humanity is to be the crystal shrine of the well-used Bible, which will have have guided, supported and inspired it through the long years of its warfare.

This is the supreme usefulness and the supreme glory of the Bible. It will turn every life which is committed to its guidance into a victory.. It possesses for every man, in whatever condition, the art of defeating sin, of defying fate, and of realizing the divine plan of life. It may not solve all doubts; it may not clear away all perplexities; it may not tell us all we would like to know; it may be silent where we wish it would speak; and when it speaks it may not always be in a voice which has one meaning to all men or a meaning which is caught easily at first; but it shows men how to live and what to live for. It gives the sorely perplexed and baffled existence of ours its proper direction and its much needed support.

The best service to a man in this world is not to help him on with money, but to show him how to live, what to aim at and live for, what to find peace and satisfaction in, and so to lead him to that divine philosophy which is the heart of that life which God God means to be a blessing to every creature who shares in its mystery.

The Bible never yet failed to do this for every one who went to it for this service. It has provided a solid, hopeful, rational and inspiring theory of the world, of its origin, its government, its purpose, and of the inner aim and meaning of life. It has taught the supreme value of truth and righteousness. It has given a theory as to the awful mystery of sin and a practical solution of its dark problem in the thousand and ten thousand times ten thousand examples it is daily giving of holy lives trained amid sin and in spite of sin, upon whom sin appears to have no power except perhaps as it drives them back the more earnestly into the divine hope the Bible has set before them.

Paul speaks, as the lawyers say, ad rem when he defines the nature and the aim of inspiration in describing it to Timothy as "profitable," and then goes on to say for what it is profitable, "for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto all good works." This is a view of Scripture which transforms it into a friend sent to aid us in the perplexities and the responsibilities of life. It is a help in right living. For this end it provides the theory of what the right life is, the motives that support it, and correctives to bring our wandering lives back to the right line.

Amid all our clamorous vociferation for a Bible that is more than this, for a Bible that is less than this, for a Bible that is different from this, the well-worn Bible in the crystal shrine is the true and touching illustration that this is what it is.—The Independent.

We never have more than we can bear. The present hour we are always able to endure. As our day, so is our strength. If the trials of many years were gathered into one, they would overwhelm us; therefore, in pity to our little strength, he sends first one, then another, then removes both, and lays a third, heavier perhaps than either; but all is so wisely measured to our strength that the bruised reed is never broken. We do not enough look at our trials in this continuous and successive view. Each one is sent to teach us something, and altogether they have a lesson which is beyond the power of any to teach alone.—H. E. Manning.

An Advance Movement.

The Baptist denomination of this country never enjoyed a finer opportunity for making an advance movement than right now. It has a great lever of power in the printing press and the simple Word of God. Thousands of Bibles and Testaments must be given away if we would win the un-Christian masses to Christ. The only source of supply to the Baptist denomination is the American Baptist Publication Society, and the source of strength to the Society is the contributions of the denomination of the country.

Woman's Missionary Department.

President Woman's Central Committee of North Carolina, MISS FANNIE E. HECK, Raleigh, N. C.; Secretary, MRS. J. A. BRIGGS, Raleigh, N. C.

The Southern Baptist Convention at its late session in Nashville, Tenn., extended the time of the Centennial of Missions until the close of this year. The Centennial Record Book will also be kept open until that time. It is hoped that renewed efforts will be made for this work, and the Woman's Central Committee of Missions will gladly supply Centennial Missionary Literature, Centennial Chapel Cards, Centennial Day Programs, and Centennial Certificates, free. All who are already entitled to Centennial Certificates can obtain them at once on application. If after application the Certificates are not received within a reasonable time, please renew your application, as some loss may have occurred in the mails. Address Miss Fannie E. Heck, Pres. Woman's Central Committee of Missions, Raleigh, N. C.

Brazil.

All who have diligently studied Roman Catholicism in its own homes in Europe and America, recognize that wherever found it is a soul-destroying system. Wherever it has moulded a people and educated them, uninterfered with by any other religion, it has left them in the deepest ignorance of the way of salvation and in direst moral depravity. Cardinal Manning declared that it is either the church of Christ, or the master piece of Satan. So it is—the latter.

The Roman Catholic countries occupied by our Board are at once among the most destitute and the most promising of our fields. Their peoples are hungry for the gospel. They recognize their need of something which Romanism does not give them. They feel their guilt and ruin. Especially is this true of the Latin Republics of America and Cuba. Brazil and Mexico are both holding out longing hands to us and calling for the water of life. In those fields our cause has made rapid progress, and today they are white to the harvest.

Brazil appeals to us with special need and peculiar promise. It is the largest of South American countries, and is destined to play a vast part in the history of our race and hemisphere. Into its vast domain the thousands of Europe's crowded population are pouring. Its almost boundless interior is being pierced by railway lines in many directions, and immigration is fast filling its rich plains and valleys. Already 15,000,000 people make their home in that immense territory. Large cities border the coast line, and hundreds of towns are scattered over the interior.

The Brazilian people are descended from the first Portuguese settlers of the country, and are consequently of our own Caucasian race. They are a progressive, bright, attractive, social people. They readily understand and attentively listen to the gospel wherever it is preached. As found after three hundred and fifty years of Romanism's fatal reign, their moral and religious state is woeful indeed. The worship of images, the deification of the Virgin Mary, absurd and grovelling superstitions, and the ceremonial mummery of priestcraft, all take the place of the simple and spiritual religion of Jesus as found on the pages of the New Testament. They know nothing of Jesus as a living personal Saviour, nothing of heartfelt trust in him, nothing of the new birth. Immorality works widespread ruin to young and old. Priests and people alike live in vice and sin, and blindly serve fleshly lusts and passions. Yet when converted, and turned from idols to serve the living God, these people become noble and exemplary followers of the Saviour, and are truly "new creatures" in Christ Jesus.

Baptist mission work in Brazil began in the year 1881, when W. B. Bagby and wife arrived in that country and began preparing for active service among the people. Joined a year later by Z. C. Taylor and wife, they established themselves in Bahia, a city of 150,000 souls, and there with the help of Antonio Teixeira, a converted Brazilian, they began regular preaching, and organized a church. After some months of seed-sowing, the work was blessed to the conversion of several persons, and these became earnest helpers in giving the gospel to their fellow-countrymen. After a time, Rio Janeiro, the great national capital, and Maceio, a State capital, were occupied. Converts were baptized at these places and churches organized. The work has gone on until now six States have preaching stations in them, about five hundred converts have been won from Romish superstition to Christ, and twelve Brazilian and two foreign churches have been organized. A large number of tracts have been written and translated, and thousands of these, as well as Bibles and Testaments and gospels, circulated among the people. At present there are seven male and eight female Baptist missionaries in Brazil, assisted by a number of Brazilian evangelists and colporters.

The whole country is notably open to the gospel. Everywhere the people press to hear the news of salvation. The present republican government is most favorable to our cause, having separated Church and State three years ago, and now guaranteeing religious liberty and protection to all. God is blessing the labors of his people. The great needs of this field are new men and women to reinforce the mission at once, and several chapels, notably the one in Rio Janeiro, where our cause is greatly suffering for want of a house of worship.

The most earnest and constant prayers of God's people are asked for his blessing upon this most inviting mission field, where millions are perishing in sin, but where they are ready to receive the "glad tidings" wherever preached to them.—W. B. Bagby, Rio Janetro, Brazil.

The St. Louis Trade Review and Export Journal in its issue of February 7th, 1893, has this to say:

EDWARDS & BROUGHTON.

One of the leading enterprises of its character in the entire South is the extensive printing and binding establishment, owned and conducted by the firm of Edwards & Broughton, and located at the corner of Hargett and Salisbury streets, Raleigh, N. C. The gentlemen constituting this firm, Mr. C. B. Edwards and Mr. N. B. Broughton, are and have been for many years among Raleigh's prominent and substantial business men and citizens. Mr. Edwards is a native of North Carolina, having been born in Franklin county, and has made this city his home for the past quarter of a century, while Mr. Broughton, also a native of North Carolina, was born in Wake county, and has resided in Raleigh since 1858. They began their present co-partnership about twenty-two years ago. The plant is one of the finest in the South, equipped with the best of presses, etc., and with every improvement and convenience. They do a general printing business in all its branches, and carry in stock a fine line of stationery, letter heads, bill heads, statements, fine wedding stationery, etc., and at prices that no house can discount, quality considered. Catalogues, posters, circulars, etc., will be furnished upon the shortest possible notice. They also conduct a general binding business, manufacturing everything in the line of blank books. With their extraordinary facilities and employing only the best skilled workmen, they are enabled to produce a grade of goods that cannot be surpassed by the product of any firm in the country, no matter where located. Prices, etc., will be cheerfully furnished upon application either personally or by mail, and all orders will receive prompt and careful attention. They have a large trade from outside the city, and parties residing at surrounding points will save money and receive the very best of satisfaction by giving this firm the benefit of their patronage.

Spencer, and daughter of James L. and Fannie May Cobb, deceased, of Falkland, Pitt county, N. C., aged 37 years and 15 days. Mrs. Spencer was born at Falkland, N. C., May 16, 1856, graduated at Chowan Baptist Female Institute in 1873 at the age of seventeen, and shortly thereafter united with the Baptist church in Greenville, N. C. Her family were divided religiously, and she naturally hesitated about what church to unite with, but when she was convinced by the study of the Scriptures of the correctness of Baptist principles, she hesitated no longer, but rode ten miles in very cold weather to receive baptism at the hands of Rev. F. M. Jordan, who was then preaching in Greenville, N. C., the nearest Baptist church to her home. Her religious convictions grew stronger and stronger from the day of her baptism till the day of her peaceful death. While very young, she was united in marriage to Charles H. Spencer of South Mills, N. C. One who was most intimate with her says of her, "She had as strong religious convictions as any woman I ever knew. Her faith was unshaken, and her hope grew brighter to the end." She has left three motherless children, the youngest only ten months old, a husband, and many friends and relatives to mourn their loss. Her funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. R. R. Overby, her old pastor (in the absence of her present pastor, Dr. Blackwell) from the text, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." "She died asleep, and was only awakened by the footsteps of Jesus and the angels who came to carry her home." God bless your memory, my sister. N. B. C.

PITTMAN—The wisdom which we cannot fathom, and the love which we cannot doubt, has visited Buckhorn church, and the community, and taken from our sight two sisters whose like we shall not soon see. In our community Naomi and Janie Pittman were loved as children; here when they had passed from childhood to sweet and winning womanhood they were respected, honored, loved, for they richly deserved our respect, and we could not withhold our love. The death of these two sisters is a sore bereavement to a community where the memory of their beautiful lives is now cherished. Both of these sisters met death calmly, fearlessly, because of their hope in him who conquered death. Miss Naomi Pittman died while the earth was covered with snow, on January 22d, 1893. We laid her to rest in "God's Acre" at Buckhorn church, Hertford county, N. C. This was the church of her choice, and in its fellowship she had given about four years of her life to the service of her Lord. A purer spirit, a more loving disciple, a more constant and consistent life, in one so young, I have never known. Sprightly in mind and ardent in disposition, she gave to Christ from the beginning of her Christian life the powers of her mind and the warmth of her heart. At her death she was twenty-one years of age. Miss Janie Pittman was three years younger, and died seven weeks later. Though not a church member, she had for some months cherished a hope in Christ, and such a hope that her friends have no reason to doubt that she went to be with her sister and with Christ. The writer had several conversations with her during her illness, and cherishes the strongest hope that she is with God. Her greatest desire seemed to be to get well so that she might obey Christ by uniting with the church. Their only brother, their father and mother linger still in the home, much of whose brightness went out when the spirits of these sisters were taken up to God. C. W. S.

Tributes of Respect.

Lucy Turner Wright, aged sixty-four years, died at her home in Franklin county, N. C., on March 2d, 1893. She professed faith in Christ in 1851, and joined Brassfields church, of which she was a member nineteen years. In 1870, by letter, she joined Mt. Olivet church, of which she was a consistent member until her death.

Her first marriage was to Littleton Jeffreys, on Jan. 5th, 1846, and who died in 1878. Her second marriage was to James K. Wright, on April 6th, 1879. She was the grand-daughter of Rev. Zachariah Allen, one of the founders of Brassfields church, of which he was pastor for nineteen years. She was a self-sacrificing mother, a good neighbor, a kind and attentive friend to the afflicted, and always a cheerful giver to the needy. Truly her life was one of labor and love. To administer to the sick or relieve the distressed were two of her noted characteristics. She witnessed much suffering during life, and ministered at the death-beds of friends and loved ones. For years she prayed that in her last hours she might not linger long; so when she heard the sudden summons, "Child, your Father calls, come home," it was not unexpected nor unwelcome. She was ready to lay her armor down, to fellow her head on Jesus' breast, and to walk with him and the loved ones gone before her in that bright [illegible] It has pleased our Heavenly Father in his wisdom to take from this church Sister Lucy Wright, a most consistent member, therefore Resolved, By her death this church has sustained a loss.

Resolved, That to her husband and children we tender our sincere and heartfelt sympathy in this their great bereavement.

Resolved, That this church bow in humble acquiescence to the will of him who doeth all things well, and commend the bereaved ones to our common Lord who has promised never to forsake us.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep,
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes."

Sister Annie E. Harris, wife of Bro. F. D. Harris, died April 6th, 1893, aged thirty-one years. Sister Harris was a member of the M. E. Church for a long time, and joined Rock Spring Baptist church about one year and eight months before her death. She had been married only the short time of one year, three months and thirteen days. She leaves a husband, mother, (Mrs. Mary E. Norwood), seven brothers and sisters, to mourn her departure. Therefore be it Resolved 1. That we extend our deepest sympathy to her bereaved husband and family.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be furnished her husband and family, and that they be spread on our church book.

3. And that a copy be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

Done by order of the church April 30, 1893.

The Leaksville Woolen Mills, Leaksville N. C., need no introduction to the public in North Carolina and adjoining States. This is simply to remind you that they are still "in touch" with the people, working up their wool into various forms of finished product at satisfactory prices. A handsome catalogue containing samples of their new and attractive styles of Fancy Cassimeres and All-Wool Flannels, together with all other goods made by them, is sent to any address on application. Besides an interesting article on "Wool on How to Handle It," the catalogue contains full particulars in regard to shipping wool. If these details are carefully followed, we guarantee prompt return of goods.
Write to Hiram Foard, Sec'y, Leaksville, N. C., for catalogue, before disposing of your wool.
